PERSONAL CHIT-CHAT.

"We don't even make a respectable showing against them," was D. J. Campbell's comment after leaving the ball park Saturday, where he witnessed the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre game. "Those Wilkes-Barre players," he continued, "are in the game from beginning to end. They fight for victory all the time and, that's what brings success in base ball as in everything else."

Bernard Magarize appeared on the streets Saturday with a big white and green sun shade, which he held aloft to protect himself from the fierce rays of Old Sol. "That's the proper thing for this weather," said Mr. Magarize, referring to the umbrella. "It allows you to remain in the shade all the time, and the heat does not seem near so oppressive. I'm sorry I didn't adopt the sun shade years ago."

"I've gone over to the boys again," declared P. W. Gallagher, of the traction company, yesterday after he had brought to bear on a coterie of his friends that genial smile that has made him famous. He had reference to the fact that the handsome mustache that was wont to ornament his face had disappeared, leaving nothing to hinder the play of that smile. Although he tips the scale at 230 pounds Mr. Gallagher was not complaining of the heat; he never does. When Mr. Gallagher was a mere stripling, he was cultivated a full beard; as time rolled by he reduced the hirsute growth to a mustache, and now the latter has disappeared, bringing the former owner back to the boys, as he says himself.

"That was an uncalled for attack the Sunday News made on Lieutenant John Davis today," said a well-known man about town to a Tribune reporter yesterday. "The lieutenant simply did his duty as required by the police regulations, and for that was attacked. If fault is to be found it should be laid against the regulations, and not against those who are sworn to enforce them. It is that character of unwise remarks which ruin discipline and cause those who know not the real facts to lose respect for police authority."

"Brother Sturges, who owns the Suburban Electric Light company, will not allow us to have electric lights in the park Sunday nights, so we have to make use of these," said Manager J. H. Lane, of Laurel Hill park, last night, after pointing to the headlights with which the park was studded. "But we're open just the same you see, and we have light. It's not quite so brilliant as the electric, but it answers the purpose. As for me, I can't see where the harm of having the park illuminated on Sunday nights comes in. Perhaps Brother Sturges has a more keen sense of the eternal fitness of things than I have."

Deputy Prothonotary Myron Kasson was one of the sweltering Scrantonians who fled the city Saturday to escape the heat. He started for Susquehanna county, accompanied by the kind of hat affected by the late Carter Harrison, an overcoat and an umbrella. "I'm prepared for a change of the weather," said Mr. Kasson, as he shifted his overcoat to his left arm and mopped away the sweat that was falling from the ends of his whiskers.

"No use of talking, there's no place like the boundless west," emphatically declared Barrister W. W. Baylor Saturday as he entertained his friends with an eloquent description of his journey across the continent to the Pacific slope, and then up to Seattle. Mr. Baylor returned Thursday from his western trip, which was a business nature in the interests of one of his clients.

SERVICES OF WHITSUNDAY

Observance of Day at St. Luke's Church and St. Peter's Cathedral.

REV. ROGERS ISRAEL'S SERMON

He Treated of Identity, Work, and Reception of Holy Ghost and Results of His Reception—Sermon at Cathedral by Rev. J. H. Mellish.

Services appropriate to Whitsunday were held yesterday in St. Luke's church, Rev. Rogers Israel, rector. His morning devotion treated of the descent of the Holy Ghost which was based upon St. John, xiii, 23: "If a man love me he will keep my words, and my father will love him and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." The rector treated of the identity, work and reception of the Holy Ghost and the results of his reception. According to an old church custom a baptism service was conducted in the afternoon when five children were baptized. Holy Communion was administered at 7:30 o'clock a. m. and after the morning service. The music was characteristic of the day, and included a special anthem during the morning service.

At St. Peter's Cathedral.

Pentecost Sunday was observed at St. Peter's cathedral, as is the usual custom on this feast of the church, with a solemn high mass of thanksgiving, of which Rev. Father Quinn was the celebrant; Rev. Father Feeley, deacon; Rev. Father Millane, priest; and Rev. Father O'Reilly, master of ceremonies. Music was rendered by the choir in an excellent manner, and the services throughout were very impressive.

Rev. J. A. Mellish preached the sermon from the epistle of the mass, which is taken from the Acts of the Apostles, ii, 1-11. He took the fifth verse as his text: "Now there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under the sun." The sermon went on to prove that the world was Catholic on the day of Pentecost, for the Scriptures say that, "there were gathered at Jerusalem men from every nation under the sun, and he guided by the teachings of the one true God." He quoted the famous English historian, Macaulay, who paid a high tribute to the durability of the Catholic church as a human institution. The speaker disputed the assertion that the church is human. It is human in so far as the incarnation of the Savior is concerned, he admitted, but the foundation of the church is in the divinity of the incarnation.

