Rev. B. P. Hammond, of Warrenham, in Second Presbyterian Church.

HOW JACOB WAS SUBJUGATED

Story Was Well Told and the Lesson Deftly Applied-A Pleading for Confession and the Reception of God's Blessing.

Rev. B. F. Hammond, of Warrenham, Pa., occupied the pulpit of the Second Presbyterian church yesterday and pleased two congregations by as many logical sermons, uncouched by labyrinthical phraseology or destiny. He is quoted with a simple and straightforward delivery and has the faculty of winning the sympathy and strict attention of his auditory.

His evening sermon was an interesting relation of the wanderings of Jacob and his final return to Israel where he wrestled on the banks of the brook, Jabtok, with God's angel and where his Hammond held out as a warning and the cend an example.

The text was from Genesis, xxxli, 27 and 28, "And he said unto him 'What is thy name?' and he said 'Jacob.' "And He said 'Thy name shall be called no more 'Jacob' but Israel; for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed." Beginning with the time of Jacob's departure from home the reverend gentleman said:

leman said: "He was but known, and after cheat-ing his brother and tricking his poor father it is not strange that he left father it is not strange that he left home and for twenty years worked for and dwelt with Laban in the land of the east. Lafter twenty years of ser-vice he started on a return pilgrimage for home, the Promised Land, taking with him his family and herds and a etime of servants.

Esan Led the Way. He crossed the Jordan and heard when he came to the brook Jabbok that Esau,his brother, was on the way ahead. Fearing to meet him he divided his followers and herds and sent them all ahead instructing the servants to give all to Esau. He then sent Rachel and the child Joseph across the brook and himself prepared to spend the night on the bank of the stream."

and himself prepared to spend the night on the bank of the stream."

Jacob's prayer for deliverance from his brother was referred to as a piece of cowardree and baseness, as would be any prayer born of physical fear, and especially base because he had violated all his promises to a lendert God.

"'And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day.' This scene, said Mr. Hammond, has often been tneorrectly described as Jacob's mental strife and prayer, but it should be considered literally a physical encounter between one sent of God and the rebellious Jacob, who prided himself in his strength remaining and asked for thad not conquered, and suddenly found that the strength had been taken from his legs and hips. his legs and hips.
"Jacob then realized his weakness,

THREE AMERICAN GODS.

Dr. McLeod Says This Country Has Tw Too Many Masters. In the First Presbyterian church last night Rev. Dr. James McLeod preached the first of a series of sermons on the Ten Commandments. His text was: Thou shalt have no other God before

Senator ingalls once said in the United States senate that the decalouse had an along in American. decalouge had no place in American politics. He is now an "ex"-senator, and I hope he will remain an "ex" until he is converted." Dr. McLeod traced the disobedience of the children of men from the time of Adam, and gave the well-known story of the giving of the Ten Commandments on Mt. Sanai. The heathen was compared in numbers and enlightenment to the Christian world and how the Gospel had civilized man-

He gave accounts of the temples erected to heathen gods in England, and showed the effect of the Gospel in the last few centuries in bringing civilization to its present high standard. There are "golden calves" in our land, especially three "American gods," which may not belong entirely to which may not belong entirely to America, but they are worshipped here as much as in any nation upon earth. The "gods" are wealth, wine and power. The speaker gave several instances of the power, or love of money, had made children go up to court and swear that their father or mother were crazy when they made their wills.

The god of Bacchus is a pet god in America. He creates law breakers and sometimes courts the smiles of law-makers, and he gets them. They want their temples open every day in the week, Sunday included. The speaker severely condemned the action of those who are favoring Sunday salòons. He did not believe that all politicians are bad, but on the contrary that the great majority of them are good patriots. He wished, however, that "politicians" and "statesmen" were synonomous and "statesmen" were synonomous terms, but they are not.

He said that the condition of the poor is better to-day than ever before, and Hood's "Song of the Shirt" was only a memory. He wanted to see a revival in this nation in favoring better morality and the upholding of the law of God.

If people would only obey the Ten Commandments there would be no Sunday saloons, nor would there be any saloons any day. "Thou shalt have no other God but me" should be one of the chief lines in the heart of every Christian.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company last year stopped all construction work that was not absolutely necessary, owthat was not accounterly necessary, owing to the depression in general business and the enormous decrease in railroad earnings. The change in business conditions this year, together with the improvement that has already taken place, has led to the resumption of work on some of the branch lines of the company. The principal activity will be in the construction of the Bustleton Branch railroad, which will extend from the connecting road at a point near North Penn Junction at Bustleton. Considerable work has already been done, and the line is so laid out that it will be without curves or grades. The building of the line to Bustleton is said to be the commencement of another line to connect with the New York division at or near the Delaware river. There has also been a line surveyed from Bustleton to a point on the Trenton cuiu-off line, and it is thought that when these roads are ing to the depression in general on the Trenton cutu-off line, and it is thought that when these roads are completed considerable of the traffic which has to be taken over the New York division will be shifted to the other lines. The company has also made several surveys in the soft coal districts one being from the South Fork branch of the Pennsylvania, thence over the main ridge of the Allegheny mountains to a point near Bedford. mountains to a point near Bedford.
The object of this line was to open new coal fields and take out the coal in the vicinity of Elketon and Stony Creek.

It is stated in Baltimore and Ohio railroad circles that the company has not completed any definite plans for ex-tension of business into the south, as announced in Baltimore dispatches. The announced in Baltimore dispatches. The examination of some roads connected with the Norfolk and Western system at present is only undertaken for the purpose of putting the Baltimore and Ohio in a position to act intelligently in case the Norfolk and Western allows its branches to be severed from it. At present, however, there is strong evidence of entire harmony between the management of the Norfolk and Western and its reorganizers, and the belief prevails that an effort will be made to preserve the traffic alliances made by President Kimball in the two years prior to the receivership.

Plea for Clemency-Judge Gunster's Remarks in Passing Sentence. Special Torm of Court Ordered.

Vishniski was sentenced to a fine of $1 and seven years in the Eastern pen-verdict.

Mr. McGinley referred to the youth Mr. McGinley referred to the youth of the defendant and his demeanor during the trial, that he appeared to be anything but a vidious person, and one of criminal instincts. He trusted that the court, in imposing sentence, would take into consideration the youth of the defendant; his environments and the fact that since he came to this country as a boy he has had to shift for himself: a boy he has had to shift for himself; that he is the only son of a widowed mother.

Remarks in Passing Sentence In passing sentence Judge Gunster admonished the prisoner that, though he is a very young man-just entering the threshold of life—he had the blood of an innocent man on his head. The court doubted that the jury would have found a verdict less than first degree, but for the youth and inexperience of the prisoner, and that such matter raised a reasonable doubt in the minds of the jurymen. He hoped that the restraint would have a very salutary effect on the prisoner and teach him to e lawabiding.
