"Printers' Ink," the recognized journal for advertising, is published weekly at Scranton, Pa., at the best advertising rates in the Northeastern States.

SCRANTON, MAY 28, 1895.

"The American people, from tradition and interest, favor a Republican government, and the Republican party demands the use of BOTH GOLD AND SILVER AS STANDARD MONEY, with such restrictions and under such provisions, to be determined by legislation, as will secure the maintenance of the parity of values of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gold or paper, shall be at all times equal."—Republican National platform, June 7, 1892.

Spare the Party This Disgrace.

The Philadelphia Press makes the opportune point that should the present legislature fail to enact an equitable series of apportionments as required by the constitution, it "will be the first instance of deliberate delinquency in this matter on the part of a Republican legislature at a time when there was also a Republican executive. The election of a Democratic governor in 1882 prevented the success of any apportionment legislation based upon the census of 1880 through two sessions. When in 1886 a Republican governor and legislature were elected at the same time the event was followed by a reapportionment of the congressional and legislative districts, and a senatorial apportionment only failed by the merest accident in the closing hours of the session. The good faith then manifested put the dominant party in a position free from criticism. The election of a Democratic governor again in 1890 made a reapportionment on the census of that year practically impossible as long as he continued in office. It was conceded to be useless to undertake it. There is no longer any such reason for failure to act. The state now has a Republican executive whose position on this important question has been made very plain by his own decisive declarations. Governor Hastings has more than once said that reapportionment is a constitutional duty, and with a governor and legislature in party harmony there can be no excuse for failure."

We take no stock in the veiled assertions of Senator Quay's enemies that it is the personal influence of the junior senator which has operated to interrupt the discharge of this solemn duty. No doubt the senator may have expressed his regret at the manifest unfairness of one of the measures of congressional reapportionment. If he has done this, it was both a proper and a timely expression of widely prevalent opinion, which the legislature, in reconsidering the larger issue of its duty toward the constitution, should take into account. But such an expression is far from indicative of hostility to reapportionment in general; and ought not to be thus construed by those mischievous friends of Senator Quay who use their influence with him as a capital for personal speculation.

But whatever the senator's attitude, there is no room for uncertainty as to the legislature's present duty in the premises. The constitution is mandatory in its direction that a reapportionment shall be made; and public sentiment throughout the state is applying the precedent of Governor Beaver's administration to the administration of Governor Hastings. It is not necessary to make many changes in any locality; but such changes as are necessary to be made should be made willingly, and not under the lash of party and public discipline, with its humiliating publicity to legislative subordination.

The legislature should spare its Republican majority the disgrace of an extra session, called to do what the regular session refused to do.

Where is the Objection?

Under the queer heading "A Plan to Muzzle the Press and Plunder the People" the Philadelphia Record editorially condemns senate bill 251, which provides that all legal advertising connected with the business of the various county offices, except sheriffs' sales, be printed in not less than two nor more than four daily or weekly English papers in each county, said papers to represent the two leading political parties of the county and to have the largest sworn bona-fide circulation. The Record says that "in case this bill becomes a law it will cost the people of Philadelphia and of the state at large hundreds of thousands of dollars which might as well be thrown in the fire. They get no equivalent for their money. It is a steal pure and simple. Every recreant who votes for it should be posted and pilloried where the people may get at him."

We must confess that we do not perceive the cause of our contemporary's superabundant indignation. Upon its face the bill in question appears business-like and fair. The people who by their taxes pay for official advertising have, it would seem, a right to have that advertising appear in newspapers which are read by them. This is true of Democratic and of Republican taxpayers, both of whom are duly considered in the bill. If the bill to which the Record so strenuously objects were the law in Lackawanna county, it would mean that if two daily papers of different politics were chosen by reason of their superior circulation, they would be The Tribune, which has a larger circulation than any other Republican daily in Northeastern Pennsylvania, and the Times, which is the only Democratic daily paper in the county. In what respect would this arrangement be unbusiness-like and unfair?

We can see nothing in it which would tend either to muzzle the press or to plunder the people; and we doubt if any one else can.

Charities and the Schools.

Colonel Henry Hall, the Pittsburg Times' efficient correspondent, makes an eloquent plea to the country members in favor of a reduction of 9 per cent in the public school appropriation. "While the constituents of these members," he says, "do not want to see the school appropriation reduced, yet they are by this time fully aware of the fact that the great business depression of the past two years has hit the state's revenues very hard, that there must be reductions all along the line, and that it is no more than fair for the schools to take it with the rest. No one will deny that the state has treated the schools very generously during the past six or eight years, and to slightly reduce the aid now is not to do it from caprice but from necessity. The charities of Pennsylvania have long been a monument to the benevolence of the people. To leave them practically uncared for and helpless, as must be done, unless the extra $1,000,000 given the schools two years ago, be diverted this year to charities, would be to inflict a cruel injury upon the helpless persons who are now receiving their benefits."

