LION CAUSES A PANIC.

Romeo Escapes from His Cage in New York and There is a Wild Rush-German Band Drops Instruments and Runs. New York, Aug. 8.—Romeo, one of the performing lions at Bentley's old-fashioned circus, exhibiting at Ninety-ninth street and First avenue, escaped Monday and created a panic among the 2,000 persons witnessing the performance. The escape took place shortly before 5 o'clock. Colonel Daniel Boone with his four lions was being shown in the programme. The lions had entered the steel circular cage from the side by means of a small boarded door, leading to the wagons in which the lions live. Colonel Boone had put the lions through the irregular performance and was about to bring one act to a close when he noticed that the younger lions, Commodore and Pompey, began to annoy Romeo, the older lion, by biting his limbs. Romeo objected to this sort of treatment and jumping down from his stool made for the wagon through the narrow door and the boarded entrance. Romeo, however, did not notice that until he ran pell mell into the door. Becoming enraged, he growled and began to strike the wooden panels of the wagon. He did no further damage, however, than to dig his claws half an inch into the woodwork. Finding that he could not get into the wagon, he turned around quickly to re-enter the steel cage, when his whiskered, the steel gate closed, and he stood in the narrow three-foot boarded entrance howling with rage. In the meanwhile the people took in at a glance the situation, and the cord rushed across the ring into the street, shouting and yelling. Children fell down on the ground under the seats and no one stopped to pick them up. The wonder is that there was not a hundred or more killed outright. By this time the cry "lion escaped" had reached the street and everybody rushed away from the scene. The lion, in the meantime, finding himself in close quarters, began pawing the board on either side of him and finally managed to climb to the top of the circus wagon, and there he stood surveying the fleeing people. Directly underneath him sat the band of German musicians, who had been playing for dear life up to this point. When they looked up and saw Mr. Lion ready to spring on them they dropped their instruments and rushed from the tent. As soon as the lion reached the top of the cage Colonel Boone called the circus hands, who responded with prods and everything they could pick up. They could not coax the lion, and finally Colonel Boone secured a lasso and, after several attempts, succeeded in throwing the rope around the lion's neck, with the assistance of half a dozen men he managed to pull the animal backward. The door in the meantime had been opened, and when Romeo had reached the ground he was led into the wagon and the door fastened.

Several years old and formerly used by Barnum & Bailey. He is from tip of nose to end of tail one of the three lions that Carl Theman at the San Antonio fair, Feb. 18, 1894.

Required Three Policemen to Arrest a Mad Kow Terror.

KELLEY WAS ON A RAMPAGE

He Smashed Everything Within His Reach. Happenings of a Day in the North End and Danmore Told in Short Paragraphs.

SOUTH SIDE.

A little boy ran up to Patrolman D. P. Boland yesterday morning and said that his big brother had come home drunk, smashed everything in the house and had an ax ready to kill the first one that dare interfere. The officer went along with the boy and found Michael Kelley, of Mud Row, had been like unto a small cyclone in his parents' home. He first broke the windows, then the dishes, tins, the chairs, chewed the paper off the wall and had accomplished everything he could in the line of demolition. His father in the meanwhile had gone to the office of Alderman C. C. Donovan and swore out a warrant; it was placed in Patrolman Boland's hands, but he decided to see the assistance before trying to arrest young Kelley single-handed, for a scuffle would inevitably result, as the modern Samson is a six-footer and had an ax.

A message was sent to Chief of Police Simpson, who detailed Patrolman Evans and McHale to assist in the arrest. After reconnoitering about the house the three officers caught Kelley and they quickly had the iron on him. He was taken to police headquarters and will have a hearing this morning. His mother says Michael has not done a tap of work in two years, but he is fond of good food and must have it if peace is desired, but he is too strong to work. His father proposes to give him a term in jail.

Mrs. Turnbull, of Grove street, who has been ill for a long time, is very low at the present writing. Word has been received that Mrs. M. E. Close, of Elm street, who went to Philadelphia last week to receive treatment for her eyes, is considerably improved.

OLYPHANT'S DEAR LIGHT

Fraud is Alleged in the Letting Out of Contracts.

AN INJUNCTION IS GRANTED

Claims That Contracts Were Not Awarded to Lowest Bidder—Borough Council Enjoined from Paying Any Money on the Contracts.

There will be a hearing in open court next Monday at 9 a. m. in the equity suit where a preliminary injunction was yesterday granted restraining and enjoining the borough council of Olyphant from making any further payments on the contracts with the Scranton Supply and Machinery company and the General Electric Light company for an electric light plant for the borough.

The suit was yesterday brought by J. M. Schenck, Dominick Howard, and Richard J. Gallagher, accompanied by an affidavit from Joseph A. Dolphin in which he says the contracts for the new plant were made through fraud. The petition for an injunction complains that the borough council did not by any resolution or ordinance accept the bid of the Electric Light company or that of the Supply and Machinery company. Yet the contracts have been let to these two companies, whose bids are $3,000 higher than the other bidder, and who in addition to the price of the contract are to receive the dynamo, engines, piping, etc., of the present plant of the borough.

The property so given away, it is claimed, is worth $3,000. The bids are given in the bill of complaint as follows: For dynamos—General Electric company, $3,175; Onondago Dynamo company, $2,030. For engines, boilers, etc.—Scranton Supply and Machinery company, $7,850; B. W. Paine & Son, $6,350.

What the Petition Recites. The petition further recites that previous to the advertisement for bids the borough was in possession of a valuable electric light plant, and the bill contents that this has been disposed of by giving it to the Scranton Supply and Machinery company and the General Electric company. The plaintiffs claim that no ordinance has been passed authorizing the contracts, nor for the issue and sale of bonds, nor has any such action been approved of by the borough.

The council caused specifications for the engines, boilers and piping advertised for to be prepared by Ellis Simpson, an agent and employee of the Scranton Supply and Machinery company, one of the bidders, says the petition, and that such specifications were so prepared as to call for such material as could only be furnished by said company, thus preventing actual competition, and constituting a fraud upon the citizens and taxpayers of the borough. In pursuance of such fraudulent specifications the bid of the Scranton Supply and Machinery company was largely in excess of the real value of the material proposed to be furnished, and if the borough authorities are allowed to execute and carry out contracts for said material it will result in great loss and damage and expensive litigation.

Hearing on Monday. I. H. Burns and T. J. Dunagan are attorneys for the plaintiff. The defendants must be served with a copy of the complaint and appear to make answer next Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

FISH CREATES A SCENE.

Son of the New York Senator Becomes Intoxicated and Fights. Quoque, L. I. Aug. 8.—The dining room of the Howell house was the scene of a lively time Sunday. Hamilton Fish, jr., son of Senator Fish, who was stopping at the Howell house with his uncle, Rey. Mr. Fish, appeared at dinner intoxicated. He made some remarks to a waiter, and at the first retort struck a blow. Then he followed the waiter into the kitchen. Fish struck the cook, but found his equal in a burly negro servant, who knocked him three times to the floor.

When Fish returned to the dining room he was met by a waiter who had a gold-filled watch with Jewels Eight Works Ladies' or Gentlemen's, cases elegantly and engraved for $10.
