"Mrs. Linden, the housekeeper, who was in the house with four maids, became frightened and rang for assistance from the stable. Black, the coach-man, thinking some one was ill, ran to the house, and on being told that there was a "burglar" on the porch hurried back and procured his gun, which was loaded with small bird shot When he got to the end of the plazze he saw Connelly standing by the front door and called out: 'Who are you? "THE MERRY WORLD."

"The Merry World," properly described by its owners, Canary & Lederer, as a dramatic pausse-cafe, intended to cheer one after a good dinner and containing a little of everything except plot, was presented to a threequarter filled house at the Frothingham last night. The thing is in three acts and three or four times as many scenes and its junfole of song, dantce and specialty work serves the strictly amusement purpose for which is was built. "The Merry World" is good-but it is not as good, not near as good, as was its predecessor, "The Passing

Show. There were three features of the production—the general good looks, figure and costuming of the chorus, the Trilby impersonation by Amellia Summer-ville, the dialect sketches of David Warfield and the dancing of La Petite Adelaide. The performance concludes with a Trilby burlesque. In the final scene Miss Summerville, under Svengali's hypnotic influence, is said to give the best characterization of Du Maurier's creation than has yet been shown in burlesque or legitimate acting. Her general poise confirmed the report which preceded "The Merry World" that she appears very nearly as the artist-author drew and described the

COMPARISON OF THE MEI

U. P. Players Have Advantages Over the Local Men.

WHERE THEIR STRENGTH LIES

It Is Mainly in the Years of Exper ence That Most of the 'Varsity Men Have Had Upon the Gridiron.

The great Pennsylvania "'Varsity" Foot Ball team-a team that has not met defeat in the last two years-will oattle with the Scranton Bicycle clut eleven at the Base Ball park Friday afternoon. What will the outcome be As is usual before a big game, a comparison of the men who will participate will not be amiss. in drawing a comparison between the two teams on one point, and possibly three, Scranton will show up equally as strong as Pennsylvania. point, the center, is a vital one on a ream, the battle between the glants should be carefully watched by the spectators. Lou G. Cleveland, of Scranton, and Alfred Bull, of Wilkes-Barre, will be pitted against each other Cleveland's 205 pounds and six years over the Wilkes-Barrean's 175 pound and four years' experience, but will this or will it be discovered that Cleveland unaided by experienced coaches, has solved the mysteries of this all important position? If he has, then, with his nis additional weight, he should have

Bull at his mercy. Connery and Zang will oppose Stan aard and Woodruff in the order named Here, again, it is thought that Scran-ton will not be far behind, for Stannard s only a fair guard and in last year's game, Connery had very little trouble with the Pennsylvania man, and on two casions made an opening through him large enough to drive a horse through: while on the other hand Stannard failed to get through the giant Connery in the whole game. Woodruff played opposite Gilbride last year, but if he expects to have as easy a time this year, he will be much mistaken, for Zang is the most aggressive player on the Bicycle team: he is full of vitality; he does not give his man any rest until the call of time. Woodruff will have a slight advantage in weight and wind, but Zang is a natural foot ball player and combined with an unusual amount of strength will make the big Pennsylvania guard hustle throughout the

Among the foregoing the game will be a battle of the glants and it will be well worth the price of admission to watch these six men fight for suprem-

At right tackle, Wagonhurst should have the best of it. He is larger and heavier than Allen, and is considered one of the best tackles that has ever played with old Pennsylvania. At left tackle Scranton will be again outweighed and out-classed-Farrar, 190 pounds, three years' experience under good coach, vs. Coggins, 180 pounds one year's experience, no coach. But the Scranton tackles are plucky boys and will play so much harder they find themselves pitted aginst such strong men. Boyle and Dickson, ends, against Decker and Owens, ends, Scrantonians who have watched the defensive work of the Scranton's ends, know what they can do. Getting down the field on punts is their weakest point, while the Pennsylvania's ends are noted for the way they kept Brewer and Dunlop from gaining in the Har-

Gelbert, Minds and Brooke are nearly perfect, two of them being chosen on the picked all-American eleven for "94 and 95." Of the trio playing back of Scranton's line, only one man will come anywhere near being in their class Posner will not be able to make the gains that Minds will, still his 180 pounds of avoirdupois will make quite on indention in If. P's line.

Posner is the surest man on the Scranton team to advance the ball, and a large amount of the work will fall on him during the game. Thayer and Foster will be simply outclassed in every respect by Brooke and Gelbert, though, should Noakes play, Brooke would not have a sure thing by any means in the kicking.

At quarter back, Williams will have an advantage over Walsh, if for only the reason of experience, as Williams has played that position for three years and Walsh has not as yet played there & year. In tackling it's an even thing. So now it may be asked, how, with so much against them, can the Bicycle boys score? The answer is, if Scranton's wedge-shaped interference is better than the tandem interference, which is used by the Pennsylvania team, then all of Pennsylvania's individual advantage, would be overcalanced by this one fact. Cornell used the tandem interference It was asked of a Cornell man at a reent Scranton game, what he thought

They Have Decided to Abandon Their Expensive Racing Teams. Despite the arguments which some people adduce in favor of the retention of the three classes of cycle racing men, as the days go by it becomes more and nore certain that the intermediate, or

What-is-it?" class, is doomed. In connection with the circular letter ent out recently by the Cycle Board of Trade sounding the manufacturers on he subject of racing teams, it is stated that already four of the larger firms of makers have decided against the cylists, and will put no racing men on the circuit next year. Others who needed out a leader will, it is expected, now lock in, and with no one to hire Class B men it is difficult to see how that form of cycling can exist. This does not mean that the good old system of paying men to ride wheels is ead. By no means. Manufacturers will undoubtedly continue to pay racing men for some time to come, but they find it cheaper to add to the cash which professionals can win than to maintain a stable of their own.
