SCRANTON, OCTOBER 17, 1895.

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

For Judges of the Superior Court: CHARLES E. RICE, of Luzerne. E. N. WILLARD, of Lackawanna.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET.

For Coroner. SAMUEL P. LONGSTREET, M. D., of Scranton. For Surveyor. EDMUND A. BARTL, of Scranton.

The Times is right. The investigation of Herring should be made public. If he is guilty, publicity would be his worst punishment.

As to General Harrison.

Because ex-President Harrison is expected this week to visit Washington, where he is to argue a legal case before the Supreme court, numerous gossips have it that his real mission is to intrigue for a re-nomination.

It is of moment in this connection that there is hardly any contemporary discussion of convention possibilities which omits the name of Benjamin Harrison. The eminent Indianan has evidently impressed his personality upon the minds of the people very much as Grover Cleveland did in the days preceding 1892.

It is to the credit of even the "cuckoo" press that it cannot work up a feeling of apathy sufficient to inspire it to applaud Attorney General Harmon's gratuitous impertinence about the exercise of free speech in this country in sympathy with Cuba.

The War on the Mormons.

The publicizing by the three head officials of the Mormon church of two candidates on the Democratic ticket in Utah, because they had not obtained the church's sanction of their candidacy, has very quickly aroused the gentle population of Utah to a realization of the dangers of statehood when coupled with ecclesiastical dictation.

the church and who therefore owe to it their time, consequently not being free without its permission to occupy civil office, the effect of such expression is bound to be the same upon the prejudiced Gentile mind as if the so-called interference were inexcusable and gratuitous.

We must, by the way, confess to a feeling of high admiration for the Mormon people as a whole. Their tenet of polygamy, even they now concede, was morally wrong, although at the moment of its promulgation a social necessity of the splendid scheme of empire formulated in the brain of Brigham Young.

A ruling of considerable interest was made last Tuesday by Judge Kennedy, of Pittsburg, who held that before a secret society of aliens could receive a charter it must agree in writing to keep its minutes, books and reports in the English language, and therefore intelligible to all persons authorized to inspect them.

A Cold-Blooded Administration.

Patriotic and liberty-loving Americans are compelled to conclude that there is not a particle of the genuine spirit of Americanism in the Cleveland administration. What could grater harm be done to the average freedom-loving citizen of this republic than the recent deliverance of Attorney General Harmon in which he says that "inasmuch as we are at peace with Spain and have a treaty with her, it behooves all American citizens who have respect for the laws and obligations of their country and regard for its honor, to be neutral in word as well as in deed."

Attorney General Harmon could not advise that it would be unlawful for Americans to meet and express sympathy for a struggling people, but the cold-blood, un-American spirit of the Cleveland administration is clearly manifested in Mr. Harmon's deprecatory declaration. Astounding and humiliating as this deliverance is, it should occasion no surprise, for is not this the same administration that made the attempt to overthrow the newly established republic of Hawaii and restore the rotten native monarchy of Liliuokalani?

Mr. Harmon talks about our obligations with Spain, as though the provisions and stipulations of a treaty with a foreign power ought to dull the innate love of political liberty that abounds in every true American heart, and crush out even the sympathy Americans naturally feel for any every people the world over who seek to attain the same measure of liberty and independence we enjoy, and for which patriotic Americans have been and still are willing to fight, and if necessary, die.

In this, as in everything else, the Cleveland administration is entirely out of accord with the people of this republic. The people do and will continue to sympathize with the Cuban patriots, and there is no reason why they should not fully, clearly and emphatically express that sympathy. They would not be true to themselves if they did less. The struggling Cubans deserve more than sympathy, they should be accorded the rights of belligerents by our government, and we shall not be surprised if, when the new Republican congress meets next December, a movement in that direction is inaugurated.

The American people are chafing for the time to come when this disgraced, un-American Democratic administration can be turned out of power and be succeeded by one whose policy and acts will be in accord with the spirit of liberty and independence that pervades the masses of the republic. Happily, that time is approaching. With a McKinley, a Reed, a Harrison or an Allison at the head of the administration at Washington there will be the true spirit of Americanism in the government as well as in the people of this great republic.

