MAKING UP A CITY TICKET

Democratic Leaders Are Now Engaged in That Occupation.

NO DEPINITE POLICY AS YET

Slate Making Committee Will Meet Tonight to Agree Upon Candidates to Be Presented to the Delegates at Tuesday's Convention.

There was much conferring and hurrying hither and thither yesterday on the part of the Democratic leaders who are interesting themselves in securing a ticket for Tuesday's city convention to nominate. Up to a late hour last night no definite plan had been agreed upon, and it is probable that the whole matter will remain for the committee of slate makers to wrestle with. The advantages and disadvantages.

In the city the merry jingle of sleigh bells was heard on all des, and the streets were lined with pleasure seekers anxious to enjoy the delight of a sleighmerits and demerits of men who were considered a sailable mayoralty timber were discussed at length during The day. POLITICAL JOTTINGS.

"I wish this political scrap would terminate." said one of the promietors of a large mercantile concert yesterday. "You may not believe it, but share Saturday's convention our business has failen 20 percent from that of, a corresponding period of the previous week. No. It's not because of the belidays." he contined. "On Jan. I we expected trade to slacken and it did, but when I say 20 per cent I mean trade fell that much from the condition we found ourselves in after the holiday;. Politics alone is responsible for this condition and it will not improve much until matters become normal." To zet further information on the subject a Tribone reporter so litted an interview with one of the owners of a large department stors. He substantiated the first merchant in the statement that trade had shown a marked decline but was not so ready to attribute political fevors as the sole cause. The slump, he said, is unusual and is greater than had been anticipated. An official of a prominent Scratton banking concern confirmed the report of reduced business, and existanced why politics is an important factor, "Rusiness men generally are not directely interested in the present hot local flight, but they have an interest that is general and are constantly asked to discuss or give advice upon the situation, in this way the political atmosphere creates an unrest; it disturbs business plans; it detracts business men from consumating big deals; it keeps certain individuals away from their desks, and in fact the political muddle indirectly affects all manner of commercial effort—it puts a damper on things." Immediately some of the boarders went out and carried the human form in. It was Zernock, and he had not in. It was Zernock, and he had not been lying more than 100 yards from the house. First they set about to warm him and after a few minutes' vigorous rubbing failed to arouse the man, they sent for Dr. Peter C. Manley, of Jermyn. When the doctor reached the place Zernock was dead.

A quart bottle of sherry wine was found in his coat pocket and about one glassful had been taken from it. The liquor had a peculiar taste and the sup-

Without getting leave from the coroner or asking any one's opinion about what ought to be done, the dead man's friends removed the body from Zozioleck's boarding house to his late home, and when Dr. Longstreet arrived, he found them waiting for a coffin with a view to lay him away in the clay at the earliest convenience.
