It Places Mrs. Nicotera in a Very Bad Light.

HER LOVER IS THE MURDERER

That Is What the Attorneys for Leonardo Rosa Are Endeavoring to Make the Jury Believe-Closing Testimony in the Case.

The closing testimony in the case wherein Leonardo Rosa is charged with before Judge Edwards yesterday morning, and the afternoon was devoted to listening to arguments for the defense. Attorney J. J. H. Hamilton spoke first and was followed by ex-Judge Ward, Mrs. Nolan's insurance of $2,500 on her | who was still speaking when court adbuildings and $700 of insurance held by Journed at 5 o'clock. He will resume this morning and be followed by District Attorney John R. Jones, who will The community is excited over the deliver the closing argument on the part of the commonwealth.

In their closing addresses the attorneys for the defense set up the theory that Lauisso was murdered not by Rosa but by a man with whom Mrs. Nicotera had been intimate. They allege that on the night of the murder when Mrs. Nicotern sat up after the departure of the visitors who called upon herself and husband, she did not refrain from returning to bed with her leige lord on at the Academy of Music all of next says, but that she might entertain her week in a repertoire of popular comic lover after her husband had gone to Following Up the Theory.

Then, the eloquent gentlemen assert in carrying out their theory, after Mr. Nicotera was sleeping the sleep of the just his wife admitted her visitor and while entertaining him was discovered by Lauisso, (who boarded with the and Tariar," the audience manifesting their delight frequently. The costumes carousal with Rosa and the other Itallans. Lauisso, not desiring to enter then, walked away and was followed by Mrs. Nicoterns lover who killed Lauisso that his lips might be forever sealed W. Smith, as the sultan, has a tenor to what he had learned and the injured husband thus kept in Ignorance of that thur Seaton, pleasing baritone, did well night's events. Mr. Hamilton and ex-Judge Ward argued in an ingenious way to support this theory and said that it was the only ground on which Mrs. Nicotera's apparently feverish desire to have Rosa convicted could be accounted for. After court opened at 9 o'clock yesterday morning Leonardo Rosa, the acand denied that the book spoken about by Mrs. Corbo in her testimony contained an account against the dead man of money owed to witness. On crossexamination Rosa denied that he told County Detective Leyshon and Charles E. Daniels, after his arrest, that he threw away his revolver before his ar-Rosa said that when Lauisso left Corbo's house early on the morning of February 27, he only went as far as the steps outside the house with him. Identified the Book.

Mrs. Cornelia Corbo identified the book she gave Rosa as the one produced in court, and then Mrs. Marie Nicotera was recalled for further cross-examination and swore that the book produced in court was not the one in which Rosa kept his account against Lauisso. She saw the book when Rosa put it in his pocket and remembered it distinctly.

Major Montrose Barnard was called Messrs. Rosa at the coroner's inquest, was called and testified to several points in which Mrs. Nicotera's testimony at that time does not agree with her testimony now. Joseph Cassesse, the intepreter at the coroner's inquest, also testified to discrepancies in the two stories of the

Her Different Stories.

On the present trial she said she saw

Rosa having Laulsso by the neck and dragging him along, and a few minutes later she heard pistol shots. It was shown that there was no moon that night and that it was not possible for her to have seen what she said. Mr. Cassesse swore that at the coroner's inquest Mrs. Nicotera said that she was heard the voices of three persons, Leo-avenue nardo Rosa, Joseph Rosa and Vito Lauisso. She heard their voices but did not see them, for she did not look outside. The defendant rested with the right to call Miss Abbie Watrous and Thomas J. Price was called by the commonwealth in rebuttal. He is deputy warden at the county jail and searched Agli when he was received there, and is sure the detective did not carry any whiskey with him to his cell. Frank Agli was recalled and denied that he took any liquor to his cell or treated Rosa with it. Ex-Judge Ward tried to prove by the witness that he cannot talk Italian, but the question was ruled out. County Detective Thomas Leyshon said that Rosa told him in the Dunmore lockup that he had no revolver for four or five days before the murder, that he threw it away. Mr. Leyshon also stated that there is an electric light near Nicotera's house, and that no one would have any trouble in seeing there at night whether the moon was out or not. Charles E. Daniels corroborated Mr. Leyshon's testimony as to the statement made by Rosa.

Threw the Revolver Away. Vincenzo Vicarro swore that Rosa told him the night after the murder that he threw his revolver away. Mrs. Nicotera was again called to testify to the condition of the fence about her property and then the commonwealth rested. In surrebuttal Attorney J. G. Mc-Askie was examined as to the condition of the fence about Nicotera's place. Francis O'Hara was examined on the same subject, and that closed the testimony in the case.

