HOW FISHER MET DEATH.

Woman's Confession May Clear Up Mystery Surrounding a Sloux City Crime. oux City, Iowa, Dec. 25 authorities claim to have received a confession from a woman whose name they will not yet make public, concerning the death of George Fisher. According to her account Fisher was enticed into a resort in Covington, across the river from here, and drugged in or-der that his wallet, in which he carried considerable sum, might be taker from him.

Being weak from drink,he succumbed to the drug, and his body was sunk in the river with a weight attached. The action of the current worked the body loose and brought it to the surface. A search has been instituted for the al leged murderers, and their arrest is an-

ANN ARBOR SPUR MAP.

Michigan State Railroad-Crossing Board Decides a Long-Drawn-Out Contest. Lansing, Mich., Dec. 25.—The Ann Arbor railroad company won before the state railroad-crossing board today in the long-drawn-out contest over the ap-proval of the map of its proposed new spur from its main line by a direct route to the village of Alma. Residents of the village of St. Louis are convinced that when the new spur is built the com-pany will abandon its line to that village, and they opposed the approval of the map for this reason. The board, however, decided that the possible intentions of the company could have nothing to do with the case. When a move to abandon the line is made will be time enough to act in that be-

GIRL CONFESSES PERJURY

She Placed Her Stepfather in Jail for Ten Years.

SEVENTEEN MONTHS SERVED

Charged Him with Assault That She Migh Be Rid of His Interference With Her Freedom-She Now Secks Ilis Release.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 25.—Another "Barbara Aub," moved to repentance by her own conscience, has told Governor Werts that her stepfather, Charles Atkinson, who is serving ten years in the state prison for criminal assault, is the state prison for criminal assault, is an innocent man and that she falsely swore away his freedom.

The girl is Mamie Miller, now in the State Industrial school. Her case is even more aggravated than that of her New York prototype, because her step-father has served seventeen months of his large contents and her becken down his long sentence and has broken down under his sufferings in the prison. He has been pleading with the court of pardons for a release, claiming that he was an innocent man, and his several petitions show that he was, before his incarceration, a man of respectability and of good repute among his neighbors in the city of Camden, where he lived. and of good repute among his heighbors in the city of Camden, where he lived. For an hour yesterday morning Mamie Miller sat in the big reception room in the state house, and she not only told her story to the governor, but was placed under oath, and her testimony was taken by W. Holt Apgar, Supreme Court commissioner. The stenographic notes will go to the court of pardons on Friday, when it is expected that the man she has wronged will be set free.

The self-accused perjurer is a young woman, nineteen years old. She has a heavy face, and, while not pretty, is not bad looking. She came to the state house under the guard of Mrs. McFadden, matron of the Girls' Industrial school, and was not allowed to make any statement aside from that she volunteered to the governor.

The Girl's Story.

The Girl's Story. According to her own statement, Mamie Miller, when but fourteen years old, fell in with a set of men and women in Camden who spent most of their time at the Gloucester race track. She spent nearly all her time from home. Her stepfather remonstrated with her, but this only had the effect of inciting her, and her stepfather had her apprehended and sent to the State Industrial school, which is practically a reform school for wayward and incorrigible

Making a pretense at repentance she was released from the institution and again assumed control of her step-father's home. After a few months of quiet life, she renewed her former as-sociations, and became a regular fixture of the Gloucester grand stand. Her father tried to curb her, and she re-sisted. Her companions encouraged her and when she was threatened with a return to the school, it was then that her companions devised a scheme for her permanent freedom.

They induced her to make a charge to the police that her father had assaulted her. He was promptly arrested, and the girl went on the stand and described her alleged assault at her own home, with a minuteness of detail that con-vinced the jury, and Atkinson was found guilty. In April, 1894, he was sentenced to ten years at hard labor, and she was returned to the Industrial school. Her father steadily maintained that he was innocent, and from the state prison he wrote a letter begging her to tell the truth and save him. She pondered over this letter for some time, and finally one Sunday afternoon, after the chapel service, she took Mrs. McFadden into her confidence and con-fessed that her testimony was all faise, and that she had acted out of revenge because her stepfather was interfering with her freedom.

E. R. Cook, of Trenton, who devotes of its trustees, was told the story, and he in turn told the Rev. George Mad-dock, who is also a trustee and the chaplain of the state prison, and the girl repeated her confession to them. Wrote to the Court of Pardons. She was induced to write a letter to the Court of Pardons in support of her stepfather's petition that he was an innocent man, and in this letter she said that the knowledge that he was suffer-ing for a crime he never committed had caused her much worriment, and she was unable to sleep. Governor Werts and Judge Tallman. of Gloucester county, were appointed by the court of pardons to further investigate her statement, and today was fixed for the private hearing of the girl. The hearing was given in secret. The girl left the room looking brighter, and in passing out said to the matron that she was glad it was all over. Charles Atkinson is a man of about forty-eight years. When informed about his stepdaughter's confession, he and the was not surprised that she had made the statement, because she had promised to do so several weeks ago.

made the statement, because she had promised to do so several weeks ago.

"My trial in the Camden county court was a peculiar one," he said. "My arrest was made without any warning, and my wife secured John Wartman, who was recently disbarred, as my counsel. My trial was called the last day of the term of court, and there seemed to be a desire to conclude the business of the term, and my lawyer let the case go to the jury without examining any of my witnesses.

"He said he had an engagement the next day, and could not attend court. So he only examined me, and let the case go to the jury. I had thirteen witnesses in court, but none were called. Mrs. Atkinson, the girl's mother, was there to testify, but she was not allowed to proceed, and I was convicted on the

A Witty Chief Justice.

Two capital retorts which are well worth remembering are attributed to the venerable chief justice of the New York court of common pleas, Hon. Charles P. Daly. At one time a delicate question as to the construction of a statute was discussed before him, and after elaborate arguments on each side, the chief justice decided the question in open court, giving his reasons in a few well-timed remarks which caused a full in the court room.

giving his reasons in a few well-timed remarks which caused a iuil in the court room.

The silence was speedily broken by the successful attorney, who stood up and said, with an air of patronizing approval:

"May it please your honor, I, for one, agree with you entirely."

The chief justice, with a twinkle in his eye which betokened his enjoyment of the joke, but a perfectly grave face, quietly removed his glasses, and amid a breathless stillness said: "I have, counselor, generally found in my experience that the successful party agrees with the court."

Upon anothr occasion a young attorney was trying to convince the chief justice that he did not know the law.

The judge listened to the young man's harangue with courteous patience for a long time, but at last he became weary.

"My young friend," he said, with an ironical smile, "before you are as old as I am you will have learned that it is about as well to read Chesterfield as Blackstone."—Youth's Companion.
