HOT DAY AT CAMP CURTIN

Soldier Boys Out in Dress Parade Before Thousands of Visitors.

CLOSE QUARTERS FOR GUARD

Chauntauquas Want General Gobin to Exchange Them from the Park—Officers of the Day-Corporal Leysbon's Misfortune—Standing of Regiment.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Camp Curtin, Mt. Gretna, July 21.—Today the sun shone down fiercely on the hundreds of white walled little tents which compose Camp Curtin, making the soldier boys' quarters almost unbearable during a good portion of the day. Saturday afternoon the camp was visited by one of the severe rain storms for which this region is noted, and soon after the rain ceased falling, the regiment was called out for dress parade. The ground was muddy, and the boys did not make as creditable a showing as they otherwise would.

Today the camp was visited by thousands of visitors, and with the camp meeting people and Chauntauquas they viewed the dress parade. It was an imposing sight, and the fine marching and perfect evolutions of the soldiers were frequently greeted by applause. Much dissatisfaction is expressed by the members of the guard because the Chauntauquas have requested General Gobin to have the guard lines located so that soldiers will not be admitted to the park, which is the only place of interest hereabouts, save Lebanon, nine miles away.

Colonel Curson is popular. Colonel H. A. Curson is showing that he is a model officer and his consideration and disposition to see justice done to everybody is more than ever endearing him to the boys of the Thirteenth. The fact that he was the last colonel to receive his commission puts the Thirteenth at the end of the Third brigade. There is one man who is greatly missed in Camp Curtin, and that is Major Millar, formerly adjutant of the Thirteenth. He was one of the most painstaking officials, thoroughly practical and business-like in his method of transacting business, and did much to assist the regiment in keeping at the head of the National Guard of the State. The following shows the standing of the Thirteenth regiment:

Company	Members	Officers	Privates	Total
Company A	100.00	20.00	80.00	120.00
Company B	98.14	19.23	78.91	117.38

It is an open secret that Senator Cameron is putting up the money for the Quay fight, and he has plenty of it to spend, but he is a Scotchman who puts a short limit on the money he will waste on a bad bargain, in a fight that is so clearly lost.
