POLICE CIRCLES STIRRED

All on Account of a Little West Side Incident.

A PATROLMAN IS DISTURBED

Permitted Two Young Men to Make an Arrest and the Tribune Told the Story. Chief Simpson Ordered an Investigation—Testimony Taken.

A stir has been created in police circles over a story which appeared Monday's Tribune in the West Side column. The matter resulted in an investigation under the direction of Chief of Police Simpson yesterday and the taking of testimony in the matter.

One night last week Jonathan Harris and Evan Jones, two young West Siders, met Mrs. Reuben Brown running excitedly on South Main avenue. She asked if the young men had seen a policeman. Upon being answered in the negative she told them that her husband was ill and that a suspicious character was prowling around the houses on Elm street.

Without more ado the two young men armed with a club and a cobbler's stone accompanied Mrs. Brown home and found a tramp in the cellar. They ordered him to hold up his hands and with their prisoner between them started toward the police station. On Main avenue Patrolman Matthews stepped from the doorway of D. Evans store and believed the young men of their prisoner. And then occurred the episode which led to yesterday's taking of testimony. Patrolman Matthews interrupted the young men in their march toward the station by telling them that he had overheard their conversation with Mrs. Brown and had been waiting to see what the result would be.

SHE WANTED TO FIGHT.

Mrs. Noone Resents Arrest for Stealing from a North End Clothier and Wanted to Fight Mrs. Watkins for Side Stakes of Any Amount.

The North End has had many family differences patched up in alderman's court, but yesterday Alderman Roberts was called upon to act as peace-maker between two women who were unable to adjudicate, and which furnished ludicrous amusement for many spectators.

Mrs. George Noone, of Clark street, a chronic police court character, was being steered along on a charge preferred by Mrs. W. D. Watkins, of Market street. Mrs. Noone, it was claimed, had surreptitiously hypothecated the contents of the plaintiff's clothesline, as long ago as last December.

A few days ago Mrs. Watkins' children told her that they had seen some of their clothes worn by some children. The mother got a sharp lookout until last Saturday morning, when she saw one of her boy's waists on the back of a strange youngster. She followed him home, for the purpose of obtaining the garment, when she found that the boy's parents, who are in modest circumstances, had been given the clothes by Mrs. Noone. On stating her errand to Mrs. Noone a wordy quarrel arose. Mrs. Noone cut the clothes into fragments with a large knife, and at the trial yesterday claimed that she was very sorry for that she had not given Mrs. Watkins two black eyes.

The accused woman proved to be a regular virago and could not be kept quiet. She was committed to the county jail and while being taken there by Constable Davis created much excitement by her resistance. Later in the evening she was released on $200 bail, her brother, Patrick McGraw, becoming her surety. She was recently released from imprisonment for stealing a goose from Pierce's market on Penn avenue, and but a short while ago had scalded her first husband, Dennis Munnely, during a family quarrel. During yesterday's hearing she several times challenged Mrs. Watkins to a fight for a purse of from $25 to $1,000 a side.

Complete arrangements are being made for the Cleveland convention, which promises to be one of unusual success. Excursions, banquets and entertainments have been arranged.

COBB VERSUS COBB.

Charley Wants a Legal Separation from His Wife.

Before the altar on Oct. 28, 1888, in the city of Dunmore, Rev. M. C. A. Hall performed the ceremony that united two loving hearts, those of Charles A. and Angie H. Cobb.

They retired to Scott township and lived like two white-winged angels. They later moved to Conklin, N. Y., and came back to this state again, settling in Benton township. But these migrations affected Charley with a desire to roam and when Charley refused to move some more she deserted him on Feb. 15, 1892.

His attorneys filed a libel in divorce in the office of Prothonotary Pryor yesterday.

ADDRESSED THE HEBREWS.

Many Listened to Rev. A. C. Gaebelein in Finley's Hall.

