The celebration was in commemoration of the twentieth anniversary of the ordination to the priesthood of the reverend gentleman named. Twenty years ago yesterday they were elevated to the priesthood in this city by Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Hara.

SEVERE WHILE IT LASTED.

Much Damage Results from Yesterday's Rain and Lightning.
Yesterday's heavy storm, while it was one of the most beautiful sights that Nature could bestow upon this dried and parched region, was not thankfully received by some residents of this city and vicinity. The lightning which accompanied the rain and hail severely damaged a number of houses and stunned or frightened their occupants, while in various parts of the city floods caused no small amount of damage to gardens and cellars.
The house of Conrad Linn, on Birch street, was struck by a bolt of lightning which tore off the roof into the air, and along its course from the apex of the roof to the ground. All the occupants of the house were more or less affected by the shock.
A bolt struck the residence of John Woodhouse, on Ash street. Entering the chimney it followed the flue to the stove, which it shivered, and then took to the cellar, where it played sad havoc with the family preserves which were put up in glass jars.
In Dumore's house of Hoodley Van Camp, on Dudley street, was struck by lightning and quite badly damaged. The bolt struck the ridge board near the top of the chimney, and ran along that for a distance of about eighteen feet, tearing off the shingles and splintering some of the rafters. Part of the bolt entered the chimney, knocking all of the lids off the stove.
Mrs. Van Camp had a narrow escape, as she had just a moment before moved away from the roof into the room. As it was, she was slightly stunned and greatly frightened. A man who was passing the house at the time was knocked down, but escaped uninjured. Shortly afterward a tree on Grove street was struck and demolished.
The No. 6 branch car was waiting at the junction, when a bolt entered the car, burning off both motors and otherwise damaging the machinery. Quite a number of passengers were on the car at the time, but all escaped uninjured. The sewers were unable to handle the vast downpour, and as a consequence overflows with resultant damage were numerous. The catch basin at the northwest corner of court house square became blocked and caused a miniature lake to form at the street intersection. Councilmen reported at the city hall last night that they were besieged with complaints from all sections of the city of overflows causing damage to properties.

GROCERY STORE ABLAZE.

Fire on the West Side Extinguished by the Aid of Buckets.
A lighted match accidentally dropped in a pile of cotton batting started what threatened to be a serious blaze in Thomas' grocery store on Garfield avenue yesterday afternoon.
This highly inflammable material placed up with such suddenness that before an effort could be made to extinguish it the portion of the store in which it was piled was a mass of flames. Luckily it burned up very rapidly and left it an easy matter to extinguish the slight fire which was communicated to the woodwork. No alarm was sent in.

Attention.

The dressmaking parlors of Madame L'Amoureux, 512 Spruce street, are now open. She has just returned from the city, and is prepared to furnish the latest styles. Prices reasonable; satisfaction guaranteed.

THE WIZARD OF THE NILE

Smith and Herbert's New Opera is Produced at Wilkes-Barre.

IT HAS ELEMENTS OF SUCCESS

Delightful Music; Harmless Fun; Elaborate and Scenery; Dazzling Costumes and Stage Pictures Among the Features That Charm a Large Audience.

A large audience representing the wealth and culture of Wilkes-Barre gathered at the Grand Opera house at that city last evening to witness the initial performance of "The Wizard of the Nile," the new comic opera, the joint work of Harry B. Smith and Victor Herbert.
If the managers of the enterprise have ever had doubts as to the ultimate success of the work, they must have been dispelled by the reception which the performance met. The beautiful picture disclosed at the rise of the curtain on the first act was greeted with a burst of applause, and the enthusiasm of the audience was kept up through the evening. From beginning to end it seems that no detail has been omitted that would assist in making "The Wizard of the Nile" an ideal production. Continuous fun, delightful music, elaborate and realistic scenery and dazzling costumes are among the features that will no doubt make this opera one of the most successful ever produced since the days of "Erminie."
In the arrangement of the various details of the book and musical score, Messrs. Smith and Herbert have entered upon new avenues, and while the opera is fraught with feminine beauty, richness and musical genius, it possesses unusual features of originality, when considered as a comic opera.

