So many complaints of irregular delivery have reached us, which we have traced to stolen papers, that we now offer $5 reward for information that will lead to the conviction of any person caught stealing The Tribune from the doorsteps of regular subscribers.

CITY NOTES.

The Marcy Male Quartette party gave a concert at Young Men's Christian association hall last night.

The will of George A. Homan, late of this city, was admitted to probate yesterday by Register of Willis Hopkins.

John Salmon entered bail yesterday in the sum of $1,000 to answer a charge of robbery at court. John Salmon became security for him.

Miss Tolles, secretary of the Young Women's Christian association, arranged an informal social, which was well attended at the association room last evening by a large number of young ladies.

James Wilson was drunk, acted queer, wanted to fight and threatened suicide Monday night while applying for lodging in the central police station. He paid a fine of $3 in yesterday's police court.

There will be a union meeting and Christian Endeavor rally at the Second Presbyterian church this evening. The Young Men's Christian association glee club, under the direction of Tallie Morgan, will furnish the music.

In police court yesterday Alonzo Cobb, a street car conductor, paid a fine of $5 and $5 for damages made in kicking open the door of the house occupied by Mrs. Miner Johnson, on North Main avenue, yesterday morning at 1:30 o'clock.

The library of J. J. Wymbs, located on Forest court, in the rear of Powell's music store, has been purchased by Walter E. Pratt. Mr. Pratt was the manager of Goodwin's Spruce street livery until it was purchased recently by L. T. Payne.

The fixtures and effects of the Carpenter House, at Franklin avenue and Spruce street, were sold yesterday by the sheriff. Judge H. M. Edwards and Reese G. Brooks, executors of the estate of John Noskes, owner of the building, became purchasers for the estate. The price paid was $95.50.

John Sekelak, of Peckville, was lodged in the county jail yesterday on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Arnold upon a charge of aggravated assault and battery committed upon Joseph Poole. The affray occurred on Monday and Sekelak is reported to have cut Poole seriously with a knife.

M. Z. Keller, the wagon builder, has had his name forged to a number of checks for small amounts which were presented and accepted in several retail stores by Edward Mason, who has eluded arrest. Each check was drawn for a small sum, Mason receiving in cash the difference between the amount of the purchase and the face value of the check.

Two men who refuse to give their names are locked in the central police station on suspicion. They were seen to hide a box in a ash dump near the gas works yesterday afternoon. Some one dug up the box and it contained $34 in postage stamps. The police were notified and the men were taken to the station at 4 o'clock they were by Patrolman Moir and

MRS. TORREY'S RECEPTION.

Given in Honor of Her Guests, Miss Williams and Miss Adams.

Mrs. James H. Torrey gave a reception yesterday afternoon at her home on Jefferson avenue, in honor of her guests, Miss Williams and Miss Adams. The house was prettily decorated with ferns and potted plants, and the tables were beautified by a liberal use of carnations and cardinal ribbon, the distinctive color of Wells college.

Mrs. Torrey was assisted in receiving by Mrs. E. B. Jernyn, Mrs. John Wentz, Mrs. H. A. Connell, Mrs. G. F. Barnard and Misses Kingsbury, Archibald, Jessup and Albino.

Among the guests were: George S. Jessup, Sanderson, Hull, Sturges, Clarence Sturges, Gillespie, Spahn, Frey, Close, Archibald, Gearhart, James Gearhart, Blair, Davis, Walker, J. D. PENNY CLUB'S ENTERPRISE.

Are Conducting a Sale in the Garney & Brown Building.

A "Fancy Fair" was opened at the Garney, Brown & Co.'s buildings on the corner of Adams avenue and Linden street, yesterday afternoon, by the members of the Penny club, which has been organized in connection with St. Luke's Sunday school, and who are devoting the proceeds to the funds of the Ephratha guild—a society of deaf mutes.

Five large tables are loaded with the handwork of the little ones, who have met weekly during the winter and have worked industriously with the object of holding the Easter sale.

The tables are arranged around the room in the following order: Fancy paper work—banquet lamps, ice cream cases, flowers, photograph frames, etc. Fancy work—baskets, cushions, table spreads, tea baskets and afghans, candy, doll table, and a large stock of miscellaneous articles on the fifth table. The little workers who comprise the society and have charge of the tables are: Emma Vall, Helen Wilcox, Margery Warren, Dorothy Bessell, Marion Smith, Beatrice Morris, Louise Davenport, Gertrude B. Smith, Helen Davies, Margery Davies, Clarence Osland and Meta Roderick, Sam Wood, Harold Norton, Roswell McMullen, George Sanction, Howard Yost, James Matteson, Ross Sordam and Jesse Roderick.

The little ones will present this afternoon and this evening to continue the sale of the goods.

SCRANTON THE PLACE IN '96.

Christian Endeavorers Working to Bring the Convention Here.

