which is now fortunately ended that Senator Quay owes today's victory to the intimidating influences of one of the most consummate bluffr on record in American politics. An abundance of formidable testimony can be adduced in suport of the assertion that at the roll-call of delegates at the Quay caucus last night, at which there were 159 ostensible responses, less than a majority of actual, pledged delegates replied. The remainder represented cleverly manipulated padding, which within an hour became the basis of a sysbusiness, but somehow, our thoughts tematic and aggressive claim of victory preferred with the energy of desation all along the line. This claim worked with untiring persistence weak-kneed delegates, and had, in several instances, the desired effect. So sure were the opposition of victory that at their caucus this morning, held less than two hours prior to the opening of

On Aug. 22, when the Adirondack was about thirty miles west of the cape, a large white-painted sloop was seen bearing directly for the Cuban coast. There was great activity among the men on board, and what looked like kegs of powder and firearms were stacked up in the stern of the vessel. The name of the craft could not be as-certained; but it was evident that she was carrying materials of war to the insurgent forces on the island. who has been a vigilant observer of the fray since its incipiency, is a fair summary of opinion on this point. Said he: "It has hitherto often been suspected, but this fight proves that Matthew Stanley Quay is the master politician of the century." Opinion is divided as to the consequences of today's battle on state issues. While many opponents of Mr. Quay scout the genuineness of the senator's "reform" programme, as mapped out in the plank which he caused to be conspicuously placed in the platform, there are some who say it would be just like Mr. Quay to devote the later years of his life to the accumulation of prestige more substantial and permanent than comes from reputation as an expert player of the game of pawns called politics. At any rate, his new attitude, however inspired, is taken by a considerable number to mean that the senator has begun to realize the growing disadvantages of ignoring the everywhere increasing public sentiment in favor of cleaner politics and a fairer adjustment of the various departments of the civil service; and that he is now nore willing than formerly to court this sentiment, and, if possible, to make it a helpful factor in his future political battles. Senator Cameron's Position.

With reference to Senator Cameron the opinion very generally prevails tonight that his junior colleague has at last determined to "hoe his own roe," and will accord the Lochiel statesman a similar privilege. Quay, it is said by his confidential advisers, was seriously disappoointed in the apparent apathy displayed by Mr. Cameron in this fight of a generation, and is disposed to enter into a substantial demonstration of political reciprocity should the Pennylvania advocate of silver come up for re-election. The acceptance by Senator Quay in today's convention of Representative Frank Riter's stiff 'sound money"resolution is interpreted by those who share this belief as forming formal notice to Mr. Cameron that their political intimacy of the past is not to stand between Quay and the possibility of his overthrow on the Cameron issue, two years hence.

It is quite generally conceded that the narrowness of Mr. Quay's escape has strongly disposed him toward a moderation of those methods which have in late years grown distasteful to candidate.

the conservative element. It is known that he had no sooner won control of the convention than he began, in a The convention was announced to meet at 11 o'clock, but it was within five minutes of the noon hour when State Chairman Gilkeson rapped for order. Prior to this, a Pittsburg crowd of 100 or more who had retained pos-session of the Opera house, in the in-terest of Gilkeson forces, since yester-day afternoon, they being placed therethe convention than he began, in a quist manner, to conciliate certain in-fluences that might have remained out of sympathy with his management of the ensuing campaign. If left to him-self, the senator, it is believed, would not have gone to such lengths in this fight as he has gone to under the Dahusiasts, with banners exulting ove the overthrow of the "combine," passed just at this moment, and afforded another provocative for tumultuous cheer-

In the mean time, the Hastings people, in secret caucus, discussed the dangers which would result not only to their own judicial ticket but also to the party at large in the event of the holding of two conventions, and re-solved to avert the risk of possible scenes of excitement in the convenions by agreeing to the harmony proramme of that ensanguined-haired apostle of reconcilation, ex-Chairman Cooper. Thus, when the delegates assembled, all was as smooth as a toboggan slide, and almost as rapid.

L. S. R. PROCEEDINGS OF THE DAY.

The Convention Is Marked by the Entire Harmony That Prevailed. Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 28.-The most bitter fight that has ever been experi-enced in the ranks of Pennsylvania Republicanism is at an end, and Senator Quay is victorious. The Beaver states-man swept everything before him, and magnanimously consented in the inter-est of party harmony, to the nomina-tion of, the six Republican Superior court judges, as the administration forces had desired. The convention, which lasted a scant three hours, no recess being taken, was marvelously har-monious. Judging by the way the Quay and Hastings forces hobnobbed within a half hour after the convention had been called to order, the respective been called to order, the respective chiefs getting the example by consulting with one another, it was not evi-dent that the party had been rent in twain during the past two months and up to the very day of the convention by factionalism that was unprecedented for its bitterness. The success of Senator Quay is re-garded as a masterly political achieve-ment; he has secured control of the party organization in the Keystone state, has had himself elected state chairman to succeed an active political opponent, the latter placing the sena-tor in nomination, and literally was the power at the convention. The fight beween the factions and the unlooked for
