RELICS OF A SUPERSTITION

Said Kev. Dr. James McLeed in His Last Night's Sermon.

UNSANCTIONED BY SCRIPTURE

ceture Was Not Sensational, but Argued That the Cure for Relie Worship Is Intelligence Based Upon a Clear Understanding of the Rible.

A large congregation was attracted to the First Presbyterian church last night to hear Rev. Dr. James McLeod. the nastor, preach on "The Worship of Relics, and the Power of Superstition." It was a part of Dr. McLeod's series of lectures on "The Ten Words," and was a continuance of the lecture on the second commandment which was delivered last Sunday.

Possibly many in the church were present with the expectation of hearing something sensational or a reference to Rev. P. J. Murphy, the Catholic priest, of Olyphant, with whom Dr. McLeod last week had a mild tilt through the mediumship of the newspapers. There was no reference made papers. There was no reference made to the Catholic divine nor was there anything of a sensational nature in the sermon. It was rather an argument to show that the worship of relics is a superstition, Dr. McLeod's texts were: ' 'And God Dr. McLeod's texts were: 'And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul, so that from his body were brought unto the sick handerchiefs and aprons, and the disease departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them," Acts, xix, 11-12; "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve," Matt, lv. 10. He said:

Difference of the Texts.

Difference of the Texts.

"The first of these texts was used by the bishop of Treves as an argument for the worship of relics. The second was used by Christ, the Bishop of our souls, as an argument for the worship of God alone. The worship of relics is opposed to the doctrine of the second commandment.

"If we except the relics, which are said to be pieces of the true cross, perhaps no other relic has been more highly honored than "The holy coat" is regarded by multitudes as the identical scamless robe for which the Roman soldiers gambled, and to which your attention was recently called. But there is another "holy coat" in Argenteuil which claims to be the identical coat which our Lord wore, and of which He was stripped at the time of His crucifition. The identity of the coat in Argenteuil is vouched for by St. Gregory, of Tours, and surely he is a high authority.

"We need not try to decide between these two cleirents."

a high authority.

"We need not try to decide between these two claimants for honors. We may, however, be permitted to say that, in all probability, both claims are equally false. Suppose we regard the claims made for this "holy coat"—both in respect of its identity and preservation and the miracles wrought in connection with it—as only an interest. nection with it—as only an interest-ing plece of superstition. What then? Would this supposition be uncharita-ble?

The Religion of Heathendom.

"The fact that multitudes have been swayed by superstition will be conceded. The religion of heathendom is, for the most part, the product of superstition. But is Christendom free from superstition? No. indeed, there have been times when multitudes of Christlans were controlled by it. We know what power it exerted during the Dark and Middle Ages. Was it intelligent plety that caused the Crusades? Was it not rather a brilliant, or, if you please, a majestic superstition? It was then that the traffic in relics grew you good luck. And what is all the out superstition?

And what is all the but superstition?

"The cure for superstition is intelligence based upon a clear understanding of Holy Scripture. It was said by a master in our Israel that the great person taught by the history of image worship and the reverencing of relies to the importance of adhering to the worship and the reverencing of relies is the importance of adhering to the Word of God as the only rule of our faith and practice; receiving nothing as true in religion but what the Bible teaches, and admitting nothing into divine worship which the Scriptures do not either sanction or entoin." not either sanction or enjoin."

HIS FAREWELL SERMON.

Presched by Rev. J. W. Williams in the Dunmore Prosbyterian Church. At the Dunmore Presbyterian church last night Rev. J. W. Williams preached last night Rev. J. W. please, a majestic superstition? It was then that the traffic in relies grew to enormous proportions, and, not only then, but many a time since, the empty treasury of one branch of the church has been well filled by appealing not a conjust the piety but to the superstition? But are we free from superstition? We do not believe in the absurd claims which are made for some relies. We do not believe in winking Madonnas or in the miracles said to be wrought in these days at Lourdes and at other places, We do not believe that good St. Davis own head after it was cut off, and carried it a considerable distance. But, so who head after it was cut off, and carried it a considerable distance. But, so who head after it was cut off, and carried it a considerable distance. Fennessy's superb scenic, dramatic production, "Slaves of Gold," is the week's very attractive offering at Manager Kelly's handsome house. Elmer Grandin, who first achieved fame as a character actor, is the author. He made a profound impression by his impersonation of Abraham Lincoln. "Slaves of Gold," although a spectacular drama, is not a play written around splendid scenery. The piece was constructed first, the scenery and mechanical adjuncts prepared afterward to embellish and emphasize the literary work. A powerful dramatic interest is relieved by a rippling stream of genuine comedy, fun replete with wit and humor, and not dependent upon buffoonery and horse play to evoke laughter. It will be seen at the Academy of Music Wednesday evening.

Organist Pennington's twilight recital in Elm Park church Saturday was heard by a large and delighted audience. He was assisted by Miss Julia C. Allen, violinist, and Miss Winifred Sullivan, soprano.

The organist's masterful execution and complete conception of his instrument charmed his hearers, his playing of Gultmant's fifth sonata in C minor, being interpreted with a most property. transcripts.

In their report the jury on this question declared themselves as follows:

"We are of the opinion that the work of the grand inquest could be much simplified if aldermen and justices of the peace would be more painstaking in the making out of transcripts. A number of the peace was a state of the peace would be more painstaking in the making out of transcripts. The report suggested that when prisoners are brought to the jail and their clothing removed, that the warden see that the clothing be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected before being numbered and disinfected before being numbered and placed in the rack.

District Attorney John R. Jones was complimented for the painstaking, courteous and efficient assistance ren-dered by him in disposing of the matters that required the consideration of county affairs the report stated that much credit is due to the county com-missioners for the satisfactory manner in which they manage the affairs of the county. The taxpayers of the county are to be congratulated upon the fact that the county prison and court house are maintained in a manner that will compare favorably with anyother property of a like character in the state, the expense of the same being reduced to the lowest possible minimum.
