[Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson and Bacheller.]

Felicia Charlion, a beautiful and spirited fri belonging to an old but impoverished irginia family, has accepted a position a private secretary to Mrs. Caldwell, a realthy society leader at Newport. She as formed a pleasant acquaintance with young man named Duncan Moore—a uest in the house of her employer—who t first did not understand Felicia's position. The young lady has just been mornied by the distant manner of her paroness.

II.

The incident, occurring upon the her unpleasantly. With her simple, hearty, southern ideas, she could not imagine arrival in a strange house without some sort of a personal wel-come from the hostess; and the quality of that investigating gaze was to her totally unknown. But, taking heart, she noted with delight the exquisite beauty of the verdant lawns and radiant flower beds on either side the wellkept driveway leading up to such a ouse as surpassed her fondest dream of imposing completeness. The striped yellow awnings over all the windows on the front, shading flower boxes that overflowed with bloom; the verandas yielding glimpses of chairs and couche and tall palms; and above all the flowers and plants massed in every angle where they could be placed in exterior decoration—seemed to Felicia incredi- morning following her arrival, she bly enchanting. As she sprang out of the trap and looked around her, catching a distant vista of blue sea at the end of a reach of velvet sward, she was duzed with excitement. She forgot that and without a smile. The girl, unacshe had been left standing there alone; and her first fall from the clouds was caused by the too easy manner and lan- and for a moment stood sick at heart escort her to her room. Felicia had nothing to complain of in externals, certainly. The room that ton had in no wise transgressed, and was assigned to her, all white-and-rose and green-stained furniture, with a window looking upon the sea, was delightfully cool and tempting. Tea was with fantastic frilled cushions of China served to her there, her little trunk was silk, beside a table covered with specibrought in and unstrapped, and upon the table she found a book or two, should she wish to pass her time otherwise than by looking out of the flowerframed shaded window. But by and by fell upon her spirit. How long she had received instructions to fill up a series sat there she did not know, until she of dinner invitations, with names and became conscious that a young man in dates for a bancuet to be given three summer flannels had come along the weeks off, and to address envelopes path leading to her cyric, and was from a list furnished her for a musicale searching for something he had lost. | for which a great artist had been en-"I beg your pardon," he said, taking gaged to come up from New York. off his hat; "I did not know anyone had succeeded me in my favorite haunts." "You are looking for this?" she said, holding out a little compass of gold and crystal she had picked up, then for-"Yes, thank you. It represents the economies of my small sister who sent it to me for a birthday gift to-day," he said, taking the trifle from her finger "I suppose you have just come, and have not yet seen our hostess.

Cheered by his cordial tone, Felicia bringing up are wont to do, easily, fear-lips and in her friendly eyes; and at you in the basket phaeton; and, as you once they were launched upon a conversation that proved, apparently, as satisfactory to Duncan Moore as it certainly was to our poor little confiding Felicia, tongue-tied for so many hours and aching to communicate her sensa-She at once discovered that Mr. Moore was, like herself, an inmate of the house; was spending a fortnight with the Caldwells, and was already almost "done to death" with the insistence of Newport hospitality. He, of course, took his artless and refreshing little person, whose good looks charmed his eye, to be a guest upon his own plane. en if Felicia had suspected his mistake, it would not have occurred to her to do more than laugh at it. "Down uth" the young lady engaged to be verness or companion or secretary is in all things a member of the family; and when, as usual, she is well born and well bred, the fact of poverty is the merest bagatelle, so far as social con-sideration is concerned. How could it enter into Felicia's head that she was ceforth to be a taboo to the familiar ssociates of her employer? Luckily, upon this occasion, she was spared finding it out. The maidenly reserve that in her underlaid a manner almost coquettish in its directness, mpted her to withdraw from the interview. As she arose, and Moore of-fered to walk to the house with her, with the prettiest gesture of a small antly Relieved by

WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS

A warm bath with Cuticura cosp, and a single application of atteura (ointment), the great Skin cure, followed by mild doses of atticura Resolvent (blood purier), will afford instant relief, perand sleep, and point to a permanent, and economiwhite hand she motioned him to re-

"But why?" he said, "or, at least, when shall I talk with you again?" "When you shall have been properly introduced," she exclaimed, vanishing

Moore sat for a while upon the for-saken bench, till shadows lengthening upon the lawn, and the purple light of evening on the sea, sent him within doors to dress for dinner. When he came down into the library where the threshold of her new experience, struck house-party met before dinner was announced, he looked eagerly about him, but in the various groups saw no sign of the fairy of the cliff. As look would have it, his scat at table that night was far away from Mrs. Caldwell's, and, until just after the men came in from the smoke-room, he had no opportunity to make inquiries of his hostess

"The young lady who arrived this afternqoon?" repeated Mrs. Caldwell. in bewilderment. "You are dreaming Nobody new is here. You know they sny I am faithful to the same old gang, and you are all present, I believe. Moore shrank a little from her as he went on in his dogged way:

"Miss Chariton, I mean. The young lady from Virginia, who came while you were driving." Mrs. Caldwell threw back her dark.

well-coiffed head, with a peal of laugh-

"I see what you mean now. It's my new secretary, who's come to replace that dreadful, pushing creature I told ou of; and, if you believe me, I got in so late to dress, I have not seen her yet. How could you make such a mis-"What mistake?"

