They are very indignant and may yet carry out very indignant and may yet carry out their intentions. All sympathize with Miss Tucker and there is much regret that such a thing should happen in their village. The school board of that place have met and, through their attorney, will prosecute Mrs. Carpenter as far as the law will allow. They say that Miss Tucker's course was fully warranted and do not think she punished the child unduly. Mrs. Carpenter was arrested by them and taken to Forest City for a hearing. City for a hearing.

STREET CARS SMASHED.

Accidents on the Electric Road Are Very Numerous. Friday night marked another of the many collisions and accidents which have taken place on the electric rail-road lately. Although no one was hurt it may be considered very lucky that all came out so fortunate. The accident was a collison between cars 31 and No. 3. No. 31 was going north and was followed closely by No. A passenger on No. 31 wished to alight and the conductor rang the bell for the motorman to stop the car. He did stop it, but so suddenly that the rear car crew had no nowledge of the fact, and could not stop in time, and into No. 31, severely smashing No one was hurt, however, but the cars will need considerable repairing before they can be used.

Bridgeport, Aug. 11.—Upon the heels of the news of the marriage of P. T.
Barnum's widow to the Greek, Kallias Bey, comes the announcement that the showman's widow disposed of her property before her second marriage.
Mrs. Barnum first disposed of her residence, Marina. All of her own valuables were sent abroad. Some bulky furniahings were placed in a New York safe deposit concern. Horses and car-clety of this city.

The marriage settlement was so drawn that in no event does the Bey come in possession of his bride's property. If she dies without children the property will revert to her natural heirs, and the annuity of $40,000 provided by the will of the showman will cease. She can if she chooses make a will hereafter and include or leave out her husband.

She Tripped Around New York an Sow What She Looked For.

New York Sun. New York Sun.

A petite young damsel, with a face of the most marked Japanese type, who often tripped along Broadway and other streets within the past fornight, has left the city for foreign parts. No one who saw her here had any doubt that she was a Jap; for all of her features, the eyes, nose, mouth, and forehead, resembled those of the Tokio damsels whose features are familiar through the pictures that have been seen by everybody. Her costume was unique, everybody. Her costume was unique and she carried over her left arm a light shawl of gay colors, neatly folded Upon her arrival here she took up her quarters at a Broadway hotel, but she went out every morning after breakfast on her perambulations. She walked rapidly with mincing steps, and was seen not only upon Broadway, but on the Bowery, along the docks, about the parks, in the ghetto, and other places everywhere. She would gaze curiously at a tall edifice, or a hotel, or a grand domicile, would walk through a big department store, would walk through a big department store, would visit the shipping, would stop when she saw a gang of men at work, and seemed to take in all the spectacles of interest in the city. She was seen in the Catholic cathedral, in two Presbyterian churches, and in a lawish synasome. She was allowed. Jewish synagogue. She was always alone, but would put a question to any stranger, man or woman, whom she chanced to meet. She rode in the trol-leys, the elevated trains, and the horse cars. She looked at people frankly, in an inquiring way; she scanned the dresses of the New York women. She dresses of the New York women. She visited theaters, museums, libraries, and Coney Island. At the hotel she ordered piquant dishes for dinner, and on Sunday last she drank something from a small bottle which she had brought to the dining table. When the guests at the hotel asked any walter who she at the hotel asked any walter who she was they were told that she was a Jap. A lady who ventured to address her one morning at breakfast could learn noth-ing about her, excepting that she spoke English readily, but with a curious ac-

A reporter who had happened to know of her arrival here a fortnight ago, and who was aware of many of her movements about town, caught a sight of her last Wednesday aboard a steamer bound for Europe. It was ascertained that one of the ship's officers was an acquaintance of hers. He smiled when asker whether she was a Jap. He re-plied that she was not, but was a real Scotch lassie, born in the Orkney Isles, an all-around globe trotter, and a meman all-around globe trotter, and a mem-ber of the staff of a London weekly paper, for which she had come to New York that she might write a sketch of the place and tell all about it. Just before coming here, she had been in British Honduras, and had written an account of life there for her paper. Within a year she had visited half a dozen or more countries in three condozen or more countries in three con-tinents for the purpose of "writing them up" for the entertainment of the British public, as she will write up New York. She spends but a week or two in any country, and always gives her first impressions of it without caring what its own people may think. She has a bent for traveling, and has never met with any trouble in all her travels. She had some relatives in New York, but never went near them. "As for her accent," said the purser, "It is the Orkney Scotch, just like mine, and that is all there is about it. As to her look-ing like a Japanese, I cannot say, for I never was in Japan! but there are plenty of Scotch lassies up in the Ork-neys who look just like her; and you could not tell her from my wife, for that is what she is! As for the Japanese shawl, it is nothing of the kind, but is Highland tartan, and so is another part of her dress. She is a ready writer, but hardly ever speaks to anybody. As to what she thinks of New York, she has already told me that she likes some things about it, but she will say more on the passage over, after her manu-script is ready for the printer. She did not want to know any of the people, for she could see through them without knowing them."

