IT WILL CONTROL ITSELF

New Turn of Affairs in the Quay-Hastings Fight.

GILKESON CUTTING NO ICE

The Situation as Regarded by the Special Correspondent of the Philadelphia Record—Sentiment in Favor of Administration.

Philadelphia, July 10.—A special from Harrisburg to the Record says: "If the information which has been accumulating here from all parts of the state for the last few days is true, the Republican state convention will control itself, and yield neither to the demands of the state administration for the slaughter of Senator Quay, nor to the appeals of Senator Quay's friends to control everything in sight. So far as the drift of sentiment in the state toward the contest for chairman of the state convention is concerned, to use a current phrase—Bank Commissioner Gilkeson is 'cutting no ice' in the fight. From nearly every county in the state intimations have been received here that the delegates already elected and the local Republican leaders who are likely to control the delegate elections to be held, desire to avoid any clash in the state convention. They are in favor of both Governor Hastings and Senator Quay."

"This paradoxical statement is easily explained. The sentiment of the rank and file of the party in the state, not excluding Philadelphia and Allegheny counties, is crystallizing in favor of the administration—so far as to endorse and sustain the administration of Governor Hastings and to endorse his appointment of the appellate court judges by the nomination of all of them; by nominating a neutral temporary chairman of the convention, by making the governor the permanent chairman of the convention; and having thus fully sustained the governor and his friends, to make Senator Quay chairman of the state committee."

"When the fight is over, a number of county committees have within the past week elected delegates to the convention, and instructed them to endorse Governor Hastings' administration, and to sustain the governor, but to elect a committee to the state convention, under the leadership of the endorsement of the governor to mean the commendation of his administration. They do not regard their instructions to be unfriendly to the election of Senator Quay to the chairmanship of the state committee. Indeed, Bank Commissioner Gilkeson has scarcely been mentioned in any of the contests in any of the counties of the state, very few of the leaders and none of the rank and file of the party having any acquaintances whatever with him as a factor in party politics."

"Well posted politicians here, who have looked over the field, predict that the Republican convention will be a rather tame affair. The Philadelphia combine, Mr. Magee, of Pittsburgh, and the governor, who has presidential ambitions, do not, it is said, regard with favor this growing idea of a peaceful settlement of the existing warfare in the party, and they have been for several days endeavoring to again put forward the chairmanship of the state committee as the pivotal position in the contest, but there is an ominous intimation from Philadelphia that a great many of the ward leaders, who are being coerced into the contest against Senator Quay, desire to see the present conflict settled upon the lines of the acquiescence in the wish of the desires of both Governor Hastings and Senator Quay."

QUAY'S PERSONAL FIGHT.

It Began in Philadelphia but Senator Quay Has Involved the Entire State in It.

Philadelphia, July 10.—The charge which Senator Quay and his friends are making concerning the attitude of Mayor Warwick and National Committeeman David Martin, of Philadelphia, is that they are political intrigues. The business of the charge is shown in the fact that this whole contest in the Republican party was precipitated by Senator Quay because his candidate for mayor of Philadelphia, the Hon. E. Penrose, did not receive the nomination. Mayor Warwick is under no obligations to Senator Quay, and never has been. On the contrary, Senator Quay did everything he possibly could to defeat his nomination and election. As for National Committeeman Martin, the charge that he is a political intriguer is as baseless as the other. It was Mr. Martin who helped to make Senator Quay in Philadelphia. He was his staunch friend for years, but when he saw fit to give his support to Charles F. Warwick as his candidate for mayor, nothing is too bad for Senator Quay and his friends to charge against Mr. Martin.

The people of Philadelphia are thoroughly in sympathy with Mayor Warwick and Mr. Martin. They believe in Home Rule. The arbitrary bossism of Senator Quay whereby he chose to displace from his home in Beaver, or from his residence in Washington, who should or should not conduct the municipal affairs of Philadelphia has become onerous and burdensome. Men in public life have grown tired of having to go to Washington to answer to Charles F. Warwick as to how they should or should not conduct the municipal affairs of Philadelphia. The present contest is a Home Rule contest. There was no reason whatever why the whole state should have been involved in this purely local contest. Mr. Quay thought otherwise. He was ill advised by men who posed as his friends, but who in reality have been his worst enemies. It is Senator Quay and no one else who is responsible for this strife in the Republican ranks in Pennsylvania.

MR. QUAY IS HOPEFUL.

He Expects to Go Into the Convention with Seventy-Nine Majority. Philadelphia, July 10.—United States Senator Quay left for his home at Beaver tonight to get a much-needed rest. He was in excellent spirits and greatly pleased with the prospect of a successful result of his candidacy for state chairman and after a careful review of his two weeks' canvass, unhesitatingly announced that he will have seventy-nine majority in the convention out of 239 votes.

In speaking of the matter he said: "Heretofore I have made neither claim nor statement. For two weeks, however, I have given my attention to the present contest and am now fully conversant with the situation in every county. The convention will be made up of 239 delegates. Of this number 138 have been chosen, of whom 101 are favorable to my election to the state chairmanship. The delegates yet to be named, including Philadelphia's quota of seventy, numbers 153, of whom eighty-three are certain to be my friends of the total number comprising the convention therefore, I will receive the votes of 184—a majority of seventy-nine."

"Had I known three months ago that my enemies—among whom are some of my professed friends—contemplated this fight against me, I am satisfied that, from the counties in which primaries have already been held, I would have had, instead of 101, at least 139. The drift of sentiment would have made a total of 202 out of the full number—239, a majority of 117. I am, however, satisfied with my estimated majority of 79. Of course, this claim is based upon the fact that my friends are active and alert throughout the state and determined to leave nothing undone which will bring about success."

The senator will return to Philadelphia some time next week.
