CHAPTER V.

"The rumans have seized her. They will kill her." I cried. Duroe sprang down with the inarticulate shouts of one whose reason had left him. He struck the door so frantically with his naked hand that it left a blotch blood with every blow. "Here is the key," I shouted, picking one from the floor. "She must have thrown it in at the instant that she was

My companion snatched it from me with a shrick of joy. A moment later later he dashed it down on the boards. It was so small that it was lost in the enormous lock. Duroc sank upon one hands. He sobbed in his despair. I could have sobbed, too, when I thought

But I am not so easily baffled. After all, this key must have been sent to us for a purpose. The lady could not bring us that of the door because this murderous stepfather of hers would most certainly have it in his pocket. Yet this other key must have a meaning, or why should she risk her life to place it in our hands. It would say little for our wits if we could not find out what that

When we had sed it would have puzzled a colonel of engineers to make a better petard. I put three cheeses on to of each other and placed it above them so as to lean against the look. Then we lit our candle-end and ran for shelter, shutting he door of the magazine behind us.

It was no joke, my friends, to lie ms all those tons of powder, with he knowledge that if the flame of the explosion should penetrate through one thin door our blackened limbs would be shot higher than the castle keep. Who could have believed that a half-inch of candle could take so long to burn? My cars were straining all the time for the adding of the hoofs of the Cossacks so were coming to destroy us. I had almade up my mind that the candle ew to bits, and pieces of cheese with hower of turnips, apples and splinors of cases were shot among us. through an impenetrable smoke, with all sorts of debris beneath our feet, but mering square where or had been. Vaguely I can recall how I rushed into the chamber of death, how I selzed Durce by one limp hand and dragged him down the hall, the woman keeping pace with me and pulling at the other arm. iome Persons in the World Born Withou a Sense of Humor. From the London Illustrated News.

There is no gift of the gods so dangerous to its possessor as that of humor, unless he thoroughly understands that all of his fellow creatures have not got it. We have had some terrible examples of this of late in high places, but they occur continually in the experiences of very ordinary people. An said I, "for having shut me up in acquaintance of mine very nearly lost a fortune through quoting to his aunt with approbation De Quincey's essay on "Murder Considered as One of the Fine Arts."

"If once a man indulges in murder he very soon comes to think little of robbery, and from robbery he comes next to drinking and Sabbath breaking, and there is but one step from that to U.S. Leather...... 1814 1815 17 1875 incivility and procrastination. Once begin upon the downward path, you never know where you will stop." "I see nothing to laugh at in that,"

said the old lady. "The man must be 'Many a man,' he goes on to say, 'has dated his ruin from some murder or other that perhaps he thought little of at the time.' That is surely very were in the powder magazine of cries upon his lips and his blood clothear nothing more of your Mr. De

> My friend was prudent enough not to press the matter further; but I have heard of another young gentleman 24,93c.: layer raisins, $1.60a1.70; muscatels who, in a similar case, went a little too far. He was telling his uncle, a stout country gentleman, of Sydney Smith's reply to the dull man who asked why posts at the entrance to the Green park had been put nearer together. "You have no ides," said Smith, gravely, "what fat people used to get into that park!"

The stout uncle colored a little and said: "I see no joke in that." "Oh, don't say that!" pleaded the nephew, "because Sydney Smith used to say that it was his test case, for if a man didn't see the fun of that he would see the fun of nothing." This simple repetition of a jeu d'esprit cost the narrator a legacy, for, though people may have no sense of humor, they do not like to be told so. What is very curious, they sometimes take pleasure in retailing a joke even if they do not understand it. Years ago there was an epigram upon Twining, the tea merchant: "Twining would be whining if deprived of his T." With my own ears heard this repeated, with a slight alteration, as "Dakin' (also a tea merchant) would be aching if deprived of his T;" nor could the man be got to understand why his half borrowed jest had failed. A charming example of a joke being taken for earnest is that of the Scotchman praying aloud upon a moor behind a turf dyke, and express ing an opinion that even if it should fall upon him it would be no more than he deserved. A waggish neighbor heard him and pushed the dyke upon him, when, scrambling out, he was heard to say: "Hech, sirs! it's an awfu' world joke but it's ta'en in earnest." HE KNEW TOO MUCH.

TO OUR PATRONS:

Washburn-Crosby Co. wish to assure their many pat-rons that they will this year hold to their usual custom of milling STRICTLY OLD WHEAT until the new crop of milling STRICTLY OLD WHEAT until the new crop is fully cured. New wheat is now upon the market, and owing to the excessively dry weather many millers are of the opinion that it is already cured, and in proper condition for milling. Washburn-Crosby Co. will take no risks, and will allow the new wheat fully three months to mature before grinding.

This careful attention to every detail of milling has placed Washburn-Crosby Co.'s flour far above other brands.
