RAILROAD NEWS.

Throughout the whole country and particularly along the lines of the Reading where steam railroads come into competition with electric lines, the railroad companies have found it necessary to cut down their fares to the standard adopted by the electric roads. This has not obtained here as yet, but it will inevitably come and the exces-sive fares that are now charged up and down the valley will be considerably

Many availed themselves of the cheap rates prevailing on account of the rate war and betook themselves on Satur-day to New York and Coney Island. The fare was only $3, including transporta-tion to the beach, which generally costs 40 cents. This would make the price of a ticket to New York $2.50, the lowest rate ever offered from this vicinity with one exception—the opening day of the Erie and Wyoming Valley road, when tickets to New York and return were tickets to New York and return were be meaningless. The term justification sold for $1, which is a about a quarter of is used as the opposite of condemnation.

The little rate skirmish between the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and Lehigh Valley on Saturday, recalis one of the first if not the only event of that kind that Scranton people have been treated to. It is not so in other cities, however, for in some places competing roads are constantly at war and as a result cheap excursion rates are the rule and not the exception. In Washington not long ago there was a lively competition between the Baltimore and Ohio and Pennsylvania to secure the booking of the western students in one of the institutions of learning tates and offering various inducements until finally one of the roads. The little rate skirmish between the ing there. Both roads commenced cut-ting tates and offering various induce-ments until finally one of the roads offered a rate of $5 to Chicago and the other offered the same . . . . . with sleeping berth and parlor car accommoda-tions thrown in. It is needless to say that this road got the business. Again these two roads clashed in a fight for the eastern business from this same school and another war with rather un-usual features resulted. The Baltimore and Ohio, to start the ball a rolling, offered the students a $6.50 rate to New York and return, providing the offer was immediately accepted. As this was about half fare the offer was jumped at and the Baltimore and Ohlo had the satisfaction of seeing the rival coming berth and parlor car accommoda about half fare the offer was jumped at and the Baltimore and Ohlo had the satisfaction of seeing the rival company's agents go to the school and discover every eastern student with a Baltimore and Ohlo ticket in his pocket. But the Pennsylvania road did not take kindly to the manner in which it had been caught napping and resolved to show their competitors that two could play at a game like this. The Pennsylvania agent held his peace and counsel until the day before the departure of the students, when he swooped down upon the school with a satchel full of tickets and a bag of money and offered a ticket on the Pennsylvania line and a dollar for each Baltimore and Ohio ticket that had been purchased. The students, of course, were not interested in the fight except as it concerned A No. 1, and without any histation exchanged their Baltimore and Ohio tickets, sold them readily to a scalper for their original page, 850, and besides capturing the business and not losing anything, they caused their rivals more than a little chagrin by floating their tickets among the scalpers, something that every railroad company utterly desired. It is the in sold upon the scalpers, something that every railroad company utterly desired the rate cutting. ## SABBATH IN THE CHURCHES

Rev. J. A. Anderson Prenches in the Second Presbyterian Church.

MAN IS JUSTIPIED BY PAITH

Was the Topic of His Thoughtful and Scholarly Discourse-Faith Is the Sinner's Act in Laying Hold Upon Christ-Church Notes.

Rev. James A. Anderson, of Le Roy, N. Y., occupied the pulpit at both ser vices of the Second Presbyterian church yesterday and his forcible arguments, supplemented with an excellent delivery, won the sympathy and attention of his auditory.

The text of his morning's sermon was from Romans, iii, 28: "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." He spoke as follows:

"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable. This is truth which the church holds as fundamental, because it is a truth which is divinely revealed. To believers, faith built upon the whole word of God; but every part is not equally vital with the rest. Here and there some grand doctrine arises to prominence, claiming more of our attention because of its greater importance. This is true of none to a greater extent than the one mentioned in my text, 'justification by "This great and grand doctrine is here mentioned in as few words as could possibly express the truth. It is told possibly express the truth. It is here as a foregone conclusion already established—a conclusion drawn from a preceding field. The apostle in previous haptens of this epistle has laid the oundation for the emphatic truth which is here enunciated. Just Before God.

"How can man be just before God?"
Guided by the spirit of truth Paul proceeds to unfold and explain the only way. The necessity of justification is evident from the universal sinfulness and the consequent universal guilt of man. Outward from the center to the furtherest portion of the arc we search in vain for the spotless man, and in de-spair we cry, "Who will show us any

"St. Paul says: 'As it is written, there is none righteous—no, not one; there is none that understandeth, there s none that seek after God.' These are the words of the inspired apostle. It implies the absolute impossibility of justification by works.