Story of the Opera.
The story of "The Wizard of the Nile" narrates the adventures of Kibosh, a wandering magician, who is making a professional tour of Egypt. The scene is laid in that country during the youth of Cleopatra. It appears to be a scene of the kind of Egyptian life and adjacent to desert lands in and adjacent to Egypt. He has been led to do so by Cleopatra, a weathered woman, who has predicted that the next annual overflow of the Nile will be of such unusual magnitude as to fertilize the desert. Cleopatra's prophecies invariably go by, and in this case she predicts that the Nile will be in flood, and that, as a result, she will be punished. As a penalty for his unkind prophecy Cleopatra is to be banished to the island of a distant island. In the midst of the festivities attending the execution, it is announced that the barge of Cleopatra is approaching. The barge appears, but instead of Cleopatra it contains the tramp magician Kibosh, who has appropriated the barge while Cleopatra and her maid left it for the purpose of making her escape. Kibosh and his factor, Abdyos, are sentenced to prompt decapitation for stealing Cleopatra's private yacht.
Just as the axe is about to fall upon Kibosh, he says, respectfully, that with him perishes the great secret for causing the Nile to overflow. Ptolemy stops the execution just in time, and sends Kibosh to try his magic upon the sacred river. He succeeds in effecting the inundation Kibosh is to be loaded with honors, and is to marry the Princess Cleopatra, who is in present a young girl, who has never heard of love.

Kibosh is Introduced.
Cleopatra and her maids enter twining garlands of lotus blossoms, and Kibosh is introduced to the princess and her maids. A king's daughter can be made love to only in the presence of witnesses, and Kibosh is placed in an embarrassing position; he must introduce a girl who never heard of love, and she, too, in the presence of the entire court. After this trying ordeal, Kibosh is requested to make good his assertion that he could make the Nile overflow. As he is an absolute charlatan, he tries to postpone the affair, but is forced to the proof of his powers. Accordingly he exhorts the Nile to rise, but feeling all the while that his efforts are hopeless, and his doom certain. To his astonishment, however, his hocus-pocus words are obeyed, and the Nile inundation. It is mere coincidence, but Kibosh takes all the credit to himself and demands the hand of Cleopatra. The act ends as Kibosh and the princess are borne in triumph to the royal palace, amid general rejoicings.
Incidental to the main story is a subplot concerning the love of Ptarmigan, Cleopatra's music teacher, for his royal pupil. She makes a compromise between her curiosity and her dignity and allows him to love her on the even days of the month, while on the odd days he must keep his place as singing teacher. Further complications result from the fact that Abdyos, Kibosh's Greek servant, also falls in love with the irresistible Cleopatra.
Troubles of Kibosh.
In the second act it appears that instead of a decent overflow, the Nile has so flooded the country that the population is being driven to the roof of the palace. The scene is the roof of the royal palace and Ptolemy and his court are suffering from colds, as the result of the flood. Instead of marrying Kibosh to Cleopatra, he is to be executed for overdoing the Nile rising, but he cannot be found. Finally he appears in a small boat and takes refuge in the top of a palm tree near the palace roof. Here he is captured and ingenious tortures are devised for him. He is released, however, when he discloses the plan of Cleopatra to elope with her music teacher.
The announcement is then made that the unusual flood has fertilized the desert lands bought by the king. The royal land speculation is a success, and Kibosh demands Cleopatra's hand as his reward. Kibosh is loaded with unaccountable honors. Abdyos, furiously jealous, causes an explosion among Kibosh's magic paraphernalia, the queen's apartments are wrecked and Kibosh charges with this mischief, is stripped of his honors and sentenced to be walled up alive in a pyramid. Ptarmigan, for planning the elopement, is sentenced to be one of the slaves to wall him up.
Interior of a Pyramid.
In act third the interior of a pyramid is shown; the stonecutters are preparing for the interment of Ptarmigan in one of these slaves. Cleopatra comes to tell him that at last she knows what love is. He is overjoyed, thinking that the king's absence has newly discovered passion, but the princess produces a medallion of Marc Antony. She has fallen in love with the picture and looks like Mr. Anthony, though a present stranger, is her affinity. A duel follows, in which Cleopatra compares the portrait with Ptarmigan and Kibosh charges with this mischief, is stripped of his honors and sentenced to be walled up alive in a pyramid. Ptarmigan, for planning the elopement, is sentenced to be one of the slaves to wall him up.

