The Phoenix Colliery Threatened by a Dangerous Biase.

Yesterday morning about 10,30 o'clock a fire, which bade fair to be a dangerous one, was discovered in the Phenix colliery, near Pittston Junction, which is operated by the Old Forge Mining company. The fire was located in an abandoned working 4,000 feet from the foot of the shaft and seventy feet from the nearest chamber where active operations were in progress. Superintendent Charles Alkman and Inside Foreman Patrick Eagan were fortunately near at hand and by well-directed efforts got the men out of the mines. Then with a force of miners they rapidly constructed a stone wall, carefully calking all crevices, thus confining the fire to the single chamber and preventing all air from getting near it.

ing all air from getting near it.

News of the fire was carried to Pitiston, and a large crowd soon collected at the mouth of the shaft. The Eagle Hose company was notified and was soon on hand and ready to fight the fire. At 1.30 o'clock 'he wall was refire. At 1.30 o'clock 'he wall was re-moved and it was seen that the fire had burned itself out. Nothing but ashes was contained in the chamber,

TAYLOR.

Today will bring to a close an exceedingly quiet campaign in this place. During its progress only passing interest has been shown by the voters. No demonstrations have been made by either party's candidates, and no solici tation of votes, to our knowledge, was undertaken. The only thing to remind them that there is an election today is the perusal of newspaper articles. While the enthusiasm displayed has been slight, this should not, in any way, deter the Republican voters of this place from turning out in full force, and swelling the majority to its usual high mark. Especially should the voters be at the polls and cast their ballots for E. N. Willard, this their ballots for E. N. Willard, this county's candidate for superior court judge. It is to their advantage that this county should be represented in the new court, to guard the interests of the anthracite coal regions. Of equal importance is the election of Dr. Longstreet for coroner and E. A. Barti for county surveyor. Both of these gentlemen are fully capable of attending to the duties of these offices.