"To-er-suppose that she was one f my guests."

Moore, angered by her supercilious lrawl, felt his color rise. Then, restraining himself, he turned on his heel and left her, inwardly resolved not to spend another day under the roof of his pretentions worldling. But when the next day came he did

Poor Fellcia! It was such a sad awakening! Twenty-four hours spent in her new enpacity were quite sufficient to show her that business, not friendship, was the platform on which she stood. Mrs. Caldwell, when, on the summoned here latest employe into the boudbir, where Felicia's duties were to be performed, had received her with the most perfunctory of handshakes customed to this omission of social courtesies, fancied herself an offender, guage of a lady's maid who came to with wondering what she had done. In a short time, however, Mrs. Caldwell made it perfectly clear that Miss Charlwas even welcome in the stress of her employers' arrears of correspondence Leaning back in a deep wicker chair men vases of emerald glass each containing a perfect rose, the great lady dictated a dozen little notes of courtesy, conventionality or charity, which Felicia's fleet pen transcribed upon sheets from a silver-mounted papera shaded bench upon letters. This done, and evidently done the cliff over the sea an infinite peace to Mrs. Caldwell's satisfaction, Felicia

"This will give you enough for to day," said Mrs. Caldwell, rising to go. You will consider this room your own to sit in at all hours, but your meals will be taken in what we call the schoolroom, which is more convenient for the servants to carry the trays into. I-erthink you probably dined there last night. It is a nice little room, and I hope you will take care that they give you everything nicely. The housekeeper has the strictest orders about my secretary's comfort, and you must imanswered as the girls of her race and mediately report to her if anything is omitted. At any time when you want saly smiles, playing around her rosy to drive out, one of the grooms can take see, there are books here, and a plano, if you play. I am happy to say that I think you will suit me exactly; and I am glad Maud Branham spoke to you. Your salary will be paid monthly, and here ((handing her a check) is the first month in advance, as you may have some purchases to make." This was a kindly thought, and to it Felicia's spirit responded; but, looking into Mrs. Caldwell's ever unsmiling face. she dared not speak. The lady rustled from the room, and Felicia, left alone in the apartment that was so far beyond her dreams of luxury, dropped her little head down upon the blotter before her and burst into tears.

"She does not mean to be unkind," Felicia mused, after a week of her new life had passed. "I think, in her heart, she fancies she is a model patroness. But oh! the way I am made to feel my distance! Never a laugh or a jest for me; yet as soon as she rejoins any of her guests, she is the gayest of the gay. She must know—Maud told her—I am a lady born, and entitled to rank with the best. I wonder if it ever occurred to her what life is without anybody to to her what life is without anybody to talk to or to confide in. I suppose a really superior character would find solace in this beautiful room, add the walks and drives, and, above all, in books. But I never said I am a superior character. I want people, people, people. Bomebody to sympathize with me; somebody to hear my chatter. How many things I've noticed here in New-

THIRTEEN AT TABLE Seal Capes AND Jackets Trust and

Garments

Of every description and at prices that insure quick sales.

Ladies', Misses' and Children's

Cloth Capes and Jackets

HERE IS ONE OF OUR SPECIALS-

German Beaver Cloth EDWARD B. STURGES, Jacket for

Fur Repairing a specialty.

F. L. CRANE

324 LACKAWANNA AVE.

port that it would be of such fun to talk over. I declare I almost hate this loveish it she stole out for a walk about the case upon a table littered with every ly old blue wall paper, and the white enamelled furniture, and the blue china ornaments, and that Heavenily bit of flower box in the window. now, how a canary must feel in his cage. I wan't to get out; I want to sing, to spread my wings outside.'

As Felcia spoke, the dimples came back into her checks; her eyes shone blue as the sea; she sprang out of her chair, and, pushing away the chairs from a space on the mirror-like parquetted floor, began to tread the measure of a solitary minuet.

After Mrs. Caldwell had left her for the morning, she was sure of several uninterrupted hours; and now she must relieve her restlessness or perish, the little maiden thought. So, humming a tune from Don Giovanni, she accompanied it with footsteps light as thistle down. Nearing the door into the hall, she did not perceive it was ajar, until a tap came, and at the aperture was revealed to her startled view a gentle-

"Oh!" exclaimed Felicia, instantly transformed into a statue of confu-

"I don't know what you think of me bolting in like this," said Mr. Duncan Moore, penitentially. "But Mrs. Cald-well is responsible. She is just about starting for her round of visits, and told me to run up and get her address book-that is, she told her footman Miss Charlton would give it to him, and as he did not hear her, I came. I hope you won't mind. I've been wanting awfully to see you, even since that day, and to ask you to tale a walk with me; but, somehow, I couldn't get a chance Why do they keep you mewed up like this? It is shameful to treat you as if you were 50 and a frump."
"Here is the book," said Felicia, put, ting into his hands a silver-clasped affair of lizard skin. "You need not apologize, I am not angry. I am only too thankful to speak to somebody who is ot a servant." "Thanks for small favors," he reolled, rather nettled. "But I am very much ashamed that ou saw me prancing about like a lunatic," she went on: "I was only taking a little exercise; and now, please go, for Mrs. Caldwell does not like to be kept "Will you fix an hour to walk with me?" he pursued, eagerly. "No, I can't; so don't mention it again." "Will you talk to me somewhere-anywhere."

