How He Got Into Congress-Passed as a Private Secretary.

Private Secretary.

Kate Field's Washington.

The last time I ever saw Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was in the city of Washington eight years ago. He had come on to attend some professional or other meeting, and of course was in constant demand for all the forms of hospitality for which the Capital city is noted. One of these was perthaps unique. Spectators in the gallery of the senate chamber one afternoon were astonished to see the kindly old doctor tonished to see the kindly old doctor walk in upon the floor and seat him-self upon a sofa to listen to the debate. self upon a sofa to disten to the debate. He was not a member or ex-member of either house of congress, of the cabinet or of the Supreme court. He was not a general of the army or admiral of the navy. He was not a person who had received by special resolution the thanks of congress. How on earth did he get past the guardians of the sacred portal?

he get past the guardians of the sacred portal?

I took the trouble to inquire at head-quarters. It seems that he had been lunching with Senator Evarts, of New York, that noon, and when the senator had apoligized for breaking up the party because of an important measure which was to be debated that day in the senate, the dector proposed to Sav senate 'the doctor proposed to say "goodby" with the other guests "Oh, don't leave me too abruptly," pleaded the senator. "Come to the senate with me and we can continue to talk while I

"But they won't let me in, will they?" asked Dr. Holmes. "I think I can fix that," answered Mr.

Evarts.

Accordingly the senator led the way to the door of the chamber and passed in. Dr. Holmes followed, but was stopped by the doorkeeper. Mr. Evarts turned as if annoyed, and rebuked the overzealous officer with a frown, as he pointed to the doctor and explained, "My new private secretary." 'My new private secretary.

"I beg pardon, senator," said the door-keeper, nonplussed but apologetic; and as he saw the white haired autocrat pass into the chamber he turned to his companion and remarked: "Well, his companion and remarked: "Well, Evarts is a queer one! Now, almost any other senator would have picked out some young, spry fellow when he was making a change. I shouldn't think he could get much work out of that old man—I suppose he's a friend who's in hard luck, though, and needed

JAY GOULD'S KINDNESS.

How He Taught a Salutary Lesson to a Young Man Who Was Inclined to Gambling Recklessly-Interesting if

One of the stories included by the Chicago Times-Herald in a recent collection of poker tales represents the late Jay in the new and curious light of a temporary philanthropist. It is interesting, at least, whether true or imaginary. Fifteen years ago, as the story runs, Gould happened to be in a Chicago hotel where a merry party was playing. One of the party was a bright looking young fellow, 28 years old, who was plunging recklessly. Fortune was plunging recklessly. Fortune seemed to forsake her usual habits on this occasion and showered her favors on her tempter with a lavish hand. All drank freely. Pot after pot was raked in by the young man, amid the hilarious shouts of his companions, who

W. A. Depew, contractor, has completed the abutments for the new fron bridge across the Roaring Brook at the corner of Cooper and Brown street.

The new road lately opened from Brown street is ready for travel, and is a very much-needed improvement, and is sure to be a popular route from Madisonville to this place.

L. B. Howe has his new sand dry Gould:

Gould was stung by the sarcasm.
"Yes, I will play," he said, "but you must not alter your game. It will be the first time I have played poker in years, but I guess I'll soon learn

The game started and the plunger opened the pot for $1,000. He chuckled as he did so and fingered his winnings, which amounted to some $7,000. The others stayed and Mr. Gould raised the pot $1,000.

"A thousand better," shouted the "Twenty thousand better," said Gould, taking out a roll of $1,000 bills and laying twenty on the table. reckless one.

Gould Takes the Pot. The young man sank back in his chair, sobered by the shock. He pulled himself together, and forcing a smile to his anxious face, he said: "I have not that amount with me, of my friends, why I'll see you."

"AN right," replied Gould, with a grim chuckle. "I'll take your note."
The note was drawn out and the young man laid down four kings. "No good," said Gould, raking in the ot. "Four aces:" He then left the

The young man was utterly ruined. He said that after he met the note he would not have $500 in the world, and would not have $500 in the world, and dare not face his wife and child. As he was about to leave the hotel a waiter stepped up to him and said a gentleman wished to see him. Quite bewikdered by the night's events, he was shown to Mr. Gould's room.

"Young man," said Gould, "I learn that you occupy a prominent position in the city. You have a young wife at home who is devoted to you and who is probably holding in her arms your baby boy and waiting for you at this moment. You have ruined yourself your wife and your little one for half an hour's pleasure, and it is quite evident that you are not a fit person to own anything more than a $20 bill. What is you wife's name?"

The plunger, now sobered, told him. The plunger, now sobered, told him.
Mr. Gould then sat down and writing across the note, said: "Now, here is your note, payable to your wife's order."

As the poor fellow slowly read it over and saw who was his benefactor, Gould

"Now go home. Don't stop here gap-ing, but tell your wife I hope she will take better care of this money than you can. He rose and pushed the young man gently from the room.