"Let us now consider justification, or the nature of its meaning. How are we justified? First, negatively, not by the deeds of the law; secondly, positively, we are justified by faith. The first thought, then, which presents itself to our minds is, What is the nature of justification? To say that it is a docrine of vast importance is only to re-peat what Bible students and every Christian has felt and acknowledged in all ages.
"Justification is an act of God in the exercise of his free grace. Paul warns us not to confuse sanctification with justification. The phrase to justify does not mean to make just. The sinner is not mean to make just. The sinner is not made holy by the act of justifica-tion. Its true Gospel meaning is to de-clare just. It is a judicial act and in that act God acts in a judicial capacity. It proceeds upon the imputation of Christ's righteousness to those who have been given to Christ in covenant

Thomas Miller, of Brooklyn; J. S. Drake, of Philadelphia, and A. L. Hamilton, of San Francisco, visited The Tribune last evening and inspected the workings of the typesetting machines.

A party of young people from Scranton, Carbondale, Prompton and Honesdale and treats him as just. One Kind of Innocence.

"Suppose a criminal to be arraigned for murder at the bar of justice. The judge is seated upon the bench, the trial proceeds, the criminal is convicted. he is sentenced to pay the penalty of his guilt. Just then a message is re-ceived from the executive containing a full pardon. The judge therefore refull pardon. The judge therefore re-leases the prisoner and declares him to be free from the penalty which has rest-ed upon him. His shackles are removed, he goes forth a free man. Now the judge by that act does not make that criminal a just man, he does not make him really innocent of the orime of murder; he simply declares that, le-gally, he is just, that he is no longer

"God is our King, because of what Christ had done for us, forgives our sins and imputes to us the righteousness of Christ and then, as a judge, He declares us just and free. Because of the Saviour's aighteousness being made ours we are freed from all liability to penalty and all rewards which are promised to the perfect and obedient are declared to belong to us. That such is its true Gospel sense, we know, because in many places it would otherwise be meaningles. The Ladles' Ald society of the control of the perfect and obedient are declared to belong to us. That such is its true Gospel sense, we know, because in many places it would otherwise. ible to punishment.
"God is our King, because of what not the opposite of sin or unrighteous-the uplifted cross, crying 'My God! My God! Why hast thou forsaken me?" God! Why hast thou forsaken me?"

"It is imputed to man, and man is treated as just because Christ has satis-fied the law for him, he is no more liable to punishment than Christ Him

What the Apostle Says.

What the Apostle Says.

"The text declares that we are justified by faith. If Christ's perfect righteousness is positively the only ground of justification, how can faith also be said to be a ground of justification?

Then we conclude, says the apostle, 'that a man is justified by faith.' The simple explanation of this is that faith is the instrumental ground of instificais the instrumental ground of justifica-

"Faith is the sinner's act in laying "Faith is the sinner's act in laying hold upon Christ. It is the means. Such is the relation which faith sustains to justification. It is the instrument and not the meritorious ground of justification.

"Peace with God—this is the grand result. The curse is removed, the Di-

"Peace with God—this is the grand result. The curse is removed, the Divine anger appeased, our Father reconciled. All that was once gloomy and foreboding disappears, the smiles of heaven beam down like the sun's golden rays, the thunderings of the law are hushed, for all its demands are satisfied. Justice no longer clampers for fied. Justice no longer clamors for our blood, for its sword has been bathed in the blood of the atoning lamb.

our blood, for its sword has been bathed in the blood of the atoning lamb.

"And now, standing beneath the cross, we seek our Heavenly Father, not frowning upon us on account of our sin and guilt, but clothed in garments of love and mercy, holding out to us all the blesisngs and benefits which flow from justification and at the same time beckoning us on and supplicating us to come and rest on His bosom forever. Looking up to the throne of the Majesty on High we meet no gaze of vengrance, are intimidated by no threats; we are not burled back into despair, but we behold the everlasting God who so loved us that he sent His only begotten Son and sacrificed Him for us. He is bending over us with a father's pity and a father's tender care, He says to us 'Be ye faithful unto the end and I will give you a crown of life.'"

These stories created much talk, but fortunately there was no foundation to them. A Tribune reporter traveled from almost the center to the circumference and in the entire plane of territory did not meet a single person who knew anything definite about either of the casualties. Lieutenant Zang heard the rumors and instructed the patrolmen to investigate therough. the patrolmen to investigate thoroughly, but there was found, after due and illigent inquiries, to be nothing in the stories. Some practical joker, perhaps, has been working at his trade.

Fell Off a Scaffold.

Carpenters were erecting a scaffold alongside a building at the North works Saturday in order to repair the roof of the structure. Among the workmen was Sehastian Fischer, of 519 Hemlock street, and in an unaccountable manner he fell to the ground on a heap of stones. He became unconscious and was quickly removed to the Moses Tay-lor hospital. After a few hours he brightened up and an examination of his body failed to disclose any frac-tured bones. He will be able to resume work in two weeks.