"How can 12" asked Felicia, ready to cry, because in her heart, she should have like a bothing better than the companionship of this hearty, bright-faced foung fellow.
"Then I shall just go out of this "Then I shall just go out of this Also an exception." house tonforrow," he said, like a spoiled child. "As if I hadn't stayed on here a week, for nothing but to get another

"Don't, please," said Felicia, now earnestly; and with an impatient gesture he departed. (To Be Concluded.)

Take No Substitute... Gail Borden Eagle Brand CONDENSED NILE

TO OUR PATRONS:

Washburn-Crosby Co. wish to assure their many patrons that they will this year hold to their usual custom of milling STRICTLY OLD WHEAT until the new crop is fully cured. New wheat is now upon the market, and owing to the excessively dry weather many miliers are of the opinion that it is already cured, and in proper condition for milling. Washburn-Crosby Co. will take no risks, and will allow the new wheat fully three months to mature before grinding.

This careful attention to every detail of milling has placed Washburn-Crosby Co.'s flour far above other brands.

Wholesale Agents.

BEAUTIFTL GOODS AT LOW PRICES. JEWELRY WATCHES CLOCKS

OPERA GLASSES, Etc. Also an exceptionally fine line of

GOLD-HEADED CANES AND UMBRELLAS

> Our stock embraces everything in the way of desirable and appropriate for old and young.

NO GOODS MISREPRESENTED.

LUTHER. 107 Wyoming Ave.

THE LACKAWANNA

Safe Deposit COMPANY

404 LACKAWANNA AVENUE . . SCRANTON, PA.

CAPITAL, -$250,000 SURPLUS, 65,000 UNDIVIDED PROFITS, -35,000

Business and Personal Accounts Received

OFFICERS.

WILLIAM T. SMITH, President,

HENRY J. ANDERSON, Vice-President, JOHN W. FOWLER, Treasurer.

DIRECTORS.

HENRY BELIN, Jr.,

WILLIAM CONNELL.

HENRY J. ANDERSON, GEORGE SANDERSON, WILLIAM T. SMITH, P. J. HORAN, CONRAD SCHROEDER, J. BEN DIMMICK. CHARLES H. WELLES, T. C. SNOVER.

Savings Deposits received and Interest paid thereon January 1 and July 1

This Company acts as Trustee, Executor, Guardian, etc., under appointment by the Courts, Corporations, or Individuals.

Designated Legal Depository for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the Courts of Lackawanna County.

Safes of Desirable Sizes in Fire and Burglar Proof Vaults, from $5.00 to $40.00 per annum, and Convenient Storage for Valuables for Summer Months.

OF SCRANTON.

270,000

Special Attention Given to Business and Personal Accounts.

INTEREST PAID ON TIME DEPOSITS.

THE Mational Bank of Scranton.

ORGANIZED 1890.

CAPITAL 250,000 SUKPLUS, $10,00

Samuel Hines, James M. Everhart, Irving A. Finch, Pierce B. Finley, Joseph J. Jermyn, M. S. Kemerer, Charles P. Matthews, John T. Porter, W. W. Watson.

PROMPT, ENERGETIC, CONSERVATIV and LIBERAL.

The bank invites the patronage of bus

DUPONT'S

HENRY BELIN, Jr.

HS WYOMING AVE. Screnton, Ps

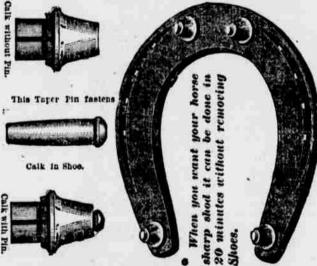

HORSEMEN!

FOR SNOW AND ICE.

Have your Horses' Shoes prepared with proper holes for

"Hold Fast" Calks.

SIZES, 5-16, 3-8, 7-16, 9-16.

Rust and Strip Ou more than old style. Threads to

ASK YOUR SHOER ABOUT THEM. For further particulars address

SCRANTON, PA. Agents for Northern Pennsylvania and Southwestern New York.

THE DICKSON MANUFACTURING CO Locomotives, Stationary Engines, Boilers, Hoisting and Pumping Machinery.

For sale by JOHN H. PHELPS, Pharmacist, cor. Wyoming Avenue and Spruce Street, Scranton Pa.

