NORTON'S BULLETIN. Court Decides That Thomas Keanedy Had No Cause for Action.

SUED THE D., L. & W. COMPANY

at Trial Case and Nonaulted it - Verdict in Hughos-Delaware and Hudson Suit is Upheld.

Judge Simonton's opinion in the case of Thomas Kennedy against the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company for damages was received yesterday by Prothonotary Pryor. The case was called for trial on April 8-last before Judge Simonton, of Harrisburg, sitting in the court of this county, and was nonsuited. Cornellus Smith was attorney for the plaintiff and Judge Willard, ex-Judge Jessup and M. I. Corbett were the legal representatives of the company.

Kennedy lives on the West Side, and was employed for upwards of nine years preceding May 23, 1893, by the company at one of its breakers on the West Side. His occupation was chiefly in hauling ashes from the boiler room and taking coal in with a mule and car. On the date aforementioned he was taking coal into the boiler room and after the car was dumped, he shoved it to the door to hitch the mule to it. The animal was around the corner and when he went to get it, the long-eared reature broke away. Fell Into Hot Water.

Kennedy thought that a piece of sheet on was what caused the mule to get ections, of which it evidently got cared, and he picked it up to carry it where it would be out of sight. While carrying the sheet iron behind the boiler he stumbled into a receptable that contained the exhaust steam from the pumping engine. It contained about three feet of hot water and his leg was And Always Have so burned that he was four months in bed, and not able to work for almost two years. When the plaintiff's case rested court granted a compulsory nonsuit on the ground that Kennedy went into a place where he was not called to go either in the course of his employment or otherwise, and that the company was not therefore responsible for his acci-

The opinion was on the argument to strike off the nonsult and Julge Simonton refuses to strike it off. He says the facts in the case have not changed since he granted the nonsuit.

Hughes Verdiet Sastained. Lackawanna courty was formed no larger verdict has been rendered in the courts here, where the action of damages was on account of the death of a person, than in the case of Mrs. Margaret Hughes against the Delaware and Hudson Canal Railroad empany for the death of her husband. At the Carbon street crossing on the evening of Sept. 3, 1896, William J. Hughes of Luzerne street, husband of the laintiff, was driving over the tracks in a buggy, a train dashed into the outfit and Hughes was injured so badly that he died thirteen days later at the Lackawanna hospital. He left a wife and nine children, another having been born after his death. The suit was called for trial on Apr'l anxious to give a more complete list next 10 of this year, Judge Simonton, of Harrisburg, presiding.
