Every soldier of Pennsylvania must become a marksman, for no soldier is effective unless he is able to qualify. Every man who has never qualified will be required to shout at the three ranges, 100, 20 and 500 yards, and will be allowed five shots in one entry at each range. For qualifying, five con secutive shots are allowed at 200 yards and five at 500 yards. Re-entries are allowed until a score of twenty-five is made. When a score of twenty-five or more is once made, the shooter is qualified for the year. If it be under fortyfive he is a marksman; if forty-five or more, then he is a sharpshooter.