A regular meeting of the executive committee of the Christian Endeavor union was held at the Young Men's Christian association rooms last night. C. E. Daniels presided and submitted a report of the work of the '96 committee, stating that each society in the union would be visited in the course of the next few weeks to advance the interest of Scranton for the convention of 1896.

F. M. Bouton read an entertaining paper entitled "Come and Go," which was afterwards discussed by the meeting. Mr. Whitlock gave a practical address on Christian Endeavor work among sailors, and it was decided that an invitation be extended to the president of the Naval Christian Endeavor society to deliver a public address in this city.

Miss Williams, delegate, was instructed to extend the greetings of the union to the Keystone union convention, to be held at Factoryville, April 28.

LAST ASSEMBLY OF SEASON.

It Was Given in the Bicycle Club House.

The closing assembly of the season was enjoyed by many dancers last night in the Scranton Bicycle club house. The chaperones were Mrs. H. W. Kingsbury, Mrs. R. M. Scranton, and Mrs. Everett Warren.

Those present included many young ladies and men from school and their visiting classmates.

COMPERS CALLED DOWN

Meeting He Was Addressing Broke Up in Disorder.

CHARGE MADE AGAINST HIM

It Is Stated That Opposition to the Knights of Labor Has Led to the Trouble with Hackett, Carhart and Company of New York.

The stormiest ward caucus the city has ever known or even the liveliest meeting of the departed, but not forgotten Pittston borough council, could not take rank with the finale of the lecture delivered last night at the hall over Samter's clothing store, by Samuel Compers, of New York, ex-president of the American Federation of Labor. An audience of about 250 men, young and old, comprising principally members of the local trades unions of Scranton, was present to hear Mr. Compers. But there were quite a number of clothing clerks and representatives of clothing stores also on hand. It was given out that Mr. Compers had come to arouse enthusiasm among the unions of Scranton, but the real purpose of his visit was not down on the bills.

President James Roach, of the Central Labor union, called the assemblage to order and briefly introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Compers. He possessed more of the talent of the actor than the magnetism and fire of an orator, but he held the close attention of his hearers, and at times thrilled them with his flights of eloquence. He branched out first in general remarks on the labor question and referred in chapters to shorter hours of labor, strikes and arbitration.

Is Opposed to Strikes.

He delivered a really brilliant and logical address on these topics. He discontemned strikes and said he favored arbitration under certain conditions. It would not do for a lion and a lamb to go arbitrating, because the lion would make up the next morning on the outside of the cage. He explained when she has any difference with Afghanistan or Morocco, will proceed promptly to bombard these nations, but when a difference arises with the United States, England will say let us get together and talk the matter over. Arbitration, he said, will not solve the question until there is organization. Experience shows that the man who would be free must be the one to strike the blow.

All of this talk on arbitration and organization led up to the introduction of a reference to the "task system" and "tenement sweating system," now in vogue among manufacturers of clothing in New York City. Mr. Compers told his hearers that the way to benefit one another is to refuse to buy articles of clothing from merchants who buy their goods from New York sweat shops. No firm in the United States, Mr. Compers said, antagonizes the garment workers as does the house of Hackett, Carhart & Co. The way to strike a blow at this firm is to refuse to patronize the home merchants who buy their goods of Hackett, Carhart & Co.

Chairman Roach's Pointed Remarks.

Chairman Roach stood up and told Mr. Compers that the firm of Hackett, Carhart & Co. does not discriminate against a man no matter what organization he belongs to, whether it be the Knights of Labor or the American Federation of Labor, and that that seemed to be the greatest trouble now. The movement against Hackett, Carhart & Co., Mr. Roach said, was an attempt to deny the employees of that firm the right to join the Knights of Labor.

The meeting at this period got to the boiling point and Mr. Compers was, by turns, hissed and cheered to the echo. A good deal of wrangling was indulged in by those in the audience, but before the confusion became general Henry J. Collins, of the firm of Collins & Hackett, arose and told Mr. Compers he would pay the expenses of any three gentlemen in the audience who would like to go down to New York and investigate the charges against Hackett & Co. Mr. Collins told Compers that the diamonds he sported were not in keeping with his declaration as a friend of the laboring man.

John Trench, of the committee of Scranton Division of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, that went to New York to inquire about the shops of Hackett, Carhart & Co., arose to explain, but Mr. Compers would not hear him.

The meeting broke up in general confusion, but as those present were determined to extend the evening's talk and told the escaping audience that there will be a meeting at the same hall on next Tuesday night, and T. V. Powderly, ex-general master workman of the Knights of Labor, will be present and deliver an address.

ANOTHER SILK FACTORY.

Arrangements for Its Location Here Have Been Completed.

Between William Connell and business representatives of James Simpson & Co., silk manufacturers, of Newark, N. J., the papers that concluded the arrangements for the transfer of six acres of land along Cedar avenue, in the Twentieth ward, for the site of the proposed new silk factory, was yesterday afternoon made, and the work of constructing the plant will be pushed forward right away and is promised to be finished and ready for operation at the end of three months.

