PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S PART

At Gray Gables He Will Press a Button Which Will Put the Machinery in Motion - This Vicinity Will Bo Represented at the Exposition.

The exposition at Atlanta will open today. It is one of the greatest days in the history of the south. Business will be suspended in the city and the most elaborate decorations will appear on every side. At 2.30 this afternoon President Cleveland will touch a button at Gray Gables that will start the machinery in motion and the colossal exhibition will be thrown open.

One of the chief features of the pro-gramme will be the exposition ode by Frank L. Stanton, whose songs are known and loved all over the land known and loved all over the land and have made that great paper, the Atlanta Constitution, a household word in America and Europe. The ode will not be read by Mr. Stan-ton himself, but by Colonel Albert 'Howell, jr., of the Atlanta bar. The following poem, the last from his pen, published in the big Sunday issue of the Atlanta Constitution is so charac-

the Atlanta Constitution, is so charac-teristic, so thoroughly musical and ex-pressive of the feeling now existing in the south that it will be welcomed in this place by the readers of The Trib-

The mountains rise an' kiss the skles—the fields are bathed in light,
An' the roses—they jest revel in the sunshine full an' free,
An' they're comin' back from Sherman—from Sherman an' the sea!

Talk about your battlefields-why, ain't a single sign! The blue has come to Dixle, an' the boys are all in line! An' here's the new Atlanta, with the laurel on her brow-The boys have all been fightin" but-you our't to see 'em now!

Due to Colonel Hemphill.

It is really due to the efforts of Col-onel Hemphill, editor of the Constitu-tion, that the exposition is assured. It was near Christmas of '93, when reading a despatch regarding the Cot-ton Palace exposition of Waco, Texas, that the idea of a great exposition at Atlanta was formed. Colonel Hemp-hill's plan was eagerly accepted by all the great men of the south, and thus in less than two years the mighty en-terprise is an accomplished fact. It may be of interest to the people of this region to know that much of the work of grading Piedmont park has been done by convict knor. The convicts were furnished by the county, and the assistance thus rendered has been invaluable. They have labored in the rain, and the heavy carts have been dragged through almost impassable mud to construct the beautiful lake. Chara Meer, which is the pride of all interested in the exposition. Eighty million gallons of water have been re-quired to fill the lake, and this great amount has been supplied by the city.
