The question the people here are unable to answer is "Why does the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company keep the old depot in existence so long?" This company is noted for its readiness to adopt any system which will best serve the public good, but this seems to be an exception to the rule.

INQUEST IN THE SARTIN CASE

Verdict of the Coroner's Jury—Death of a Former Resident—Caught by Falling Rock—An Insane Man at Large—Other News Notes.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Pittston, April 23.—The many friends of Dr. E. M. Miller, formerly of this place, will regret to learn of the sad news of his death, which was received here this afternoon. A year or so ago Dr. Miller left here for Noyon, Pa., where he attained a large and very successful practice, until he was taken ill some months since. In hopes of regaining his health he was removed to Hahnemann hospital, at Philadelphia, where he remained until about three weeks ago, when he was removed to the home of his father in Indianapolis, Ind., where his death occurred.

Inquest in the Sartin case. A coroner's inquest in the case of John Sartin, who was murdered by an unknown assassin near Yatesville, was held this morning at the office of Squire Fairclough, who, in the absence of the coroner, conducted the case. The jury was as follows: James Jones, foreman; Francis Yates, Liall Brown, Michael Norton, Charles Hale, Jasper Pierson. The first witness sworn was Miss Katie McDermott, the young lady from Brownstown, who was with Sartin when the shooting took place. Her testimony was in the main as herebefore given in the columns of The Tribune. Several other witnesses were examined, including John Segar, the Hungarian who passed Miss McDermott and Sartin on the evening of the murder. All that could be elicited from John was that he went out for a call of books that night and heard a shot, after he got into his yard. He didn't see the couple, nor the dog. The jury rendered a verdict as follows: "We find that John Sartin came to his death on Saturday, April 20, 1895, from the effects of a gun shot, inflicted upon the said John Sartin on the evening of Thursday, April 18, 1895, by some person whose identity is to the said jury unknown."

William Mostroick, 33 years old, single, residing on Union street, and Stanley Stroplek, 20 years old, residing at Durysa, miners at the Twin shaft, were instantly killed by a fall of rock this morning at 10 o'clock. They had fired a shot, which blew down the props, and they were sitting in the road, preparatory to re-standing the props, when the rock fell. Their bodies were horribly mangled.
