Bidwell and McDonald, Who Hit the Bank of England, Are Here.

THEY TELL OF PRISON LIFE

Sentenced for Life in England for Forging $5,000,000 in 1873-They Have Regformed and Are Selling a Book on Their Prison Experiences.

Twenty-two years ago the whole world was ringing with the names of Austin Bidwell and his partners, George McDonald and Edwin Noyes, the young Americans who pulled the leg of the Bank of England until it was so sore that all John Buildom roared with agony. The story of this astonishing raid upon the sacred money bags of Threadneedle street is known to almost everyone and the presence in Scranton of the actors revives the interest it excited. They bear no trace of the feroclous treatment they underwent during the twenty frightful years in English prisons, an unheard-of brutality never inflicted for any such offence on a British subject, but kept in reserve for the benefit of Americans who may chance to fall into the tender mercles of English judges.

to fall into the tender mercies of English judges.

When a Tribune reporter visited them at the Wyoming House last night he found young-looking men, pleasant in address and manner and most entertaining conversationalists. They were asked if men behind the bars differ very much from those who have not yet got there.

"It would be a great mistake," Mr. Bidwell said, "to suppose that a man changes his nature because he passes through an iron gate which faces a path where the footsteps are all directed inware. A prison is a little world where some are better than others, but where very few are as bad as some good people think them. This world inside of the walls has a public opinion of its own and it is at least quite as often just like the public opinion whose sphere is not circumscribed by stone walls and iron bars.

Patient, uncomplainig evidence always excites pity and sympathy. The most ignorant, the most brutal warden will scarcely oppress the man who goes quietly and unresistingly along the thorny road stretched out before him; who not taking the thorns for roses is not disappointed at finding few roses among the thorns. Those, however, who are determined to see the rough side of prison life may easily do so.

Prison a Merciless Machine.

Prison a Merciless Machine. "An English prison is a vast machine in which a man counts for just nothing at all. He is to the establishment wha a bale of merchandise is to a merchant's warehouse. The prison does not look upon him as a man; he is merely an obupon him as a man; he is merely an object which must move in a certain rut. There is no room for the smallest sentiments. The vast machine of which he is an item keeps undisturbed upon its course. Move with it and all is well, resist and you will be crushed. Without passion, without prejudice, but also without pity and without remorse, the machine crushes and passes on. The plank bed, the crank, the bread-andless effectual clubbing at the hands of wardens, the cold in the punishment cells penetrating to the very marrow of the bones, weakness, sickness and un-pitled death are the certain portion of the rebel.

"The inhabitant of a cell has a very rough row to hoe under any circum-stances and it has to be hoed, but there is no necessity for him to fill his row with stones and to plant roots in it himself. He soon finds his level and the impression he makes on his arrival is the one which as a rule clings to him to the end.

Novel Amusement of Prisoners. "One of the very few amusements prisoners have is in watching the important fellows—the men whose friends could do so much for them if they would only let them know where they are. Sometimes a chap who has perhaps been a body servant or something of the kind, who has picked up the kind of veneer he could catch by aping his master, will provide smiles for every one he comes in contact with during his master, will provide smiles for every one he comes in contact with during his stay. So long as their inventions do no more harm than make them ridiculous they are only laughed at and let alone, but when one of them develops a talent for invention which molests or injures others, especially when it takes the form of confidential communication to the governor of what he sees and still more of what he does not see, such retribution as both prisonsee, such retribution as both prison-ers and officers can inflict is not long in falling.

"I have met men from every class of society from the highest to the lowest, acting just as they would outside, some carrying all those little indescribable mannerisms of well-bred met. uncomplaining, enduring and self-respecting. From them the grades go down to the lowest, the beetle-browed ruffian of melodrama, in all but the shape, a wild beast amenable to no argument but one which addresses him in the shape of a thump over the head from a warden's club. den's club.

Degrades, Brutalizes and Hardens.

"An English prison is a place designed with consummate skill to degrade, brutalize and harden. Some manage to escape its influence partly, but most of those who fall under it go out far more dangerous to society them. but most of those who fall under it go out far more dangerous to society than the day the judge pronounces his generally atrocious sentence. In any case whether they live through the torture and come out to face the desperate problem of how to fit themselves into the world again or whether they faint under it and disappear into a prison grave with a prison funeral to instantaneous oblivion, I do not remember one who would not agree with me in proclaiming that success in wrongdoing is failure."

one who would not agree with me in proclaiming that success in wrongdoing is failure."

