QUAY'S FIGURES DOUBTED

The Old Man's Recent Talk Is Received with Derision.

AN EXHIBITION OF WEAKNESS

the Senator Are Surprises at His Latest Figures - The Result in Luckawanua Creates Interest.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Philadelphia, Pa., July 11.-The facts and figures, or rather the fakes and figments, given out last night by Mr. Quay as to the probabilities of his success in the coming state convention, were the talk of all men who read them this morning. Even the most intimate friends of Mr. Quay were amazed. Talking on his part at this time also surprised them, and almost to a man they think the figures on majorities came from either Andrews or Leach in Quay's name. On the other hand, they argue that If they are Quay's figures and he gave them out himself it is the most abject cured. confession of weakness he has ever made. Indeed, some of them do not hesitate to express their fear that the senator is a victim of political paresis. The figures of Mr. Quay are intended to stimulate the fainting hearts of his interior friends who are tumbling over in these figures. Even Saturnine Andrews, who barely smiles, grinned all over when he got these figures and said to Leach: "Won't the people be a little suspicious of the old man trying the experiment of talking at this late given out by Senator Quay are so grossbad colorings or unsatisfactory and have fallen flat and very far from delinquent in sending in his accounts

The absurdity of Colonel Quay's statement that Gilkeson will only have 105 votes in the convention can be easily seen, as it only gives Gilkeson seventeen delegates outside of these two counties, while the truth is that forty-five delegates have already been elected for him outside of Philadelphia and Allegheny. With the six-ty-eight delegates already elected for Gilkeson and the sixty-five he will get in Philadelphia his total vote is 133 or within twelve votes of enough to elect without counting anything from the eighty-four delegates yet to be elected outside of Philadelphia. The chances are that Colonel Quay in claiming a majority of seventy-nine delegates for himself has given about the figures of

KILLED BY THEIR GUIDE.

Mystery of the Disappearance of an Old-Man and His Son Explained.

Duluth, Minn., July 11.—"Boys, I came back to say I killed the old man and the boy. I am starving and shall drown myself. M. Jackson." These words, written with a charred stick on a piece of birch bark, which had just been found at Henry Brock's minng camp, near Rainy Lake, solve the mystery of the disappearance of an old man named Stone and his young son and their guide, who called himself Mose Jackson.

Some weeks ago the party passed through Duluth on their way to the seine River gold country. The old man had plenty of money, and the guide was recognized as a man with a shady past. The party was last seen at Brock's camp. Some days later Jack-son returned alone and said he had left the old man and his son several miles north. Jackson seemed greatly excited, but was allowed to depart. The surrounding country has been carefully searched, but no trace of the missing men has been discovered.

Miss Field and Mr. Riddle claimed undue influence and that the testatrix was insane. It is thought there will be no appeal.

pecial to the Scranton Tribune.

Harrisburg, July 11.-A modes: young stenographer has suddenly been brought into prominence by the fight for chairman of the state Republican committee. He would probably never have been heard of outside of his narrow circle of friends and acquaintances if it had not been for this contesk. This young man is W. Russell, of whom the newspapers have lately been saying so much in connec tion with the state administration's literary bureau, Mr. Russell is no myth, as many persons suppose, but a sturdy Scotchman, with all the good qualities of his race. He knows no vices, and is as virtuous, upright and nonest as any man who ever lived, Mr. Russell came to Harrisburg at the opening of the last legislature as amanuensis of Colonel George Nox McCain, staff corresondent of the Philadelphia Press. He performed his work fasthfully and well, and made friends with all with whom he came in contact. He is as modest as a school girl and just as ignorant of practical politics and the wiles of politicians. Mr. Russell was placed in charge of the administration's literary bureau because of his honesty and integrity. He is a strict Presbyterian and a member of a leading congregation of that denomination in Philadelphia. Two Bright Warriors. There are no better known or more popular newspaper men in the state than Colonel Henry Hall of the Pitts-burg Times, and Colonel George Nox McCain, of the Philadelphia Press, who have charge of the literary work of the administration's campaign. Colonel Hall is one of the most brilliant writers and public speakers in the state. He served two terms in the house of representatives from Mercer county and had he been re-elected, in 1889, he would have been speaker. He is governor of the Association of Penasylvania Legislative Correspondents.

Colonel McCain is Heutenant governer of the same association. Before Colonel McCain went to the Press eight years ago, he held a responsible position with the Pittsburg Dispatch. He is a thorough all-around newspaper man with a wide circle of acquaintances. He went all through the late guberna torial campaign with Governor Hastings and his spell-binders and afterward wrote a book for private distribution giving a graphic and compre-

Hall and McCain are aides on Governor Hastings' staff. The Personality of Andrews Senator Andrews, of Crawford, is in charge of the headquarters of Senator Quay. Andrews was unknown outside of Crawford county until eight years ago, when he came to the house of representatives. He soon sprung into prominence as the personal representative of Colonel Quay, through whose assitance he was made chairman of the state Republican committee in 1889. Andrews' manipulation of the party organization to nominate Delamater for governor in 1890 made him so uncopular that after the defeat of the gubernatorial candidate, the Craw-ford senator was dropped by Colonel

Quay. In the same campaign Andrews was defeated for the senate Andrews turned up in 1893 as a candidate for the house of representatives and was defeated, although he was seated against the bitter protests of such sterling Republicans as the late Renjamin L. Hawlt of Blake and "Uncle" John Cessna, of Bedford, Andrews was elected to the senate last fall. He and the high service dam at No. 7. is known among his friends as "Bull," probably because of the bull-dog tenecity with which he goes into a fight. He is one of Senator Quay's most loyal friends and with Frank Willing Leach, has charge of the details of his campaign. Andrews has limited knowledge of parliamentary tactics. He cannot make a speech, but no man in the state can pass or kill a bill more successfully.