Walter Wellman assures the Chicago Times-Herald that "unless Don Dickinson is mistaken, and he rarely is when it comes to paralyzing Mr. Cleveland's thoughts, the president is a disciple of the new American policy of overseas acquisition, of tearing down the walls of tradition which have circumscribed us, and of going out for territory and for trade. If this is a correct diagnosis of the president's views, if he is to become a leader of the new American idea which, without question, has taken firm hold of the people, the announcement is one of the most important made in this country in a long time." As a matter of fact, it probably is not within a dozen leagues of the truth. But if it were, it would be a case of "too late repented." Deathbed penitence rarely succeeds, in politics.

Andrew Carnegie intimates that if he were a judge or a jurymen he would be tempted to stretch the law in favor of the man who should go out with an axe, some dark night, and demolish half of the big board advertisements that deface the pretty surface of mother earth in many directions. The iron king utters a solemn truth, confirmed by long experience, when he says that the only really beneficial kind of advertising these days is in the columns of reputable newspapers and periodicals.

The latest argument advanced in New York by advocates of Sunday desecration is that since three-fifths of the people of the state live in the large cities, the residents of those cities should be left free to regulate the liquor traffic to suit themselves. On the same principle they could also ask to vote upon the question whether theft should be taken from the category of crimes.

The story in another column that President Cleveland himself read and approved in advance the speech wherein Don M. Dickinson, several months ago, severely arraigned the lukewarm policy of the administration's foreign policy, which was then ostensibly in charge of Secretary Gresham, will need a good deal of corroboration before it can be believed.

Attorney General Hendrick, of Kentucky, predicts that the Democrats will win in that state by 25,000 majority. If they're as sure as that, why are they so unconsciously scared?

WAS CLEVELAND FALSE?

From the Chicago Times-Herald. It will be remembered that not many months before Secretary Gresham broke down, not to recover, Don M. Dickinson, member of the president's cabinet during his first administration, and always reputed to be his most confidential adviser, delivered a speech, in which, in effect, he savagely attacked the foreign policy of the state department. His call for a more vigorous conduct of international questions was so loud, so well fortified and so wide in its scope that it commanded general attention. By some it was accepted as an indication that a large section of the president's party were weary of the bungling of Hawaii and of failure on the part of the administration to uphold, morally and physically, the fair name and real strength of this country.

Once more Mr. Dickinson has appeared as the apparent critic of the administration. He wants a more direct and efficient course in relation to Cuba. What gives the Cuban ideas of Mr. Dickinson's? It is not to be wondered at that the real motive of his assault on the state department while Secretary Gresham was at its head, Mr. Dickinson, according to William E. Curtis, delivered that speech with the president's knowledge and approval. That is to say, Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, entered into an intrigue with a man of his own party but not in his cabinet, to assassinate a man who was in his cabinet, his own subordinate, Walter Q. Gresham.

It is scarcely possible that Mr. Dickinson realizes the baseness of the position in which his assertion places President Cleveland. It is not in his power any time to ask for Mr. Gresham's resignation. Was he afraid to do so? In personal and political cowardice did he consent to conspire against the peace and honor of one of his own official family? If Secretary Gresham knew of the intrigue, did he modify his resignation, or did he, as his inspirer, is not strange that, barred by congress, mocked for the miserable blundering at Honolulu, surrounded by associates all political, and many of them personal strangers to him, he fled and died. Did he really die? Mr. Cleveland's cabinet has been painfully striking. Mr. Dickinson himself having one term to run, the only one in the white house, could not be persuaded to have a second.

Since, according to Mr. Dickinson, the assault on Gresham's management of the state department was the president's knowledge and approval, Secretary Olney will be pardoned for raising his eyebrows when he reads Mr. Dickinson's opinions about the duty of the United States to Cuba. It is a suggestive coincidence that, just before Mr. Dickinson's call for help for Cuba, it is given out that Mr. Cleveland and Secretary Olney are about to take some step in recognition of universal American opinion on the subject. For President Cleveland's sake, it may well be hoped that Mr. Dickinson will modify his arrogant accusations of treachery by Mr. Cleveland to Walter Q. Gresham, who sacrificed all his ambition for Mr. Cleveland's benefit.

