IN THE THEATERS.

Katie Emmett, whose name has become famous in her impersonations of boy characters, returns this season to her favorite line of business. Her new play "Chat, an American Boy," abounds with startling climaxes, and sensational effects. Miss Emmett's characterization of the street gamin is devoid of all roughness and any hint of vulgarity. She has what all successful stars must be possessed of, personal magnetism. This evening she will be seen at the Academy of Music supported by an excellent company.

Tom Cravan's famous London play. "The Stowaway." is one of the most successful melodramas even given in this country. It has remained secure in popular esteem for half a dozen years, and still shows no signs of waning popularity. Its success may be atributed solely to its unquestionable merit and the excellent manner in which it has always been played and mounted. The real burglars, Spike Hennessey and Kid 'McCoy, are interesting members of the company, which includes well-known actors and actresses. At the Academy of Music Saturday night.

Of "The Engineer," the attraction which opens the season of Davis' theater next Monday, the New York Press of Aug. 20, says: "There was lots of fun and plenty of drama in "The Engineer," which was presented at the People's theater last night. In Messrs, Bretram and Willard's pretty play there are several thrilling situations, which bring down the house every time. The curtain is rung up on a time. The curtain is rung up on a scene in a little western town. An engineer loves a girl who was adopted by his father. So does the villian whose life has been saved by the engineer. The girl has a fortune. The villain plays for it and attempts to murder his benefactor in the engineroom of the mill. The girl comes to the rescue. The engineer, disguised, acts rescue. The engineer, disguised acts as the villain's companion in crime and helps him rob a safe. The villain finally is run to earth and the girl and the engineer find that each loves the other."

Dan'l A. Kelly has made a great success in his latest venture, "Outcasts of a Great City." The new play is a sensational comedy-drama of the purest type. The cast is unusually strong, and the scenic accessories remarkably elaborate. The great feature of the play, the Brooklyn bridge illuminated, showing Brooklyn in the distance, eclipses in stage realism and distance, eclipses in stage realism and detailed perfection any dramatic ap-nurienance vet attempted. At the Academy Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and Wednesday matinee. Prices, 10, 20, 30 and 50 cents.
