WEST SIDE EVENTS. Frank Shultz's Narrow Escape from Death at Oxford Breaker-Taken Out of Calm Unconscious.

One of the most novel mishaps of the many with which the coal mine is connected happened at the Oxford breaker yesterday morning. Frank Shultz, a 19-year-old boy living on Ninth street, was the victim of a runaway pocket in the breaker had become "blocked" and Shultz was sent to shovel the coal from the mouth of the inner shaft. While doing this a load of coal was taken from the chute into a car on the outside. Shultz was drawn downward by the rush of coal. He struggled but the suction was too great, and he was completely engulfed in the fine mass.
