New York, Dec. 8.-The Sun prints an amusing account of the circumstances that have been responsible for a suit for damages that has just been begun against the Cosmopolitan Magazine by George M. Porteous, the agent of the Bertilion system of identifying crimi-nals. Delancey Nicoll is Porteous' counsel, and filed the papers in the case yesterday. Mr. Porteous has been at work introducing the system of identification in this country for several years. His idea has been to establish central bureau in New York or Chicago, in which would be kept a collection of photographs and measurements of all the criminals in the country. It is his contention and the contention of the advocates of the system that photographs are generally useless for identification, because of the possibility of disguise; that is, a man may grow his whiskers in any number of styles, each one of which makes him a different man, so far as a full-face picture goes. Partly to prove this and partly from curiosity, a year or so ago Porteous had a lot of pictures taken of himself. There were twelve in the set-six front view nd six side view. He says he had only three or four sets of these made, and he got the negatives, so that no more could be made. He gave one set away. That was to Major R. W. McClaughney, endent of the prison at Pontiac, Mich., who was formerly chief of police of Chicago. None of the other sets, he in Chicago with a friend, when his atention was attracted by a set of photographs in a book store window. Under the set was a legend, "Photographs of a Famous Criminal." He stopped to look at them, and identified himself. He rushed into the store, demanding where the pictures came from, and commanding that they be taken from the window. The store man said the pictures had been clipped from the in the kitchen. November number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Porteous bought a copy, by a professional criminal, who greetd him effusively and told him what tough luck it was to have his picture printed like that. Porteous didn't know the criminal he says, but the fellow identified him by the pictures. This added to his unhappiness. Photographs Were Lonned.

Major McClaughney told him that a man named Crofton had borrowed the set of pictures for use in the Cosmoitan, but had agreed that before the story that was to accompany them was used a proof of it should be sent to the Major, so that he might revise it. No such proof was ever sent, and the Major was as surprised and indignant at publication of the article, as was Mr. Porteous. After this explanation Mr. Porteous took time to sit down and read the article. Nowhere in it did he find be assertion boldly made that the picitares was those of a criminal. The article was headed "Identifying Criminals; by A. F. B. Crofton." In the course of it there was this which Mr. Porteous concluded might be mistaken may often be confusing to the uninitiated observer, and may even cause an expert to hesitate when they both happen to be taken in a full-face pose. Phis hesitation is impossible where a profile portrait is adjoined, for, even uld there be a resemblance between e a distinct difference in the formation of the ear, supposing that the originals makes no duplicates, and there are no two ears in the world which are absosutely identical; there is, indeed, a difference between the right and left ears started for the scene at once the same person. Owing to the great variety of its curves and hollows, the ear is by far the most important factor of identification of the human features. It seems to undergo no modification of form from the time of birth until death, and this immutability, which prevents it playing any part in the changing extions of the face, causes it to attract less notice than any of the other organs. Our eye is as little accusmed to observe it as our language to escribe it.

"In the various photographs of a professional criminal, taken at considerappreciation of his race, the lotter abundance the arrangement and abundance his his ance of his hair, all change, but his ins unalterable, and the identity of its formation in different photographs is sufficient to affirm the identity of the individual. In the set of ographs shown, the apparent dismilarity of the various portriats is ied or offset by the evident identity of the ear. The photographs in reality are all of the same man, who was taken at various times in different disguises muld have been almost impossible monstrate this fact had the profile portrait not been adjoined to that of the full face. But in the side view the similarity of the forehead, the angle of the nose, and the formation of the vond a doubt."

Episode of the Clearing House. But Mr. Porteous didn't see what he ald do about it, and he had about ande up his mind to drop the matter He came to New York on a visit, and out house. A couple of minutes after he got in there he noticed a gentleman eying him curiously. Finally the gentleman came up to him and said, "My friend, what is your business here?" and he said it in a way that made Porteous think of the gallery in the Cosmopolitan. Mr. Porteous said at once that he was Mr. Porteous, who was introducing was Mr. Porteous, who was introducing the Bertilloh system of identifying criminals. "I thought I saw your picture in the Cosmopolitan," said the gentle-man, and he added significantly, "and

We did not know Mr. Porteous, We were careful not to mention any name, and not to say that they were pictures of a criminal. We printed the pictures for exactly the same purpose that he had them made. We have placed the matter in the hands of our counsel, and it has been submitted to some of the best lawyers in the city. They say that there is no libel whatever in it. We shall certainly fight the case, no matter what it costs."

Mr. Porteous was seen at the office of Mooney & Boland. He said that an offer had been made to print in the next issue of the Cosmopolitan a statement to the effect that the pictures were those of the introducer of the system, and not of a criminal, but that was not satisfactory. His counsel had informed him, he said, that he had a good case and he proposed to press it. He did not allege that there was any malic in the publication.

There is not a great deal of resen lance between the pictures and himself. A trained eye could probably discover a similarity.

