FORMAL OPENING TODAY. Dickinson Law School Will Then Begin Its Work.

At 10 o'clock this morning the branch of the Dickinson Law school will open in St. Thomas' college, on Wyoming avenue. Dean Trickett, of Carlisle, where the main school is located, reached here yesterday. He will be present at the opening this morning. and during the remainder of the school year will be here for one week each month. When in Scranton he will re-side at the residence of Attorney Clar-Ballertine, one of ulty. At other times the recognized head of the school will laits director, ex-Justice Alfred Hand.

The daily school sessions will last only two hours, during which time will occur recitations and lectures. This year will be the beginning of a twoyear course, but next year a three-year course will be added. It has been decided to inaugurate a special one-year course for students who have had the advantage of office study. It has been found impossible to arrange the schedule of lectures and sub-jects or the school hours until after Dean Trickett consults with the stud-ents today. However, the hours will probably be from 9 to 10 o'clock in the morning and from 3 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon. After this morning's matriculation, Dean Trickett will informally address the students, and on Friderick and the students, and the students. day the time divisions of recitations and lectures will be announced.

POTTER TRESPASS SUIT TRIAL

It Is Progressing Slowly-Testimony That Was Heard Yesterday-Getting the Details in No. 3 Regarding a Controversy About Eggs.

In his charge to the jury Monday afternoon in the case of the Universal Fashion company, of New York, against John H. Ladwig proprietor of against John H. Ladwig proprietor of the . or Cent store, Judge Gunster gave instructions that the verdict must be for $500. If at all, for the plaintiff, that being the amount in dispute. The jury came into court yesterday morn-ing with the verdict of $1 for the plain-tiff. The judge looked severe and stern and wanted to know if the jury had misunderstood him in his charge. had misunderstood him in his charge. The foreman answered that the jury did not understand the court to mean that the verdict must be for the full amount; namely, $500.

Before Judge Lynch in No. 2 court to be let the property of the letter trees out against room the Potter trespass suit against the Scranton Traction company was on all day, and the testimony of the plainall day, and the testimony of the plaintiff's side is not finished. It will be the end of the week before the case goes to the jury. A model of the track, wires and poles in the vicinity where the accident to Mr. Potter happened was offered in evidence. As the witnesses gave their testimony they were directed by means of the miniature of Blakely street to explain to the jury the position of the "tower wagon" and the pole with which the Potter equipage collided. Mr. Potter, the plaintiff, was called to the witness stand when court called to the witness stand when court opened yesterday morning and was subjected to another searching cross-examination by Major Warren, during which the witness lost control of his temper several times.

Testimony of One of the Lineman. Edwin Courtright, who was employed in the "tower wagon" the day of the accident, was called upon by the plain-tiff to give his version of the case. He saw the team driven by Mr. Potter come along the street, saw the horses get fractious, and he was of the opinion that the team could have been controlled ordinarily without the damage ensuing that did. There were several other with see, and their testimony was simply corroborative of the testi-mony of the plaintiff. Mr. Potter's eyesight is affected so that he has to hold his head back at an angle of about to the season of the season of the season of the season objects on a level with his face. The tressass suit of Henry Mulholland against the Rushbrook Water company was resumed in the main court room before Judge Edwards. The jury, after the case was opened Monday morning, went to Scott township to look over the land which the defendant company took possession of by virtue of eminent domain. The plaintiff's case was closed at adjournment. There were several witnesses on the There wer several witnesses on the stand during the day and the consensus of their operion was that the remainder of Mr. Mulbolland's land was damaged greatly by the taking of the land for water pur oses. In their opinion the water com any ought to pay the plain-tiff about $1,000. Mr. Mulholland's farm is h Scott township and Mud Pond is situated on it. The company raised the water on the pond and set it aside at a supply reservoir. This deprived the plaintiff of the free use of the water for fishing and boating pur-poses and for his cattle. poses and for his cattle.

Where Ancient Eggs Are Spoken Of. The atmosphere of No. 3 court room was redoient all day of broken eggs, ancient eggs and pickled eggs. The case was on trial before Judge Gunster where the Central Egg com-pany, of Owego, N. Y., is suing Ackerman Bros., of this city, for $600, or the value of 300 cases of eggs. Attorney W. H. Jessup, jr., appeared for the defendant, and Attorney A. J. Colborn, jr., for the plaintiff. It is alleged that the Ackermans agreed to buy a certain job lot of eggs from the plaint if and that the contract was fulfilled as far as the egg company was concerned, but that the defendants did ont pay for the goods.

The Aciermans assert that the eggs were beyond redemption and could not be used, that they could get no one to buy them and they had to ship them back. It will go to the jury this afternoon.
