Chief of Police Simpson arrived hor from Buffalo yesterday morning on the 2.20 Delaware, Lackawanna and West ern train, having in custody Joseph Visniskie, the young Polander charged with the murder of Felix Davidziak or the night of Feb. 9 on Washington ave

As Visniskie stepped from the train after Chief Simpson, to whom he was handcuffed, he did not seem at all excited or as if he in the least gave any consideration of the fact that he was possibly he may pay the death penalty for his act. The patrol wagon was in waiting and he was forthwith con veyed to the station house to await the recessary proceeding to formally comnit him to the county fail.

His cool demeanor did not leave him even when the cell door clanged behind him. He slept off and on until about 7 o'clock in the morning, when he expressed himself as being very hungry and asked for breakfast.

He was provided with a hearty breakfast, which he devoured with a rapaclousness that evidenced that it his mind was in any wise troubled his stomach was not. At dinner time again he was given an extra dinner and at 5 o'clock he ate not only his own extra supper, but also the greater portion of the regular fare of another prisoner in the next cell, who was too sick to eat.

Paced Up and Down the Cell.

Towards the latter part of the afternoon Visniskie became very restless and paced up and down his marrow cell for an hour at a time. Occasionally he would exchange a word with one or the other of the "plain drunks" who were in nearby cells, but at the approach of un officer he would cease talking altogether of change his speech so that it could not be well understood, thereby endeavoring to give out the impression that he can not speak English, which he sometimes maintains. It is known however, that he can speak very good English, and his "me no understand" carries very little weight with it in the opinion of the police. When seen yesterday by a Tribune reporter Visniskie was nervously walkprinted in The Tribune, but the Mack, M. J. Ryan, Ed Walton, Benjamin 'marks' which the police drew such particular attention to in the printed leading. The description dwelt paricularly upon a mole alongside of his nose. Visniskie has no mole alongside of his nose, strictly speaking, although e has two on his face. He, however, stated that he was sorry he had ever left Scranton, believing that if he had stayed to would not look so had against him. He claims to be innocent and to have acted wholly in self defense.

"They came for me with knives, and I had to shoot to save my own life," said he. "But did you not go to your house

His own admission that he did the hooting will be enough to hold him. At all events the police claim to have at hand witnesses galore to use if occessary. Some of these witnesses a under constant surveillatice, and all are under heavy balls to appear when wanted.

What He Told Chief Simpson.

On the way hither Visniskie was extremely voluble on any subject that night come up, with the exception of the case in which he is most interested. To Chief Simpson he denied at one time that he did the shooting, but admitted again that four or five made for him with knives, and he had to defend himself. When the chief asked him in a casual way what he did with the re volver he said angrily he did not have a revolver and he did not do the shoot

'After Dr. Leete's death Colone Fitzsimmons, as executor, telegraphed as follows to Attorneys Wells & Lee Los Angeles: "A. N. Leete, dead. Left wife and son. Telegraph instructions." To this the answer received was: "Don't understand what instructions are wanted. No estate here." Upon this Colonel Fitzsimmons wrote a letter to the lawyers, to which, on Fri day, he received the following response:

Los Angeles, Cal., June 28, 1895 F. J. Fitzsimmons, Esq., Scranton, Pa. Dear Sir.—We are in receipt of your esteemed favor of the 20th inst., in reference to the late Dr. Allen N. Leete. We received the telegram from you which you refererd to in your letter, and replied, in substance, that we did not know what instructions you de-sired, and Mr. Leete had left no prop-erty here that we are aware of. ceived a telegram from Mr. Leete, ask course, to what it referred, we answered the dispatch by wire, indicating the necessary credentials and papers for that purpose. A few days afterward Mr. Leete called personally at our office, and had an interview with both Mr. Wells and Mr. Lee, and stated hat he had come in response to our telegram. We asked him what we could do for him, and he looked at us in utter amaze-ment, and stated that he had come on funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. John Kil-gannon, of Plymouth; Mr. and Mrs. James Corrigan, of Carbondale; and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Corrigan, of Wilkes-Barre. The pall-bearers were: drew from his pocket a letter purport-ing to have been written by the firm of Wells & Lee, informing him that he had been left a legacy of $50,000 by the will of Henry B. Carey, then deceased.

Letter Was a Forgery. Upon examining the letter, we at once Upon examining the letter, we at once saw that it was a base forgery. In the first place the letter head was a cheap printed affair, such an one as we have never used, as we have always used the letter head upon which this letter is written. The letter head also designated our office as being in the First National bank building, whereas we never had our office there, and have always, for the past fourteen years, had our office in the Baker block, where we are now skuated.

our office in the Baker block, where we are now situated.

We at once informed Mr. Leete of these facts, and called his attention to the stationery upon which we conducted our correspondence; and then went to the clerk's office with him to examine the records, and found that no such estate was on record there, nor did we know any such person as Henry B. Carey, nor could we find any evidence that such a person died, leaving any estate. There was no person of that name in this county, to our knowledge, possessing the amount of wealth indicated by the letter. We came to the conclusion that it was prepared by some shrewd former for the purpose of laying the foundation for some one operating with him to personally call upon Mr. Lecte at his home in Scranton, and on the strength of the communication get some money out of him, but Mr. Leete, having suddenly left Scranton for Los Angeles in response to what he believed to be a communication from us on the subject, they had evidently missed him there.

The envelope in which the letter was contained, which he showed us, instead of having our business card upon it, as is customary with all letters which we use in our correspondence, gave the ad-

They started an investigation, and we had several interviews with them, together with Mr. dews with them, together with Mr.

