BLUE AND GRAY MEETING

Notable Gathering on the Battlefield of Chickamauga.

HEROES OF NORTH AND SOUTH

The Governors of Thirteen States Take Part in the Exercises--An Assemblage of Greatness Unequaled in History--Various Addresses.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 19.—After an interval of thirty-two years the Blue and the Gray today again met around the crescent of Snodgrass hill on the battlefield of Chickamauga, but not, as then, amid the mist of leaden hail which marked those dreadful days of 1863, making the conflict the most astrous in its casualties to those concerned which history knows.

Under one flag, are united host, devoted to the advancement and promotion of one common country, the veteran foemen of a third of a century ago met today to dedicate as a national park the ground made sacred by the blood of heroes who fought at their side.

The exercises were held on an immense stand built near the observation point of Snodgrass hill, the site of the deadly opening day conflict. Besides the federal officials, including Secretaries Herbert and Smith, Postmaster General Wilson, Attorney General Harmon and congressman present, there were the following governors of states, some being accompanied by their staffs and members of the commission from the several states appointed to act with the national commission in locating monuments and markers:

W. C. Cates, Alabama; W. Y. Atkinson, Georgia; J. P. Altgeld, Illinois; Claude Matthews, Indiana; E. M. Morrill, Kansas; F. Greenhalge, Massachusetts; J. T. Rusk, Michigan; S. Holcomb, Nebraska; G. T. Werts, New Jersey; Levi P. Morton, New York; William McKinley, Ohio; Peter Turney, Tennessee; Urban A. Woodbury, Vermont.

Promptly at noon a salute of forty-four guns announced the beginning of the execution of the programme so long arranged and looked forward to. Music by the band of the Fourteenth regiment in camp on the field followed, and at subsequent intervals it also was heard in other places.

A gathering never equaled. The gatherings on the stage as the cannon began its booming was one that was probably never equaled in the country and the gathering of spectators was worthy of it. They numbered thousands, who applauded their favorites as they appeared. The most notable arrival and reception was that which brought together Governor McKinley and General James Longstreet, the confederate general. A unique picture was the greeting between Governor Morton, of New York, and his successor in the vice-president's chair, Mr. Stevenson. There was a congestion of greatness on the platform, which almost baffled the best efforts of Generals Fullerton and Boynton to relieve, but finally they were all duly set in order and a semblance of quiet secured.

General J. S. Fullerton, chairman of the National Park association, and as such, Secretary Lamont's representative charged with the duty of directing the deliberations, introduced Vice-President Stevenson, who presided in the absence of the secretary of war.

Vice President's Speech.

Mr. Stevenson was received with loud applause as he came to the front of the platform. The vice-president said: "This is the fitting hour for the august occasion we now inaugurate. Today, by act of congress, the United States, the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military park is forever set apart for all common to the great nation for all ages to all American people. The day is auspicious. It notes the anniversary of one of the greatest battles known to history. Here, in the dread tribunal of the last resort, valor contended against valor. Brave men struggled and died for the right as God gave them to see the light.

Thirty-two years have passed and our eyes now behold the public spectacle of the honored survivors of the great battle coming together in peace and friendship. They meet not in deadly conflict, but as brothers under one flag--fellow citizens in common country, all grateful to God that in the supreme struggle the government of our fathers--our common heritage--was triumphant and that to all of the coming generations of our countrymen it will remain an indivisible union of peace and friendship.

In a large sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men of both sides who struggled here have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. I will detain you no longer from listening to the eloquent words of those who were participants in the bloody struggle--the sharers alike in its danger and its glory.

At the conclusion of Mr. Stevenson's speech, prayer was offered by the Rev. Bishop Gilbert, of Tennessee, after which the great audience of 30,000 people joined in singing "America" and "And Lang Syne."

When the strains of the sweet Scotch melody died away, General John M. Palmer, the venerable senator from Illinois, was introduced, and he made an eloquent address.

Senator Gordon's Belle.