And it is thus that the romance of the fabulous Japanese damsel who recently tripped all over the city, and was seen by thousands of New Yorkers, has been reduced to reality. She is a British globe-trotter, who writes for the press, and is married to a ship's purser

ARRESTED FOR MURDER.

Edwards Accused of Killing John Gil-martin in New York in 1892.

Kingston, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Detective French, of the New York Central office, came to this city today with a bench warrant for the purpose of taking to New York Edward Edwards, a colored who is wanted in that city for murder.

Edwards is now in the county jail here awaiting the action of the grand jury for assault in the second degree. Detective French says that on May 8, 1892, Edwards, who was known by the names of Jockey Dan and Dan Williams, while standing in front of a lodging house at 10 Pell street, New York, became offended because some water was thrown on him and rushed up stairs in the building and stabbed and killed John Gilmartin. He escaped, and nothing was heard from his until recently, when it was learned he was in cently, when it was learned he was in the Ulster county jail.

Edwards, who says he came from Maryland to work in Frank Vandeu-sen's brickyard at Glasco, declares that sen's brickyard at Giasco, declares that he has not been in New York in four years, and is not guilty of the charge. He has been placed in a cell, where he will remain until the Ulster county authorities are through with him. On May 18 he knocked down his landlord with a chair because he objected to Edwards having a dance in his house. Edwards says that two tramps, whom he knocked down in jail because they would not assist in keeping the jail clean, made up the story that he was a murderer. Chief of Police Hood, of this city, is certain that Edwards is the man wanted by the central office. The New York police arrested several negroes at the time of the murder, but were unable to connect any of them with the crime.

A French engineer has suggested a new method of roughly estimating car-bon in steel by preparing two porcelain tablets, together with six steel pencils having each a different, but known, per-centage of carbon. The piece of metal to be examined is then drawn over one of the porcelain tablets, and the same thing is done with each of the steel pencils. The metallic marks then left are dissolved with a 12.5 per cent. solu-tion of the double chloride. Magnetism as a Curative in Chronic Diseases.

It is no longer a doubt, but a demonstrated fact, that the power of magnetism and electricity as used in the cure of chronic diseases is the greatest auxiliary to medicine that is known to science at the present day, and some of the most wonderful cures have been performed by the proper use of the above mentioned powers. Dr. F. B. Smith and staff have employed those powers in the cure of chronic diseases for many years with the most remarkable good results, as the following case will show: Mrs. Groate, a being itself a germicide, dispels it lowing case will show: Mrs. Groate, a lady about 50 years old, came to Dr. Smith lady about 50 years old, came to Dr. Smith and staff. She was suffering with stricture of the throat for about eight years. For over six years she had not swallowed a mouthful of solid food. She had been compelled to live on tea, coffee, milk and the thinest kind of soups. She had been doctoring for years, but found no relief. She was told by several doctirs that there was no cure, that all she could hope for was death, which would come by degrees. was death, which would come by degrees or, in other words, that the passage to he stomach would close and she would starte to death. Living in utter despair a frien called her attention to an advertisemen in the paper of the cures made by Dr Smith and staff, and contrary to the advice of the family physician she com-menced taking magnetic treatments. She was told that she had simply thrown her money away, that no doctor could cure her, but despite of all those protestations she is today a living testimonial to the healing virtues of magnetism, for she was absolutely and permanently cured of her affliction by Dr. Smith and staff. If you are suffering with any complaint call on those doctirs at 505 Linden street, opposite the court house, and be cured. Consultation free from 9 to 5 daily except Sunday.