ROBERTS TRESPASS SUIT

Was on Trial All Day in Main Court Room Before Judge Edwards.

NUMBER OF WITNESSES HEARD

They All Agree That the Gates at the Carbon Street Crossing Were Up at the Time the Accident Occurred.

Mrs. Mary Roberts' suit against the Delaware and Hudson Canal company, to recover damages for the death of her husband, continued on trial all of yesterday before Judge Edwards, and a jury in the main court room. C. M. Streeter, of Dalton, was the first witness called yesterday morning. He testified that he was eye witness of the crossing being raised at the time of the accident. Witness saw the train rushing towards the crossing and saw Roberts try to jump from the wagon in which he was riding in a desperate effort to save his life.

A. D. Holland testified that a man of the age of Roberts was when he was killed had 38 years to live according to the Carlsruhe tables. Miss Annie Walsh saw the accident and was sure the gates were raised at the time. Mrs. Louchey and Mrs. John Higgin testified that they were eye witnesses of the accident. The whistle of the engine was not sounded until it was close to the crossing. After Roberts had been struck they went out on the road and saw him lying near the sidewalk. On cross-examination they said the wagon of Ashman Johnson was not then to be seen anywhere in the vicinity.
Other Testimony Heard.
G. T. Matthews testified that the crossing is very dangerous, and that it is the practice of teamsters to stop about twenty-five feet from it to ascertain if it is safe to pass over. R. T. Mason, a surveyor, who made a map of the vicinity of the crossing, testified to its accuracy, and then Dr. Lowry, of Carbondale, who was house surgeon at the Lackawanna hospital at the time of the accident, was sworn. He testified that the autopsy revealed the fact that Roberts had an enlarged heart, a diseased condition which would tend to shorten his life. Dr. Lowry was undergoing a searching cross-examination when court adjourned for the day.

The greater part of the time of Judge Gunster and a jury was consumed in court room No. 3 with the trial of the suit of Max Kemmer, of North Lincoln avenue, against the city of Scranton. Mr. Kemmer is the owner of a lot of land on North Lincoln avenue, which he says was greatly damaged by the change of the grade of that avenue. This change of grade was authorized by an ordinance passed by the city council which raised the avenue seven feet in front of Mr. Kemmer's property.
Viewers appointed to assess the benefits and damages, awarded Mr. Kemmer $300, but from this award the city appealed. It is charged that Mr. Kemmer was in no wise injured by the change of grade, for the increase in the market value of the property was sufficient to meet the expenses incurred in filling in the lot to the level of the street and in raising the house. Attorney Collins claims that he should be paid for the expenses incurred in the trial of the case, which he says he is entitled to, but which the officers of the school district refused to allow him. On their part they allege that Mr. Collins' contract with the district was $1,970, and of this he has received all but $30. The amount Mr. Collins claims, they allege, is for over-work and charges for laying brick work which they dispute his right to receive pay for, saying that he was to be paid a given price for every thousand brick laid. Mr. Collins claims that he should be paid by measurement. The trial of the case will be resumed this morning.

WELL, WELL!

When court adjourned for the day the suit of Alfred G. Pace against Sarah A. Lee was on trial before Judge Morrison. Pace is a contractor and claims $200 for work done on Mrs. Lee's property at Providence. That lady believes the plaintiff is not entitled to the money and refuses to pay. Mrs. Lee is represented by Colonel F. L. Hittcock and Mr. Pace by Attorney H. C. Reynolds.

SOUTH SIDE.
Mrs. John Gormanly, of Mayfield, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Ryan, of Minooka.
Miss Alice Sweet, of Maple street, is the guest of friends in Susquehanna county.
Miss Sadie Loftus, of Mauch Chunk, is the guest of South Side friends.
Bert Armstrong, while at work in Benmore & Son's planing mill Wednesday, sustained a deep gash in the head by being struck with the piece of timber. Dr. Amman dressed the wound. Miss Anna Gibbons, of Pittston, abs returned home after a visit among friends on this side.
Fifteenth avenue again suffered yesterday from the flood which poured down from the elevated territory of the Nineteenth ward. Many cellars were flooded and gardens were completely washed out.