When Senator John B. Gordon, of Georgia, was introduced he was applauded to the echo and his consoling speech upon the issues of the war earned him further prolonged applause. When he concluded, cries arose for Longstreet, and that old veteran, still erect and vigorous despite his 78 years, was introduced by Vice-President Stevenson. Before he began, however, General Gordon again claimed the attention of the crowd. Holding aloft his hand he said: "I have here a button, drenched with blood, taken from the coat of a poor soldier, George Lytle, author of the well-known lines beginning 'I Am Dying, Egypt Dying,' who fell on this immortal field. It was cut by his coat by C. Lindley, color-bearer of the Tenth Mississippi regiment, who authorizes me to present to any friend of that hero who will accept of such a relic and hand it down to posterity."

"From this battlefield," he continued, "I appeal to my countrymen in gray and blue, to their sons, to prevent any future occupation by Great Britain in Venezuela and resist any further coercion by England of Nicaragua, and in fairness to the president and his able secretary of war, to have the secretary of the navy who fought with me at the Wilderness in 1861, I will say, had we been fully prepared, that British sunbat would never have landed at Corinto. If we had possessed a navy strong enough to cope with England, the American flag would have floated from the topmast, the decks cleared for action, the bristling guns from an American man-of-war hourly thundered the grand doctrine of 1812. There is a lesson in the occurrence, strengthen the army and navy, look to the armaments of our warships and render more efficient our sea and coast defenses. In other words make the United States the first naval power of the world and when another landing by England at Corinto is attempted, when European domination in Venezuela is essayed, and when British greed in Nicaragua is re-

The closing address. Griggs was renewed for favorite governors, but Vice President Stevenson presented Lieutenant General Gordon, who spoke briefly. The closing address of the convention was delivered by John W. Griggs, who spoke for an hour and a half. He was warmly applauded and his departure was taken by many of the audience to mean the completion of the programme. SPANISH CRUISER SUNK

More Than Forty Lives Lost Off the Port of Havana.

Havana, Sept. 19.—The cruiser Barcelona was wrecked at midnight last night by coming in collision with the merchant steamer Mortera in the canal at the entrance of the port of Havana. General Delgado Parajo and several other officers and thirty-six of the crew were drowned.

The Barcelona was a third-class cruiser of five heavy and two 12-inch guns. She was of 1,000 tons displacement and 1,875 horse-power engines, and was built in 1876. She left this port at midnight with a cargo of 1,000 tons of sugar. On reaching the mouth of the harbor close to Morro Castle she came in collision with the Mortera, which was a steamer engaged in the coastwise trade. The Mortera struck the cruiser on the starboard side, and so badly injured her that she sank at once. The Mortera, though badly damaged, stood off to give assistance to those on board the Barcelona, and with her boats saved the greater part of the crew.

General Parajo, Captain Ybanez, First Lieutenant Lopez Alcala, Soto and Cano, Dr. Martin, Pucyo, the purser, Cruzuela, and thirty-six of the crew were drowned. Aided by Camp Gaston was saved. Victor Aroca, a lieutenant of the officers, had his leg broken but was picked up by a boat from the Mortera.

MRS. LANGTRY'S JEWELS.

Stolen from Her Bank in London on a Forged Order.

London, Sept. 19.—During the absence of Mrs. Langtry from the continent a forged order was presented at her bank, the Bloomsbury street branch of the Union Bank of London, for her jewel box, which contained $200,000 worth of gems. The box was delivered to the bearer of the order.

Mrs. Langtry returned home a few days ago, and today when she sent to the bank for her jewels she learned that the box had been delivered on Aug. 24. She immediately drove to the office of Sir George Lewis, Q. C., her legal adviser, and informed him that she had taken place. Scotland Yard was at once notified of the robbery. Up to the present time no trace has been found of the missing jewels.

There is belief that the value placed upon them is not exaggerated, as they have been long famous and included three brilliants, one being of diamonds and pearls, another of diamonds and rubies, and a third of diamonds and turquoises, besides several necklaces and ringers. The box, in fact, contained nearly all the gems and precious stones that Mrs. Langtry possessed.

The order upon which it was delivered was written on paper marked with the name of Mrs. Langtry, No. 31 Pont street, S. W.

PHILADELPHIA NOT ALONE

Other Cities of Pennsylvania Will Probably Be "Pencused."

