The sentiment against engaging dances in advance, which custom this year has been tabooed by the request and example of the Bachelors themselves. continues to prevail. The majority of the popular girls and as popular young men are more than holding their own against the selfishness of a very few who have been inclined to engage ahead nothwithstanding the desire of the Bachelors. Fortunately this inclina-tion has not prevailed to any serious extent and the few young people who do antagonize the wishes of the Bachelors, who are practically the hosts of the ball, must expect to reap the disapproval of the patronesses and the married element. The more accommodating young men and ladies will reap the commendation due them.