Resought Prayers for Holy Father.

The speaker brought prayers for the Holy Father, that all churches may be united under him, and he guided by the teachings of the one true God. He quoted the famous English historian, Macaulay, who paid a high tribute to the durability of the Catholic church as a human institution. The speaker disputed the assertion that the church is human. It is human in so far as the incarnation of the Savior is concerned, he admitted, but the foundation of the church is in the divinity of the incarnation.

The sermon was summarized under three heads, Catholicity of space, Catholicity of doctrine, and Catholicity of time. Christ said to His apostles: "Go forth, teach all nations." This shows that Christ intended that the Catholic religion should be the one of all nations, with no limits or boundaries. Christ intended that there should be a universality of doctrine, for he said, too, to His disciples: "Teach all things that I have taught you. In 1870, at the Vatican council in Rome, the fathers gathered together theologians of every division of politics, of customs, and of every color. They were all united in the one doctrine.

I Am With You All Days. The Catholicity of time is shown by Christ, speaking through the mouths of His prophets. In the Scriptural passage: "Behold, I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world." Man cannot patch God's work, and the true church cannot come from the hands of men. The Holy Ghost is the spirit of the church and will abide with it forever.

In the conclusion of the sermon the speaker made use of the words of St. Paul: "May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the charity of God and the communication of the Holy Ghost be with us all, amen."

CHRISTIAN LOYALTY.

George G. Mahy's Discourse in the Green Ridge Baptist Church.

General Secretary George G. Mahy, of the Young Men's Christian association, occupied the pulpit of the Green Ridge Baptist church yesterday evening. Rev. W. Ford, conducted the services in the New York Street Presbyterian chapel. "Loyalty in Service" was Secretary Mahy's subject, based on Revelations, iii, 8. "This epistle to the angel of the church at Philadelphia, is supposed by a good many Bible students to be particularly a message to this age. We know that 'Philadelphia' means brotherly love. And it is in the age of religious tolerance, of interdenominational effort, and of broad-minded sympathy between brethren, who hold entirely opposite views on many important subjects. That this spirit is upon us in this age should be a matter of profound gratitude to God, for it is vastly more Christ-like than the narrowness and petty jealousies of the sectarianism of bygone days. Yet this spirit brings new dangers and peculiar temptations to the church. Tolerance may become mere indifference, and what we call liberal-mindedness may be unbelief.

The Anchor of Faith. "In this passage which we have read, God has given us the anchor of faith, and he bids as the church holds by these she will be tolerant, liberal and progressive—yes, more, she is definitely promised power, protection and reward. The anchors are: First, loyalty to God's word—'Thou has kept my word, and I will keep thee, and I will not deny my name.' 'We seem in these days to be entering upon a period vastly more dangerous to the happiness and welfare of the soul of man than the recent period of severe hostility to the cause of Christ. For there are many wolves in sheep's clothing, whose attacks upon the word of God are subtle and deadly, and all the more dangerous because they are delivered by men who occupy positions of influence and power among men. Many new and strange doctrines are being proclaimed as Christian doctrines; many and varied experiments are being tried for the salvation of men, as if the cross of Christ had lost its power. It is a time for examining the cables leading to the anchor of loyalty to God's word.

He Would Be Most Miserable. "The second anchor is 'Fidelity to Christ himself.' About Him rages the conflict between righteousness and evil. Deprove His blessed incarnation and spotless purity, and atoning death and glorious resurrection, and promised coming again, and as Christians we are all men most miserable. 'Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved.' Acts, iv, 12. And it is precisely because Christ is the chief cornerstone that He has been attacked. His incarnation denied, and His atonement explained away as the mistaken sacrifice of an enthusiast. We, who have been brought with the precious blood and delivered from bondage by His death, know the worth of the glorious redemption. And tonight God's call comes to us with force and power. 'Behold, I set before you an open door; the great way is lying before you. Therefore, if ye will, enter in. You can't say that you were not warned, for Christ's words are full of warning on this subject, and friends and ministers, besides your own consciences, have all warned you, as is well known to the merciful and long suffering God. This future punishment may be averted, however, by the obeying of the reasonable commands of God and there is left no excuse for the disregarding of them."

Quay and Apportionment.

Editor of The Tribune: Sir: The power of Senator Quay has never been more strikingly illustrated than in the submission of the Republican members of the legislature to his demand in killing the apportionment bills. And never has Senator Quay made a more remarkable exhibition of short-sightedness than in the order for the defeat of the apportionment bills. That act was something more than a political blunder, and also something worse than short-sightedness. It was an act of bad faith, for to many of those who have been his friends he had given assurance that he would not interfere to prevent the passage of acts reappointing the state. The junior senator may claim that the killing of those bills is a personal victory. It unquestionably illustrates and emphasizes his power over the Republican members of the legislature, but that in itself constitutes only a very slender victory. Such an exercise of arbitrary power on the part of a recognized political leader never fails to diminish his influence with the masses of his party; more than that, it decreases popular respect for him.

