Plaintiff Claims the Bank Is Still Indebted to Him in the Sum of $1,200 and He Does Not Propose to Be Barred by Statute.

The failure of the Scranton City bank on May 25, 1889, which created such a tremendous sensation in business circles at the time, is recalled by an action in trespass brought yesterday against Dr. B. H. Throop, G. A. Jessup, Charles Tropp, Edward Merrifield, Morris Goldsmith, Victor Koch and Henry Armbrust, directors of the defunct bank. The plaintiff is Attorney A. D. Dean, who sues to recover lamages for injuries and losses he sustained by reason of what he alleges to be negligent actions upon their part in the management of the bank.

Gunster was appointed assignee and under his management of the property and assets of the institution 90 per ent, of its obligations have been paid He has now on hand, it is said, about $12,000 to meet the outstanding debt of about $20,000. Eventually it is probable that the bank will pay dollar for dollar. but it is not likely that the remaining 10 per cent, will be paid to the depositors for some time.

Statute of Limitation. On Saturday it will be six years since the bank failed and after that date the the church while the regular choir will statute of limitations will bar recovery from the directors if suit is not begun before that day, Mr. Dean had $7,000 deposited in the bank on the day it closed its doors and he says that with principal and interest it is still indebted to hm in the sum of $1,200, which he proposes to collect, if possible.

Last Saturday he served written no tice on the directors that he would begin an action at once if his claim was not paid. He received no answer and vesterday's suit followed. He is represented by Attorney H. M. Hannah.