On the way he was stopped Mrs. Schnyder lying on the floor. He called to Dr. Hill, who was in the vestibule. It took the physician only a moment to discover she had taken poison. He administered an antidote but his efforts were of no avail, and Mrs. Schnyder died while her husband's body was being carried to the hearse. When the suicide was told to the nourners women fainted and became hysterical, and every man had tears in his eyes. The husband's body was taken back into the house, and the hearse and car riages were driven back to the stables. funeral of both husband and wife will be held this afternoon at their home, and they will be buried in the Galesburg, Ill., Dec. 8.—Dr. Evans, president of Hedding college, Abingdon, in an article published today, savagely attacks foot ball and announces that he has prohibited the game at Hedding. He criticises the daily press for giving so much space to the game, and says that whole pages have been filled with sensational recital of games.

He asserts that foot ball has become a disgrace to college life and Christian civilization, and classes it with prize and buil fights. He affirms that it has a demoralizing influence on college girls also, picturing them as yelling with delight over shocking brutality to players.

BACKED BY WESTERN MINERS

for Coinage at 16 to 1-An Endeavor Will Be Made to Swing One of the Old Parties Into Line.

Chicago, Dec. 8 .- The free-silver leaders of the country have arranged for the marshalling of their forces by means of a secret political order or society, which will be incorporated under Illinois laws in a few days. They hope to control the election of 1896, and to dictate terms to one or both of the great parties. The new order is to be known as the "Patriots of America," and will have as its main object the restoration of the free coinage of silver at a 16 to 1 ratio. It owes its origin to W. H. Harvey, author of "Coin's Financial School," and is also backed by the National Bimetallic league, the Western mine owners and the friends and advocates of free silver generally. The success of Harvey's free-silver literature has brought him into promin ence and made him practically the leading light in the radical bimetallic move ment. He has maintained expensive offices in the Fort Dearborn building in this city and has been active in the dissemination of free-silver literature His ambition, however, appears not to have stopped at this point, for he conceived the idea of a secret political order in the cause of free silver, which and Coro aginst the Crespo Governhas now assumed tangible form, and which will give him commanding influence in the campaign of '96 among those who favor a change in the financial polley of the government.

Chicago Bureau at Work, Harvey's publications attracted the attention of the friends of silver, and made Chicago the headquarters of the free silver propaganda. Last summer free-silver bureau was established here, backed by Western capitalists, with ex-Representative H. F. Bartine of Nevada, and E. B. Light, a wellknown Western man, in charge. Under their direction the National Bimetallic league was organized, and they also began the publication of a weekly paper, The National Bimetallist." A cancass was made of every county in the United States, except those in New England, and thousands of letters went out from Harvey's office to leading men of all parties, who, it was thought, could be "trusted." The letter in question read as follows:

Dear Sir: We wish to know the name of one reliable, zealous, patriotic man in each county in your state, in hearty sympathy with our cause, with whom Mr. Hawley wishes to communicate at once concerning the organization of our forces. While you may not be able to furnish us all the names desired, yet please make the list as complete as you can, and we will push the inquiry through others. Give the name of no one who is not reliable and earnestly attached to our cause. We do not want the name of any one who is a partisan. or who is likely to follow his party. should it go wrong on this question. The names we do want are those who would bolt their party in case it declared in favor of the present financial policy of the government, or equivo cated on the subject.

Plans of the Leaders. These letters were sent out in September and elicited replies from every part of the country.

The free silver champions propose through the order, to establish a permanent organization in every county in the United States, with members To restore this property to the high poin the United States, with members coinage at the 16 to 1 ratio. The literature of the "Patriots of America" points out what is termed the "danger to American institutions through the lominance of foreign monetary interests," and appeals to all patriotic Americans to throw aside party lines and adopt a financial system on a bimetallic basis. Over one thousand local organizations representing every section their charters the first of the year, and will obtain the ritual and other working material from the Chicago headquarters.

No special party has apparently been selected to act as the sponsor to this movement, but it seems rather to be an effort in the direction of establishing a free silver party for the campaign of '96. Its promoters in thirty or more states represent Republican, Democratic and Populist faith, and include among their number men of prominence. If it is found impossible swing either of the great parties into line for free silver, the present plans call for a national conference of silver men early in the summer of '96, and the nomination of a separate ticket for the presidential campaign.

Great Loss of Life and Property by

Gales and Flood. Berlin, Dec. 8.-The gales which have prevailed throughout Germany, with their resultant disasters still continue. Crespo Government. New York, Dec. 8.-The steamer Venezuela, from Venezuela, brings new of a serious insurrection at Maracaibo ment, which was still in ful swing whe the steamer left La Guayra.

Particulars of the exact causes lead ing to the revolt against the established government were difficult to optain up to December 1, when the Vene zuela left La Guayra, but General Crespo, the president, had taken most energetic measures for the prompt suppres-sion of the revolt. He had at once dispatched two armed schooners in tow of tugs from La Guayra, and had shipped 500 men aboard of them.

Business at Maracaibo was practic ally at a standstill, and it was only by great efforts that the agents of the Red D Line had succeeded in dispatching the small coastwise steamer with the cargo from that port to be loaded aboard the Venezuela at La Guayra. The leader of the insurrection is said to be Rojas Paul, who has been at Curacoa for some time laying his plans. All sorts of indefinite rumors were afloat at the time of the Venezuela's depart ure, but no anxiety was felt apparently. as to the action of Great Britain in regard to the boundary question. The Spanish Minister had just arrived from Porto Rico, but had not had an audience with Crespo.
