LIQUOR DEALERS' TROUBLE.

The Stamps on Empty Barrels Not Destroyed.

Several of the liquor dealers of the city were on Monday served with a notice ordering them to appear before Collector Grant Herring and answer to the charge of not having destroyed the revenue stamps on the barrels of liquor when empty.

Those who received no notice were L. J. Rokkop, D. Finnegan, M. J. Aiello, J. B. McTigue and J. H. Byrne. These notices caused quite an excitement among the men who sell liquor in Carbonale.

Two weeks ago Special Gauger D. Cool, of Philadelphia, was in the city, this being one of those in the Twelfth Revenue district which he was ordered to investigate to see if the liquor dealers upheld the law.

As a result, eight of the local dealers were served notices for failing to obliterate or efface or destroy all stamps on empty barrels. This failure to keep the law is a serious offense, and for which the offender is liable to be prosecuted in the United States courts and may receive a heavy punishment if convicted.

However, as it is more often through neglect and carelessness than for any criminal purpose that the stamps are not destroyed, and for this reason when a case of the kind is reported, the fact is given to the collector and it depends upon him whether the persons will be prosecuted or whether the case is compromised.

When Mr. Cool visited the cellars of our leading liquor dealers in eight of them he found cases with the stamp still undestroyed. It is his duty to report all such cases at once, without listening to any defense on the part of the person accused.

The men were all on hand at the time appointed, and the cause for not destroying the stamps explained. All said it was due to carelessness or forgetfulness and Collector Herring evidently believed them, for after hearing the story of each he decided to compromise the cases.

Some of the dealers think that the investigation is part of a well laid scheme, and are very suspicious. They say that they will repay the persons in the near future with something equally as undesirable.
