tion, to Be Opened Today.

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—One of the most practical and human benefactions of which Philadelphia can boast was put into operation yesterday, when the Friendly Inn. on Ninth street, was opened for the reception of guests. This hostelry is the result of a generous impulse of John Wanamaker to provide a hotel for people of limited means. Last spring he bought the Peabody Hotel and has spent $60,000 on improvements. Meals will be served table d'hote, 10 cents being charged for breakfast and supper, and 15 cents for dinner. A guest can get lodging without meals and vice versa, or can arrange for both. For a room with one bed in it the lodger will be charged 25 cents a day. Tw hundred guests can be accommodated.

An important feature of the house is its employment bureau, as the manage-ment is provided with ample machinery for helping a man to get work without any cost to the employer or the em-

George Illston's Friends and Relatives

Believe He Has Been Murdered. Topeka, Kan. Oct. 23.—A week ago to-day Farmer Illston, who lives five miles southeast of Topeka, sent his 14year-old son George to the sand bar or the Arkansas river, near here, for a load of sand. Neither team nor boy has been seen since. To-day a searching party, organized by the sheriff, found young Histon's hat torn to pieces in a pasture two miles from his home, and near he was a pile of sand which had evidently been dumped from the wagon.

The boy's parents believe he has been murdered. Searching parties are still out and will remain in the hunt several

THE COUNTY INSTITUTE. The Third Day's Sessions Are Well

Attended-Interesting Talks.

Attended-Interesting Talks.

Another big audience assembled yesterday in the Grand to hear the third days' session of the institute. Rev. Dr. L. L. Sprague, of the Wyoming seminary, opened the day's session with prayer, and then made a short address to the teachers. He said that there are some things which pay. If we blot out education we should return to barbarism, in less than half a century. There was never such an opportunity as at present for teachers to portunity as at present for teachers to thoroughly fit themselves for their great work. There is nothing too good for a successful teacher. The great work. There is nothing too good for a successful teacher. The salary is not large, but money is not everything. The success of a good teacher is his own monument.

Hon. Andrew S. Draper was the first speaker, and he talked on "Training the Teaching Forces." He asked the question: "What is a profession?" Everybody is called a professor, from the state superintendent down to the corn doctor on the street. There used to be three professions—medicine, dito be three professions-medicine, di-vinity, law, but the number has been enlarged and now comes within the meaning of the term professor, that of teaching. A professional employment is one which requires trained brain is one which requires trained brain power upon any particular matter. The man who simply copies is not pursuing a profession. The work of teaching will be professional employment when the teacher studies the child, and determines what ought to be done to lead that child's mind out to attain proper results. The profession of teaching is also undergoing revision and incompetent teachers are being discharged. He spoke of the number discharged. He spoke of the number of applicants for positions as teachers, and said there are almost as many teachers as pupils. He referred to the young men who enter the profession for the purpose of using it as a stepping stone to something else, and com-plimented those who had selected it as a life time work. Those who are strongly equipped for the work, he said, are well paid. Dr. Draper does not approve of the theory that because teachers live in the county, they should be employed there. Teachers are plentiemployed there. Teachers are plenti-ful, and it is the duty of the people to employ the most competent, regardless of where they live. In referring to the system of examination pursued in selecting teachers, he said it is woully incompetent. The certificate is re-garded as a license by school boards, but it is more. An examination, he out it is more. An examination, he said, ought to be public, and the ques-tions should be prepared by a central tions should be prepared by a central board. No one person is competent to examine papers and determine who should have certificates and who should not. The examination at the best is but a poor contrivance. Teach-ers should be trained in a Normal school, he said, but doubtless many of the teachers justly disagree with him. He held that all trachers should be