Before the lecture the regular gospel service was held, several members giving short addresses. Miss Clarke's remarks were very interesting.

learned from the convention, and told of the impression that the final or farewell meeting had upon the delegates. The meeting was well attended by railroad men.

Rev. D. M. Kinter preached last evening to a large congregation in the Christian church on the subject of "Future Punishment." He took for his text Jeremiah, xiii, 21: "What wilt thou say when He shall punish thee." He said: "The word of God is addressed both to our hopes and fears, as it contains many precious promises, also many threatening of future punishments. Sometimes this punishment comes in this world by the direct reprobation of God, but it will surely be inflicted after death, and if Christ's word is to be taken in preference to man's this punishment will be everlasting. You can't say that you were not warned, for Christ's words are full of warning on this subject, and friends and ministers, besides your own consciences, have all warned you, as is well known to the merciful and long suffering God. This future punishment may be averted, however, by the obeying of the reasonable commands of God and there is left no excuse for the disregarding of them."

IS THE MYSTERY SOLVED?

Men Who Robbed Scranton Postoffice Said to Be in Custody.

WERE CORRALLED IN NEW YORK

They Are a Gang of Professional Crooks, and Are Accused of Two Other Postoffice and One Bank Robbery.

On Aug. 2, 1894, the vault in the post-office in this city was forced open and $8,000 in stamps removed. It was not until the next day that the postoffice officials became aware that the stamps were missing and the department at Washington was notified. Inspectors were hurried to this city by the department to investigate the nature of the robbery and try to discover the persons who committed it. It was at first suspected that some one connected with the local office was guilty for everything pertaining to the job showed that those who executed it had exact knowledge as to the "lay" of the building and the manner in which the business connected with it was conducted.

For weeks employees were carefully shadowed, as soon as one inspector became known another being assigned to take his place, but no headway was made in unravelling the mystery.

Similar robbery at Hoboken, N. J., was riddled of stamps amounting to $6,500 in exactly the same manner as the Scranton office. This confirmed the theory of many of the inspectors that the Scranton robbery was the work of professionals. Several small robberies in points widely removed followed the Hoboken robbery, and on April 3 came the robbery of the Springfield, Ill., postoffice of $7,500 worth of stamps.

All of this time the inspectors had been hard at work, and Friday in New York they succeeded in arresting Joseph Kilhoran, Charles Allen, John Moore and Harry Russell after a long and exciting chase.

Those men were arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields, in New York, on Saturday, and were held in $5,000 bail each for their appearance at a further hearing today. Yesterday's New York Herald said of the men:

Suspected of bank robberies also. "Although these men are charged with the extensive robberies of post-offices in Hoboken, N. J., Scranton, Pa., and Springfield, Ill., and are suspected of having been concerned in a $25,000 bank robbery in Plainfield, N. J., recently, it is believed that charges even more sensational will be made when they are arraigned before Commissioner Shields tomorrow afternoon. The postoffice inspectors have promised to have their witnesses ready then.

"From a remark made by Moore, when he was examined yesterday, it is thought that other big robberies have been discovered, or that the inspectors have discovered a postoffice official who assisted the thieves in getting rid of the immense amount of stamps which they secured.

"The robberies in Hoboken, Scranton and Springfield bore evidence of the same handiwork. Federal detectives have said that these were only twelve men in the country who could have done the work. They have four prisoners now, and I was told yesterday on good authority that they were on the trail of at least three other men, who are believed to have been the chief villains in the plot and whose capture would prove of even greater importance than that of the men now in custody.

Think They Have Broken Up the Gang. "The postoffice inspectors are satisfied that they have broken up one of the most daring 'gangs' of robbers that ever operated.

"The crime for which Moore was sent to Sing Sing was a burglary, for which he received a sentence of seventeen years and six months. This, together with the fact that the postoffice robbers have said that they could have done the work, they have four prisoners now, and I was told yesterday on good authority that they were on the trail of at least three other men, who are believed to have been the chief villains in the plot and whose capture would prove of even greater importance than that of the men now in custody.

What Puzzles Inspectors. "What has puzzled the inspectors most is how the men, who stole $22,000 worth of stamps, contrived to get rid of their loot. To peddle them even in small lots must have excited suspicion long ago. The men have had an agent, who knew something about the details of the postoffice system, the inspectors think."
