Could Not Guarantee to Provide Such Accommodations for the Delegates as Scranton Can - How News Was Received in the Convention.

An honor which the entire city feels proud of is the appointing of Scran-ton as the place for holding the next annual state convention of the Chris-tian Endeavor union. The Electric City was opposed by Allentown, but the delegates favorable to the latter place could not assure the committee on place that Allentown could offer a suitable hall for the convention.

The supporters for Scranton conveyed the assurance that a tent amply large to seat the more than 6,000 delegates that represent the unions of the state will be provided. Another mat-ter that the bringing of the convention here involves, and it is no small task to properly undertake, is the arrange-ment for the accommodation of the delegates while they will be in this

It will be necessary to seek among more than several hundred private families, who can arrange to entertain from one to three of the visitors. The hotels would be taxed to their utmost notels would be taxed to their utmost to care for even a small fraction of them. Realizing the magnitude of the task that confronts them, the members of the city union had no sooner heard that the committee on place had decid-ed in favor of Scranton and it had been ratified by the convention, than they went to work earnestly to map out a plan to provide for the visitors when they shall come here in 1896.

Greatest Gathering in the City.

At an early date subcommittees will be appointed who will be intrusted with various details, and the hotels and private houses will be canvassed with a view toward securing information as to the number of delegates that can be accommodated, but from the statistics laid before the committee at Erie, the local committee feels that no difficulty will be experienced. The coming convention of Christian Endeavorers in 1896 will be the largest gathering of delegates ever assembled in Scranton, and it means that they will be all young church workers, representing the flower of the young religious element of the state. It will be a signal honor, and it shall be the earnest desire of all to make the coming of the delegates a visit worthy of Greatest Gathering in the City. ing of the delegates a visit worthy of Scranton was heard first and was represented by Rev. W. H. Stubblebine, pastor of the Calvary Reformed church, and C. E. Daniels, both members of the committee; S. S. Hoover, Upper Lehigh, vice president of the Tri-County union, and John T. Ball, of Honesdale, in behalf of adjoining counties. The following is what The Tribune's special correspondent has to say about the way the report was received in the convention that Scranton had been selected by the committee:

"At 11 o'clock Saturday morning, when the report was about to be made, rain began to fall gently, and when the announcement that Scranton was vic-torious was made the shower increased in force so that little could be heard in the tent. The scene was described by the Erie Herald in these words: The announcement was the signal for an awful tumult. Scranton on one side of the tent started their rallying song and in addition the unearthly yell which they have adopted was sent into the air and there was a perfect con-glomeration of sounds, cheers, yells and songs.' The leaders of the rival forces mounted a table and with clasped hands sang: 'Blest Be the Tle That Binds,' amid tumultous applause.

WILL STAMP OUT THE LIE.

An Action in Trespass Begun by Deputy Warden Thomas J. Price.

Warden Thomas J. Price.
An action in trespass to recover $1,000 damages for slanderous words spoken was begun Saturday by Attorney H. C. Reynolds for Thomas J. Price, deputy warden of county jail, against John Thomas. It is charged that Thomas while in the county jail last March said to Oscar D. Ehrgood, another prisoner, that "Thomas Price had been arrested for stealing $10 from a man he was shaving, while a barber with a shop at North Main avenue."

The basis of the rumor is that a man bearing Mr. Price's name, who operated a barber shop at Patagonia and ran it for two weeks, was arrested on this charge. The story appeared in the paper that Thomas Price, a barber of the West Side, robbed a man whom he was shaving. At that time Worden was shaving. ## GATHERED HERE AND THERE.

Last Saturday evening a limb of the law who is temporarily engaged in business in this city, wandered into the target shooting gailery on Penn avenue to try his hand at cracking the buil's eye with the small rifles used in the gallery. Desiring some incentive to make the pleasure interesting, the lawyer, who, by the way, is an excellent shot, invited a quiet looking man standing near the counter to join him in a match. The quiot man readily consented and the fun commenced. The lawyer at the start fired rather carelessly just to give his opponent a show, and his score was beaten. He then began to realize that he would be obliged to use more care. His improved record was outdistanced by the quiet man. The lawyer began to get feverish and anxious, but his best shots were always beaten by the quiet man who easily defeated every score made. After trying in vain to make a score that would equal the shots of the quiet stranger, the lawyer finally threw down his gun in disgust and left the place hurriedly. As no questions were asked it is probable that the legal marksman does not know today, unless his eye falls upon this item, that his quiet opponent in the shooting match was Private W. W. Youngs, the champion shot of the state rifle teams.

Today the rifle team of the Thirteenth regiment will go to Mt. Gretna to compete in the state matches with teams from all of the regiments of the state. Tomorrow and Wedinesday will be devoted to practice shooting and on Thursday the contests will begin. From the best marksmen in the state, as shown by the records made in these matches, a team will be made up to shoot in the interstate matches at Sea Girt, N. J. The men who will go to Mt. Gretna today to represent the Thirteenth are: Sergeants Watkins and Cullen and Privates Youngs, Stout and Jurisch. The team will be in charge of Lieutenant Frank Robling, who is temporary inspector of rifle practice.

Ernest Albert, the scenic artist, who is doing the scenery for "The Wizard of the Nile," says that this opera requires a more careful work than any contract he has ever undertaken simply because the Egyptian subject offers such an opportunity for effective coloring, and Mr. Albert is determined that there shall be no "artistic incongruitles," at least as far as the scenery is concerned.