PURIFICATION FOR PITTSBURG

A Strong Pressure Is Being Made to Have the Committee Visit the Smoky City of the Allegheny Region. Municipal Legislation Needed.

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—Philadelphia will not have the exclusive attention of Senator Penrose's investigating committee, for from the present aspect of affairs the "Lexowing" process will be carried out to Pittsburg, where strong pressure is being brought to bear on the committee to pay the smoky city a visit.

State Senator Penrose was seen today and questioned as to whether the committee had authority to investigate the municipal affairs of Pittsburg. In reply he said:

"The committee was appointed on the petition of the Municipal Association of Philadelphia, but as far as the municipal institutions of Pittsburg are concerned, I do not believe there would be anybody left to dispute its authority. The committee could certainly hear voluntary testimony, even there was any question as to its jurisdiction. One of the objects of the committee is to recommend legislation at the next session of the legislature looking towards improvement in municipal government, and they will undoubtedly visit other cities with the view of comparing their municipal institutions. It is probable, therefore, that they will visit Pittsburg in any event."

EDAM'S PASSENGERS.

Ninety Survivors of the Wreck Are Landed at Plymouth.

London, Sept. 19.—Fifty passengers and forty-three members of the crew of the Edam, which was wrecked on the coast of the United States, were landed at Plymouth, Mass., yesterday. The Edam was struck on the port side amidships. The vessel, he said, had favorable weather throughout the voyage across the Atlantic and no trouble of any kind was experienced until the channel was reached, when a thick fog was encountered.

A sharp outlook was kept on board the ship and for a time all went well. Then one of the lookouts suddenly saw through the fog a vessel heading down on the Edam and gave the alarm. The signal to reverse the engines was quickly given and the order was promptly obeyed, but it was too late to avoid a disaster, and almost immediately came the crash that resulted in the foundering of the Edam. An inspection soon showed that there was no hope of saving the vessel, and the order was given for the passengers and crew to take to the boats.

Welna began his term a few weeks ago, and found a struggle for the schoolhouse door. The only motive for the action on the part of the women is that Welna had a quarrel with one of the children named Halleck, but the evidence showed the punishment was not over severe and Welna was discharged.

PLOT TO KILL DURANT.

A Prisoner Discovered Who Carried a Broken Table Knife, Whetted to a Keen Edge, Was Found Therein.

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—The police have discovered and frustrated a plot to assassinate Durant. The plot was concocted by a well-known criminal who had been sentenced to the county jail. He expressed his intention to his fellow prisoners of killing Durant at the first opportunity, and the matter coming to the ears of the sheriff an extra precaution was taken to prevent any Durants from exercising with the other prisoners, and to drive him to and from the court either in a buggy or on the outside of the prison van.

On search being made of the cell a broken table knife, whetted to a keen edge, was found therein. The prisoner has since been sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. Before being taken to the penitentiary he admitted to the police that it was his intention to kill Durant, but that he had no opportunity to do so. The police refuse to divulge the name of the criminal.

WILD MAN OF STONY CREEK.

Farmers Unable to Determine the Identity of a Chicken Thief.

LaPorte, Ind., Sept. 19.—For a week past farmers living near Stony Creek, Noble county, have missed chickens and sheep from their places. Yesterday John Holly, a farmer living on the creek, reported that at an early hour in the morning his wife was awakened from her sleep by weird noises and an unusual commotion in the sheep pen back of the barn. Holly arose, and taking his gun cautiously approached the sheep pen. He had not gone more than a few steps when he saw the nude figure of a man, his face covered with long hair, run in the direction of the woods. Holly quickly fired, but the unknown man disappeared in the darkness.

The neighborhood was aroused and a posse of men started in pursuit of the wild man. In the heavy timber land they came upon the smoldering remains of a fire, on which chickens and sheep had been roasted, indicating that the desperado had been committed by the man whose identity enveloped in mystery. It is said that about three years ago a farm hand named James Sweet was driven out of the neighborhood by a man whose name was heard of again. It is now believed the wild man is Sweet and that he is suffering from some form of derangement.
