And Now Mrs. Saunders Wants Damages for the Same. The buying of the Arnold property on North Main street by A. Berry has re-sulted in a sult for damages between two well-known women. At the time the property was sold it was occupied by Mrs. Saunders, who kept a boarding house. Mrs. Saunders had planted the garden in the rear of the lot and it gave promise of a bountiful harvest. But Mrs. Saunders was not to reap it. When Mrs. Saunders moved from the place it was agreed that the garden

When Mrs. Saunders moved from the place it was agreed that the garden should not be spoiled. However, when the old house came to be torn down, part of it was moved upon the garden and when the owner came to gather in her harvest she found nothing. She at once proceeded to Alderman Bunnell, where she asked for damages. The amount claimed is $20, which Mrs. Saunders says is less than the crop was worth, letting alone the time spent in raising it. Mrs. Arnold says the garden had been ruined before the garden had been ruined before the house was moved. The hearing has been postponed, as Mrs. Arnold's lawyer is out of the city.