This firm was attracted to Scranton by the favorable advantages offered in the shape of cheap fuel, and the good field for an industry of that kind; in fact the Electric City has become prominently known as a manufacturing center of silk trade. The stability of Simpson & Co.'s business enterprise was so founded that Mr. Connell has been favorably impressed from the beginning by their overtures, and he offered them a site of six acres in the Twentieth ward, which was accepted. The location fronts on Cedar avenue, and is directly opposite the switch on the street car line, at short distance below where Anthracite street intersects Cedar avenue.

The contract for building the factory, which is to be a one story brick structure, 150 feet square, will be let at once, and it is promised that the machinery will be in operation in three months. It is estimated that between 500 and 600 hands will be employed.

DEATH OF DAVID L. PATRICK.

Father of Horatio N. Patrick, of This City.

David L. Patrick, one of the most prominent lawyers of the Luzerne county bar, died yesterday at Wilkes-Barre, aged 69 years. He was born in Farmer's Mills, Dutchess county, N. Y. The deceased went to Wilkes-Barre in 1847 and was admitted to the bar in 1850. In 1856 he was elected clerk of the courts, serving three years. In 1859 he was nominated and elected to the office of prothonotary, and in 1868 he was chosen burgess and served a full term. He leaves five children, three sons and two daughters. Horatio N. Patrick, the eldest son, resides in this city and is a member of the Lackawanna county bar.

FRIEND FRITZ AGAIN.

It Attracts to the Academy the Largest Audience of the Season.

The Academy could not easily have held another person last evening, so large was the audience which greeted Marion Manola and John Mason in their second presentation of the exquisite pastoral play, "Friend Fritz." The play, since its original enactment here, has been modified by the dropping of one pretty lyric, "The Legend of Chasteline," which is replaced with a modernized happy solo for Mr. Mason; and by the inclusion, in the third act, of two new songs, one sung by Miss Manola and the other, a "topical," by Lindsay Morrison, the puritanic looking Hancoz of the original cast. These changes do not improve the general effect. They slightly mar it.

The other noticeable change was in the substitution of Justin Adams for Robert McWade as the mischievous match-making rabbi. Mr. Adams gives a satisfactory impersonation of the important role, but misses, at times, the superb mellowness and fine finish of his gifted predecessor. Both Mr. Mason and Miss Manola, he holds, but they acted superbly, sang well and received, throughout the evening, most cordial evidences of local appreciation. Indeed, in point of thorough enjoyableness, reaching throughout the audience from gallery sovereigns to swifdrom in the pit, "Friend Fritz" must be ranked as the distinct single success of the season.

WISSWAESSER BACK AGAIN

Asks the Lackawanna Presbytery to Condone His Conduct.

WANTS TO RETURN TO PULPIT

Has Been Working as an Engineer in Chicago—Was Like the Sparrow on the Housetop When He Left His Congregation.

Just as unexpectedly as he disappeared about twenty months ago, C. L. Wisswaesser, who left his charge as pastor of the Hickory Street Presbyterian church, South Side, without any warning, returned to his wife and family at an early hour yesterday morning.

His appearance would convey the impression that he had, as Mark Twain would say, been roughing it.

Mr. Wisswaesser's career as minister of the aforementioned church, before he left so unceremoniously, was beset with many trials and tribulations, but from all accounts, he was the architect of his own misfortune. The first time his conduct underwent the gossip of the community was when he displayed too much fondness for the billiard parlors of the central city. No one doubted his genius and it was conceded by his bitterest enemy that he was a man of brains.

His Actions Caused Talk.

His actions were the talk of the congregation, when suddenly he left without warning, and it was also suggested that a wife of one of his parishioners went with him. The woman returned to her home and denied that she had left with Wisswaesser. She is now living with her husband and family in Green Ridge.

Many times since his abrupt departure it has been rumored that Wisswaesser was home; but his wife and family denied all these stories as quickly as they sprang up. She lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Pfeiffer, of Hickory street, and even said that Wisswaesser not only had not returned, but that he had not written to or contributed to her support one cent since his leaving.

The gentleman was seen at his home last night by a Tribune reporter and was not averse to discussing the situation. He professed to be sorry for his actions and intends to lead a better life in future. He has asked the Lackawanna presbytery to condone his misdeeds and restore him to the pulpit and declares himself to be fully repentant.

Like the Sparrow on the Housetop.

His soul was sorrowful and he was like the sparrow on the housetop, he said, when he left his congregation, and the clouds were so dark and no rift of brightness was apparent in the gloomy future. He is sorry for not having relied upon his brethren in the ministry and sought spiritual consolation. He spent the most of his time while away in Chicago and worked there as an engineer for the eight months prior to his resignation in coming back.

He intends to live down his past and think only of the future, trusting in God and doing the right. His personal appearance did not undergo any change since he left the city.