Mr. Bidwell and Mr. McDonald express themselves as delighted with Scranton. The last time Mr. McDonald was here was at the close of the war and his remembrance of the city was of a small thriving town. He is astonished to see the great business activity and the buildings, both completed and in process of erection which would be an honor even to New York and he contrasts the enterprise and push of Scranton citsens with the languor and want of enrgy he has noticed in other places.

They have published a book which conveys many a lesson to young men and which is full of value to business men. The letters they have from leading bankers like J. Pierpont Morgang of New York, and Lyman J. Gage, of Chicago, speak warmly of its great interest. Only men of their ability who have undergone their tremendous experience could produce anything so dramatic. John W. Mackay, "The Bonanss King," declared that he sat up two nights reading it and he ordered thirty-eight copies that he might present one to each of the employes in his Mew York of the employes in his Me

sud Broke His Skull.

Patrick Corcoran, aged 50 years and unmarried, a brother-in-law of John Merrigan, the man who served two years in the Eastern penitentiary for burning barns at Dutch Gap in the North End, died at the Lackawanna hospital at 9.30 last night from a fracture at the base of the skull. Corcoran was received at the hospital at 6 o'clock in the evening; he was partially conscious for a short while, but could not utter anything coherent.

He was taken to the hospital from Davis' Golden Eagle hotel on Center street, where the misfortune befel him. A Tribune reporter visited the hotel last night and had an interview with the proprietor regarding the occurence. M. Davis said he had known Corcoran for the past thirty years. He came into the place yesterday morning, and was on the borders of delirium tremens from excessive drinking.

Late in the afternoon he came in again and sat down for awhile. When supper was ready Mr. Davis urged Corcoran to go upstairs and eat something. He proceeded to follow this advice, went to the hallway leading upstairs, ascended a few steps and fell backward, striking his head against the floor. As soon as possible, Mr. Davis summoned a carriage and sent him to the Lackawanna hospital.

The doctor there found him suffering from a fracture at the base of the skull. Blood was oozing from his ears, and nothing could be done to save his life. The case was too aggravated. Coroner J. A. Kelley was notified and ordered the body to be aept at the hospital morgue until this morning for investigation. Corcoran, when he worked, was employed in a brickyard in the North End, and he boarded with his sister, Mrs. Merrigan. Operations were recently suspended for the winter, and when he got his new he spent all of his sister, Mrs. Merrigan. #### BUILDING FOR THE PARISH

Ambitious Project of St. Luke's Church Congregation.

HOUSE FOR MANY PURPOSES

School, Kindergarten, Gymnasium and Apartments for the Church Guilds and Societies.

The congregation of St. Luke's Episcopal church is slowly but surely bringing to a definite consideration its extensive project of erecting a parish building alongside the church on Wyoming avenue. St. Luke's now has one of the four most valuable church properties in the city, and theirs will represent a greater outlay and value by at least $25,000 if the parish building is erected.

least $25,000 if the parish building is erected.

A year ago the vestry authorized the rector, Rev. Rogers Israel, to procure plans for the proposed structure. The plans were made and have since been in the rector's possession. They provide for a four-story stone structure of a gothic architectural style in keeping with the old church, whose peculiar lines stand out as a source for admiration by those who appreciate the imposing and artistic effects of the best church architecture of several decades ago. It is proposed to have space in the new building for an industrial school, kindergarten, gymnasium, auditorium and apartments for clubs and societies.

Pian Propose 1 by the Ladies.

Recently the women of the church decided to discuss the possibility of their being the main source for procuring the $25,000 for building or for obtaining the greater part of it. Their second meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the parish room, corner of Adams avenue and Linden street. Several plans were discussed and it was finally decided to solicit in the congregation purchasers for 1,000 subscription shares at $25 each. The meeting did not consider it wise to endorse the plan finally until it was known that it would bring about the desired result, but this point will be determined, it is expected, within a few weeks. Plan Propose 1 by the Ladies.

determined, it is expected, within a few weeks.

The parish building project is really of greater magnitude than can be appreciated by casual notice. A four-story building exclusively devoted to the secular, society and charitable work of a church and teeming with the business that such a work entails is something new in Scranton; in fact it is not often attempted outside the larger cities, except by churches as energetic and praccept by churches as energetic and prac-tical as St. Luke's, and even then the scheme is not put forward on so exten-sive a scale as in the present instance.

Enlarged Sphere of Action.

But St. Luke's rector, the vestry and the leading element in the congregation have realized that the scope and sphere of church effort in Scranton must be broadened to keep pace with the city itself, and they believe that at this stage the field for effort is beyond the church's facilities.

So extensive a project, when its details are better known, will be consid-Enlarged Sphere of Action.

tails are better known, will be considered no less a compliment to the progress of the city than to St. Luke's church, which is bound to be practical and to keep pace with things.