CARNegie ON CUBA.

Interview in Pittsburg Commercial. "I think it intolerable that Spain should continue to exercise dominion over any part of this continent. The western hemisphere belongs to America. If I were president Cleveland, I say the best friend of Spain, I would suggest to the Spanish minister what Secretary Seward suggested to the French minister. This was when Napoleon was trying to seat Maximilian upon a throne in Mexico. After the war he asked the French minister to migrate from?" And Napoleon took the hint. Seward was a good friend of France in doing this. So would President Cleveland be the best friend of Spain if he followed Seward's example."

COMMENT OF THE PRESS.

The Social Evil. Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette: "While it would be absurd to contend that the social evil can be wholly gotten rid of by the enforcement of existing laws, any more than can gambling, drunkenness, larceny, and other illegal practices, yet the lesson taught by New York city, since the power of Tammany has been broken, is that these evils can be suppressed in large measure by an honest enforcement of the laws, while the practice of regulating them tends to increase the nuisances and leads to the general demoralization of the police force. The only legal method of dealing with these places is to suppress them. The law declares them public nuisances, and the faithful officer has no alternative except to live up to the requirement of his official oath. It is not his prerogative to say that or that law is impracticable of enforcement, and that society will be benefited by disregarding it. Such arbitrary and illegal ruling has been the prolific source of blackmail, bribery and outrageous discriminations against individuals, to say nothing of the fearful increase of the social evil by giving it official countenance and protection. The question is not whether the laws are as they exist are adequate to the total eradication of the crime of prostitution. No one contends that they are. Neither are the laws sufficient to prevent other crimes which inhere in depraved human nature. But such laws as we have were made to be enforced, and those charged with their execution cannot set them aside as worthless or obsolete without incurring the guilt of moral perjury."

On the Wrong Side.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "The British revenue are in unusually fine shape, having increased considerably in the last six months. The promised clover of the Cleveland administration appears to have sprouted on the wrong side of the Atlantic." It is a Serious Business. Washington Star: "The disposition to regard reform as a fad in New York is receiving less and less encouragement."

sons why he doesn't want to be president again, ignore the over-mastering reason that the people stand as an insurmountable obstacle in his way."

No Danger of a Third Term. St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "There has never been the least probability of any man being nominated for a third term of the presidency since Grant was denied that honor, and all talk to the contrary is false and rubbish."

Time for Him to Repent. Washington Star: "Unless the sultan of Turkey makes arrangements to withdraw from the game he is in danger of feeling a good deal like the center-rush in a football eleven."

TOLD BY THE STARS.

Daily Horoscope Drawn by Ajaachus, The Tribune Astrologer. Astrological cast: 1.48 a. m., for Thursday, Oct. 17, 1895.

A child born on this day will feel real sorry if Colonel Colquitt should allow "the government" to escape from him while in this city.

Mr. Herring may be excused if hereafter he should substitute an "F" for the "U" in spelling internal, when referring to the Scranton wing of the revenue department. Mr. Amelle Rives-Chandler, by the recent turn in the tide of his domestic affairs, becomes of less importance than the manager of a losing base ball club at the end of the season.

Although it is a little late, no doubt all will join with the temperance ladies at Harrisburg in advising Miss Frances Willard to "husband her strength."

Do not aspire to an office that necessitates frequent attempts at performing the "loaves and fishes" act.

GWILYM GWENT.

(Read at the unveiling of his monument, Oct. 16, 1895.)

On Cambria's Druid heights of ancient Music composes grand and bardic sublime. And Celtic masters of the latter time, Woke from their dreams, when Death announced thy name.

To hear thy anthems roll, thy glories chime. As erst they rang, in music's golden clime. When thy "Yr Haf" set Summer's heart aflame!

Hither sweet singers from thy native shore Have come in Gwalia's name, her chosen choir. To heap Euterpe's flowery tributes higher. As o'er thy tomb her glorious tears out-pour. Till lo! she greets thee, with a smiling face. Glee-king of music's most melodious race.
