Rev. C. B. Lincoln's Case Abounded in Spice and Was Marked by a Warm Conflict.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 1.-The trial of the Rev. C. B. Lincoln was begun in First Cumberland Presbyterlan church this morning and evoked a warm conflict.

The charges against Rev. Lincoln are: First, false and slanderous accusation against brethren; second, stirring up strife and dissensions: third. unfitness and misconduct; fourth, insubordination and contempt

Moderator McMillon appointed committee to confer with the Rev. Lincoln for the purpose, if possible, of arriving at some amicable settlement. succeeds Mr. O'Toole. Secretary Res. The committee presently returned, stating that their mission was abortive. To this Rev. Lincoln objected, claiming that the proceedings were illegal, and Cream of an Immense clerk in the department to take the that the charges were wrong from first place declined by Arlington T. Moore, to last.

There were frequent warm passage of Philadelphia. The administration between the moderator and Rev. Linwill make no appointments from Philcoln, during which the latter accused adelphia unless recommended by David Moderator McMillon with having insulted his wife. To substitute this accusation, Rev. Lincoln appealed to his wife, who was present, but she was not permitted to substantiate the charges. Rev. Lincoln intimated that had he been present at the time his wife was insulted he would have tried conclusions with the moderator on the street. The moderator threatened to have Rev. Lincoln ejected from the court, but the accused warmly replied: "I defy you to do that. You have not the power to put me out."

After another cross-fire of warm expressions the trial proceeded and the charges against the pastor were read Army, in full, but not without frequent interference and objection from the accused minister.

Two witnesses on the first charge were examined, when an adjournment was taken.

The witnesses for the prosecution finished their testimony this afternoon. At one point in the proceedings Rev. blows. While Dr. Morrie was on the Meeting of the Anti-Quay Londers-Com- stand Rev. Lincoln asked him if he had not apologized for insulting him. Dr.

DISTINGUISHED MEN PRESENT

The Gun That Fired the Initial Shot Thirty-two Years Ago Is Spiked by Major Calif-The Organizations Represented.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 1.-The beautiful bronze statue of Major General John Buford was dedicated this morning with impressive exercises, and before a distinguished audience of military men Major General Westley Morritt, United States Army, commanding the department of the Missouri, occupied the chair, and every detail of the exercises went off with corresponding promptness. Light Battery C, Third United States artillery, and Troops A and H, Sixth United States cavalry, under command of Major T. C. Lebo, led the procession from the Springs hotel through the town, thence back along the Springs road to the crest of Seminary Ridge, near the Chambersburg pike, where the monument is located, It was upon this particular spot that General Buford stood the morning of July 1, just thirty-two years ago, when he ordered Calif's battery to open the battle of Gettysburg. The gun that fired the initial shot now rests at the foot of the statue, and was spiked by Major Calif himself at the conclusion of the exercises. The battery fired a major general's salute when the statue was unveiled and then General Merritt introduced the orator, General James R. Wilson, of Wilmington, Del. His matter was mainly historical and dealt with Buford's family and military record.

Organizations Represented. Major Calif having spiked the four guns that flanked the base of the monument, the memorial was decorated with laurel wreaths by representatives of the following organizations:

Titball First regiment dragoons, General D. M. Gregg; Second regiment dragoons, General Rodinbough; First Volunteer brigade, Major Wilson; Cavalry reserves brigade, Colonel Leoser; Gamble's brigade, Colonel Parsons; Devin's brigade, Captain Hermance; First division headquarters, Lieutenant Wells. General Reynolds' staff, Captain Rosengarten; Colored corps, Staff Major Whitehead; headquarters Army of the Potomac, Colonel Meade; the cavalry United States Army, Colonel Gordon; the light artillery United States Colonel Pennington; general staff United States Army. General Sawtelle: the guns to be decorated by Colonel Harrison, Major Calif. Colonel Welt and Major Quirk. General Merritt then transferred the monument to the battlefield association for which Colonel John P. Nicholson received it. The statue of General Buford represents the distinguished officer dismounted with his field glass in his hand. He is facing the advancing confederate lines. The base is of granite five feet square and bears on the front the word "Buford" in large letters.