A large number of Hebrews filled Finley's hall on Lackawanna avenue last evening to hear an address from Rev. A. C. Gaebelein of New York, on the subject, "Who is the Messiah?" The address was delivered in the German language and at the close the speaker was overwhelmed with questions dealing mostly with the miraculous birth of Christ, and why Christ did not restore Israel and the peace of Jerusalem.

At the close of the service, tracts and Christian literature was accepted by the audience, and the majority gave their names and addresses to Mr. Gaebelein with the request that he would send more literature.

MR. HOGAN'S REVOLVER.

He is Arrested for Pointing It at Jeweler Ackerman.

P. P. Hogan, the North End Jeweler, entered $300 bail before Alderman Filles last night to appear before him next Thursday afternoon and be tried for pointing a revolver at Mr. Ackerman, the wholesale Jeweler.

For some time Mr. Hogan has not been at peace with his father-in-law, Patrick Welles, who is his security in his business relations with Mr. Ackerman. The father-in-law concluded to withdraw his security, so yesterday he notified Mr. Ackerman to take away the revolver, but Hogan was unable to being forced out of business, and ordered Mr. Ackerman out of the building, and is charged with pointing the weapon.

SOCIETY WANTS A HOME

Talk of Club House and Grounds on the Hill.

ON THE COUNTRY CLUB PLAN

Project Started from a Society Woman's Suggestion and Now Engages the Attention of Many—Another Scheme for a Business Men's Club.

Scranton's leading social circle, including the younger people and married folk, and the city's best-known business men are agitated with two propositions of considerable magnitude.

One is the idea of abandoning the old Lawn club and forming an organization on the "lawn and racket" or "country club" plan and acquiring a roomy club house and grounds on the hill. This is the project that is being urged only in the light of a purely social club; but the business men are interested in forming a business men's club and engaging quarters in the commercial section of the city, where they may be accommodated and entertain business friends from abroad.

Neither proposition has yet met with such great consideration as will lead to a definite move, but in each case the subject, which was first talked lightly among a few, has become public property. Many are interested and it is not improbable that one of the schemes may be brought to a definite issue.

Mr. W. W. Scranton some weeks ago suggested to one of the best-known and one of the most popular society girls of the city that possibly the residential property at the corner of Monroe avenue and Linden street might be available for a society club house. The matter was only mentioned in a general way and in casual conversation, but when the attention of others was engaged, the feasibility of the scheme caused considerable discussion. It was given special attention in view of the prospective tearing up of the Lawn club's courts to make way for the approach to the new South side bridge from Spruce street.

While nothing tangible has resulted it is safe to predict that if the Lawn club goes out of existence another club, of which the subject has been mentioned, will be formed. Whether the house and grounds scheme will engage such determined action as to lead to either a negative or affirmative decision is of course a question.

Goodly property to have the club include both young and old, and indoor and outdoor functions. Whatever the decision may be there is felt a positive want for an exclusive building where business men and women could meet on a restrictive or semi-private character can be given. A case in point was the recent presence in Scranton of Mrs. Hastings, whose introduction to the city's representative people had to be made in a hotel.

Another scheme in view.

The Monroe avenue property is not the only medium considered with a view of bringing the matter to an issue. A country club house along the Elm street, near the corner of a home in the vicinity of Nay Aug park is mentioned among the possibilities.

J. C. Miller, who is about to build a two-story building on Spruce street, has been approached by several influential business men and a hint given that he will include in his plans an arrangement for model club apartments on the two upper floors, a business men's club will be formed to occupy them. Mr. Miller had considered the advisability of a restaurant and roof garden for the two floors mentioned, but since the club project was brought to his attention he has decided to forego the restaurant and roof garden, and to take action in the matter.

BONDS ARE ISSUED.

Lackawanna Township School District Bonds $12,000.

It is no wonder the residents of Milnooka wanted to get that town annexed to the city of Scranton, considering the fact that Lackawanna township taxpayers will for the next five years be compelled to shoulder per annum the heavy burden of almost $3,000 in addition to the regular school tax, to pay for the palatial school building. The directors last summer let the contract for the Milnooka school and decided to float $12,000 bonds to pay for the building. Attorneys Taylor &
