WRECKED BY AN EXPLOSION

Fatal Disaster in the Detroit Evening Journal Building.

FORTY PERSONS ARE KILLED

Twelve Bodies Have Been Recovered from the Ruins--List of the Dead, the Missing and Injured--The Building Collapsed.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 6.—The battery of boilers in the building of the Evening Journal exploded at 9 o'clock this morning, wrecking the buildings Nos. 45 and 47 West Larned street, killing at least forty persons, wounding twenty others more or less seriously and causing a money loss of $80,000.

List of the Dead.

The list of identified dead is as follows: Lizzie Dappley, aged 20, employed by Dayton company; Anna Weidman, Henry Walsh, a boy employed by Kohlbbrand Engraving company; John J. Reuter, aged 17, an apprentice in the employ of Dunlap and company; George H. Soule, engraver; George Shaw, 16 years old, mailer Detroit Journal; Willie Hawes, 16 years old, mailer Detroit Journal; James Ross, stereotyper, Detroit Journal; William Dunlap, of Dunlap, Rogers typograph supply company; Henry Lariviere, mailing clerk, Detroit Journal; Walter P. Saxby, machinist, employed by Henry D. Book; E. L. Reifer, machinist, employed by Dunlap and company.

The Missing.

George J. Miller; Kate Hiller, forewoman; Hattie Miller, Minnie Leese, Anna Unik, Rose Morgan, Bertha Waldish, Anna Weidman; John Breitenbecher, Adolph Schreiber, Jennie Neugaur, Charles Lind, Carrie Bauer, Rosa Bretz, Emma Leichtenberg, John Koerber, all employees of Hiller & Co.; John Bowman, 165 Chestnut street, employed by Kohler Engraving company; Michael Ward, 627 Seventh street, stereotyper, Detroit Journal; Kittie Leonard, plumber, employed by Davis & Co.; Nelson Lacroix, employed in Henry D. Book; Miss Lue Fretz, aged 20, No. 325 Eleventh street, apprentice, Dunlap & Co.; James Thomas, 390 Junction avenue, machinist, Dunlap & Co.; John S. Derby, 40 Sixth street, carpenter, working at Dunlap & Co.; Joseph Bradley, carpenter, 298 Abbott street, married, two children; Ernest Parkins, 45 Beech street, machinist, working at John Gordon; Lizzie Taylor, Eugene Wilson, John Campbell, William Reynolds.

The List of Injured.

Cornelius George, foreman Journal mailing room, seriously; Charles Herger, employed at John Davis and company's, bruised around head and body and scalded by acid; Annie O'Donoghue, condition serious; H. O'cut, cut head and neck; Charles W. Fisher, pressman on Journal, probably fatally; A. D. Lynch, stereotyper, injuries not serious; James Holt, 16 years old, employed by Speaker Pepton company, not serious; Martin Meyers, not serious; Miss Carrie A. Speck, not serious; Andrew Hilderschild, not serious; Thomas Williams, assistant foreman Journal composing room, not serious; Frank G. Meiner, artist, seriously cut about head with glass; Joseph A. Beresford, bookkeeper, slightly injured; Lucy A. Holden, stenographer, slightly injured; Margaret A. Holden, stenographer, slightly injured; Margaret L. Robinson, stenographer, slightly injured; Joseph Winter, bookkeeper, not seriously; Walter Ott, artist, not serious; Herman Miller, office boy, knocked down and severely cut by falling glass; T. Thompson, engineer Journal, badly cut and bruised.

The Detroit Journal was located at Shelley and Larned streets, occupying for its main office a seventy-foot front on Larned street. Next east of its building and in part of the second block were two twenty-foot fronts, which constituted the scene of the disaster. One of these, No. 45, was wholly occupied by John Davis & Co., salaratus manufacturers, and dealers in grocers' supplies, while in the basement of the other were two boilers which exploded. Just above the boiler room, on the first floor was the Journal's mailing room. The second floor was occupied by the Kohlbbrand Engraving company and W. Dunlap's agency for Rogers' Typograph supplies. On the third and fourth floors were J. George Miller's book bindery, and the top floor was the Journal's stereotyping room. There were three stereotypers at work on the Journal's floor, about thirty girls in the book bindery, besides the proprietor, a machinist and several others in the typograph supply shop, several engravers and assistants in the Kohlbbrand company's room and a force of clerks on the ground floor, the mailing room.

Intimation of Trouble.

The first intimation the neighborhood got of the disaster was from the tremendous report followed by a blinding cloud of debris, smoke and steam, and before this had cleared away the whole five floors and the people working upon them were in one mass of wreckage. The force of the explosion had thrown down the wall between numbers 45 and 47 Larned street and the joists which rested on it came tumbling down, tearing themselves away from the adjoining wall. A heavy fire wall separated this building from the main building of the Journal company. The weight of this was sufficient to withstand the shock of the explosion and although several holes were blown through it the wall remained strong. Firemen were there in a minute from the next corner. The whole down town division of the department followed by volunteers from the crowd that collected started to dig into the debris.

Harrowing Spectacle.

Near the top Annie O'Donoghue was found, her head a mass of bloody flesh, from which faint cries for a priest were emitted constantly. She was carried to the hospital. Then came the harrowing spectacle of the awful calamity as the wounded and dead were searched for. Thousands of people were gathered, and the police were on hand in large numbers. As the workers dug into the debris and the air got into it, the furnace fires set the debris from the bindery ablaze, and the rescuers were driven back by smoke, through which, from time to time came muffled cries for help. The firemen worked on heroically, and streams turned on the blaze soon checked the fire so that a gang of 200 laborers, who had been collected on a building across the street, could get into the debris and pull it into the street.

The Work progressed as rapidly as possible, and the injured and dead were removed one by one from the ruins.