They have, however, never as yet discovered the forger. It appeared to us to be a very strange affair, and we could see but two conclusions which could be reached believes an effort is being made to rob in the matter, either it was perpetrated for the purpose of getting money out of Mr. Leete, or else it was a cruel, practical joke perpetrated upon him by some person. Whoever perpetrated the forgery were probably induced to use our name by reason of the fact that it appears in nearly all the leading law directories of the country, and in our cards of such directories is advertised the fact that we attend to probate business in connection with general practice, so that it probably appeared reasonable to the person concecting the scheme that owing to the fact that we are a well known firm here, and did that kind of busi-ness, they would be able to make of Mr. Leete an easier victim.

Mr. Leete seemed very cut up over the matter, and seemed to feel very keenly the fact that he had thus been, to use his own expression, "made a fool of," to the extent of going to the expense of coming out here. He stated that he had, before leaving home, believing the letter to be genuine, permitted its con-tents to be made public through the press and that he could not go back and face his friends and acquaintances and let them know that he had been so easily imposed on. He thereupon re-quested that we keep the matter entirely secret, as he did not wish it to get out that he had been imposed upon, and asked us how long it took an estate

We thereupon informed him that I took about a year in an estate exceed ing $10,000 in value, and that no dis-tribution thereof could be had until after four months had expired, when a partial distribution might be had, and the balance be distributed at the close of the administration. He thereupon informed us that he intended to report to his friends when he returned home that under the laws of California, an estate would have to remain in probate for a year, and that no partial distribu-tion thereof could be had until after the expiration of four months, and asked us if that would be in accordance with our statutory law. We informed him that it would. He stated his reasons for making such a report upon his return home were, that it would enable the matter to die out, and after a year had passed, it would probably no long-er interest people except his own im-mediate friends and relatives, when he could much easier explain the matter, with less embarrassment to himself. the will may be probated and the estate distributed according to the wishes It seemed to worry him very much, and seemed to feel very keenly the fact that he had been so easily imposed We told him that if in his first telegram to us, he had intimated to us that his inquiry was connected with such an estate here, we should have at once put him on his guard, as we could have answered that there was no such estate in existence in the courts of this county. He would then have been saved the expense and trouble o fication on discovering that he had been imposed upon. He seemed to regret that he had not exercised this foresight in the matter, but said the letter to him had every appearance of being genuine, and that he had taken pains to examine some of the directories as to the existence of our firm here, and found that we stood well at the bar

He seemed to think that if he could get something to do here he would like to remove to Los Angeles, rather than to return home and permit the facts to become known, and to that end, he having informed us that he was an expert in the oil business, we introduced him to a large number of our leading business men who are engaged in oil operations in this city and vicinity, and it looked at one time as if he might be able to make some arrangements whereby his services would be secured by them here. We received a number of letters from him after his return home, in all of which he thanked us, and seemed to feel under obligations an heir to an estate under the to us for having shielded him to the California. Wells & Lee to Colonel Fitzsimmons a base fabrication which they had plenty of time to compose between the time of receiving notice of father's death and receipt of the letter which followed. So far as their saying it was a practical joke, that is all nonsense, because the letter was malled from Los Angeles and was directed to him at Newark, N. J., and his name was spelt Leet.

So that anyone intending to perpetrate a joke of this kind would have to be some one who knew him over twenty years ago in Newark; who knew that Carey went out to California and got rich; and who took the trouble to go to California to perpetrate a joke. No such person exists. As to the statement that it was done for the purpose of getting money out of him, that is all nonsense, too, as any one who knew him well enough to know that he spelt his name Leet in Newark twelve years ago and loaned Carey money thirty years ago, and knew all the rest of the particulars given in the letter sent to him from Los Angeles on Feb. 1st, would know very well that they couldn't get enough money out of him to pay them for their trouble.

And another thing, anyone planning such a scheme as that, so involved and

And another thing, anyone planning such a scheme as that, so involved and complicated, would have an eastern agent who would make it his business to look into the financial standing of the intended victim before the letter telling of the bequest would be sent and if the eastern agent found the intended victim didn't have money enough to pay them for their trouble they would pick another victim that

Another thing they would not say in the letter as was said in this case: "We think it advisable for you to come on here at once. Telegraph us when you will arrive so we can have will probated," as that would keep the "man who was to call upon him and get money from him" from carrying out his part of the programme, and would be the quickest way of opening communication between the victim and the parties whose name it is claimed was forged, and thereby spoil the whole game. I consider this matter simply as very transparent effort on the parof those who hold the estate to get control of this bequest, which was hon-estly made to my father, for their own benefit or for the benefit of the other heirs under the will of the late Henry B. Carey. I shall most certainly inves-tigate this matter to the bottom facts, and I feel every confidence that the end will justify me in doing so, and in what have just said. At the time Colone Fitzsimmons returned home my mother was in New York, but I sent for her gave me, acquainting her with the main points in its contents. She expressed herself as horrified at what I had written her, and on reading the letter itself she was nearly overcome She is positive that there is some under hand work out there, and is bound that the matter shall be sifted to the bot tom. She says it is a very easy matter for them to write a letter repudiating the whole thing when they got all father's identification papers and the father's identification papers and the original letter he received in their possession. In her opinion they had plenty of time to decide on this plan of operation after they had received the telegram notifying them of her husband's death, and she considers it a dastardly attempt to defraud her out of what is justly hers. This is a terrible bloom to justly hers. This is a terrible blow us, following so closely on my father's death, and is almost more than we can bear, but we are bound to clear up the mystery which has been thrown around No. 8 Galvanized Tea Kettle..... this matter, and get the real facts.