At 1.30 Attorney J. J. H. Hamilton began the first address to the jury for the defense. It was Mr. Hamilton's first effort before a jury in this county and was followed with close attention. It was a logical address, in which Mr. Hamilton labored by reasoning rather than eloquence to convince the jury of the innocence of his client. The detective. Frank Agli, he referred to as a perfect type of the Judias Iscariot. His story about the alleged confession,

Mr. Hamilton said, was concocted for the purpose of gaining the reward such a service would entitle him to. Mr Hamilton then with rare elevernes reviewed the testimony of Leopold Nicotera and his wife, with whom Lauisso boarded, and sought to carry out the theory outlined above. He felt that the jury would not convict the ac cused on such a weak chain of circumstantial evidence, as in his opinion the commonwealth had presented, bolstered by what he believed to be per-fured testimony. Ex-Judge Word's Remarks. Mr. Hamilton finished at 3.45 and ex Judge Ward began the closing address to the jury for the defense. He impressed upon the jurors the necessity of carefully considering the case and said it would be better for them to err on the side of mercy than to convict an innocent man, for it is the law of God and law of man that it were better that ninety-nine guilty men go free than that one innocent man should be convicted and his tamp of life extinguished to vindicate a law he had never broken. The matter of a reasonabl doubt was dwelt upon at length and Judge Ward said that if there was a dozen theories pointing to the guilt of a prisoner and but a solitary one leading to the conclusion of innocence, the jury would be forced to accept the theory pointing to innocence. He ex-coriated Agil, whom he termed a 'thing," a "wretch" and seeker of blood money. He said it was not the duty of the prosecuting officers of the county employ a reptile, arm him with bottle of whiskey and then send him into the cell of a suspected man for the purpose of extorting a confession. was the duty of the officers of the county to ferret out crime in a manly, honest fashion without recourse to such reprehensible methods. Judge Ward then advanced the theory that Mrs. Nicotera knew the person that slew Laulsso, and to protect the real mur-derer is trying to fasten the crime on Rosa. He said that the evidence would indicate that Mrs. Nicotera, instead of sitting up on the night of the murder to sew as she said she did, was entertaining a lover, while her husband slept, and Lauisso, when he returned home finding the intruder, went out of the houes again and was followed by Mrs Nicotera's caller, who killed him that he might never be able to tell Nicotera of what he knew. Ex-Judge Ward had not completed his argument at 5 o'clock, when court adjourned.

Important Insurance Case, Before Judge Archbald the case of the Clearing House Insurance company, of St. Paul, Minn., against L. P. Williams, of Scranton, was put on trial. The defendant is charged with having committed forgery, Attorneys John P. Kelley and M. W. Lowry prosecuted the case and Attorneys E. C. Newcomb, J. Elliot Ross and E. H. Shurtleff conwith forging an insurance application which he procured a policy on the life of his son, Louis H. Williams, who has since died.

MISS DICKINSON ON

She Lectures in the Prothinghan on Joan of Arc.

MASTERFUL AND BRILLIANT

Whatever May Have Been Her Condition Once, She Is a Very Gifted Woman. With Elegance and Rare Command of Language She Tells the Story. Anna E. Dickinson, than whom there has been no woman more discussed, in the Eastern States at least, during the last few weeks, lectured upon the life of Joan of Arc before a fair sized and select audience in the Frothingham theater last night. Ten days ago the jury disagreed in Miss Dickinson's suit to recover $50,000 damages for being confined for five weeks, in 1891, in the State Hospital for the Insane, at Danville. The trial was sensational in the extreme and during its progress the plaintiff's present state of mind was variously commented upon by hundreds of persons who were fortunate enough to gain admittance to the overcrowded court room. When the announcement was made that she would deliver last night's lecture, a report was widely circulated, and gained considerable credence, that she would attack the attorneys of the defendants n the suit, the defendants themselves and many of their witnesses.

Whoever may have gone to the Frothingham expecting to hear the report verified, were disappointed. They simply heard a wonderful story, won derfully told by a famous woman of the age, and who painted the sainted life of Joan of Arc with the masterful and artistic finish of a true artist. To those who knew Miss Dickinson only through her court notoriety or from hearsay the lecture was a revelation. Her manner, her language and her deep conception of her subject combined to stam her undisputably as an unusually gift-

At the beginning she spoke slowly and with an almost imperceptible tremor, and although her language and expression were unwavering, her gestures were studied and made with great effort. Later, however, there was no suspicion of a strain. She soon began to talk more fluently and at once had the sympathy of her auditory. Her gesticulation throughout smacked somewhat of the stage, but it was lost sight of in her masterful and comprehensive narration of the beautiful story of the life and character of Joan of Arc. It was only once that her hearers could have suspected that she made reference to her recent litigation, Concerning Joan's successful point in inlucing Charles VII to be crowned in the cathedral at Rheims, Miss Dickinson remarked that the one great wish of Joan had been gratified.