This is true if there is no escape from crippling either the schools or the charities. The people at large certainly do not desire that either should suffer. But there is a widespread belief that the state, by drawing on its own idle reserve fund can avoid hurting either. In relation to the public schools it must be borne in mind that for the next two years the state will be under an unmeasured additional expense by reason of the enactment of compulsory education. The legislature which passed this law owes it to the people who demanded it to provide funds for a fair trial of it. To add to the inevitable expense of the public school system with one hand while cutting down the school appropriations with the other is hardly the fair course to pursue. And it can with difficulty be explained to the people.

How to Repair the Revenues.

Ex-Congressman Harter has devised a plan to relieve the financial embarrassment of the federal government. He would increase the internal revenue tax on tobacco to the extent of $15,000,000. The tax on beer should, he thinks, be increased $20,000,000, which would result in any decrease in the cost of glass or increase in the cost of drinkers. The whiskey tax, already high, should be enlarged enough to add to the revenue from this source about $15,000,000. Ten and coffee should be taxed enough to cost the consumer about one mill per cup or a cent for each ten cups, which tax would bring in about $30,000,000 in ordinary years. Here you have an increase in the income of the United States of $90,000,000 without putting a noticeable burden upon anybody. With this simple legislation our deficit would be transferred into a wholesome surplus of $40,000,000, and no calling or industry would suffer and no individual citizen would have any just ground for complaint."

POLITICAL POINTS.

The postmaster of Tyrone, interviewed at Washington, predicted Senator Cameron's election.

Those who know intimate that Thomas B. Reed's recent silence is by no means synonymous with inactivity.

The Harison and Morton "old ticket" boom, lately started by New York journals, is discredited at Washington.

The slow row goes that David Martin will oppose B. J. Heywood for state treasurer, as a warning to Senator Quay.

Governor McKinley and ex-President Harrison will both be present at the Memorial Day exercises at the Grant monument in New York.

Leading Republicans at Washington are reported to have National Chairman Carter fit to be deposed because of his friendliness for silver.

of the next Republican national convention. "It was here," it says, "that the first great gathering of the party was held forty years ago. It is the time of its birth as a national organization, and now that its regeneration and renewed lease of power is at hand, no more appropriate place could be chosen for the assembling of its chosen representatives, who will be charged with making the final plans for a great and far-reaching victory." We are willing to turn in for Pittsburg in 1895; but it needs to be understood from the outset that Scranton must have that convention in 1895.

Is a Deserved Compliment. From the Wilkes-Barre Leader. The appointment of William Connell, of Scranton, as one of the twenty trustees of the great American University of Washington is a deserved compliment to one of the most prominent Methodists in this country. The university is destined to be perhaps the greatest educational institution in America. The grounds as they now lie cover a space of over 100 acres.

Very Sudden Increase. From the Chicago Herald. It is wonderful how incomes of many men have increased since the income tax law was declared unconstitutional.

THERE is an old saying that you cannot make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, but you will be surprised to see what we have made out of ordinary ducks. Not a quack left in them. All genuinely perfect--and made so by care and attention.

Washable Summer Suits

Generally have an unkempt, slouchy and unshapely appearance and no wonder they find themselves on bargain counters. We have given them new life. The slinky look has disappeared. The cheap look has gone.

And in their stead we show you sprightly, jaunty and animated-looking suits that never find their way to the dead pile. We have also given much attention to Cheviot, Serge and Covert Suits.

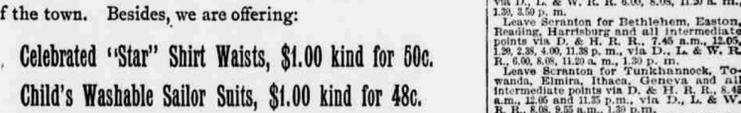

Every line of grace has been carefully studied and thought out. The collars roll with a careless indifference belonging to the upper ten. These lines are well worth your attention.

Prices Below the Cost of Making. SEVEN FORTY-EIGHT.

That is the magic figure and the remarkable low price we placed on Men's All-Wool Summer Suits, which is about half value, and is so keenly appreciated that this sale has caused a big stir in our Suit Department, and the talk of the town. Besides, we are offering:
