Tribune.

FOLLOWING are a few kind words in commendation of The Tribune's Annual and Political Hand-Book for 1896:

This being Presidential Year the Tribune will as usual give daily the most reliable political resume of the situation from all sections of the United States. Now is the time to subscribe.

A Live Newspaper published in a live city by live business men for live readers. Live merchants who advertise in its live columns do a live business the whole year round.

Carbondale Herald.

"The Scranton Tribune Annual and Political Handbook for 1896 has reached our table. The book is the most complete of the kind ever issued in this section of the state. It contains a fund of useful information both of a local and general character. Everything in the way of political statistics, platforms, information in regard to city, borough, county, state or national government, election laws, sporting records, and the usual astronomical facts are to be found in the book. There is a new feature introduced in the statistics of anthracite coal operations for the past thirty-three years. This feature will be found to be replete with interesting and curious information for the student of the progress of our greatest industry. Besides the subject matter of the book there are a number of handsome illustrations making the work ornamental as well as useful."

Scranton Truth.

"The Scranton Tribune's Annual for 1896 has just been issued and is a valuable compendium of interesting facts and statistics. It is, as its cover announces, a 'political handbook,' and has been compiled with evident care by an experienced hand. The Tribune's Annual contains a vast amount of timely information on national, state and local topics, and will be found a useful book of reference throughout the year. The publishers are to be congratulated upon the excellent character of this publication."

Olyphant Record.

"The Tribune Almanac for 1896 has come to hand. It is a masterpiece of its kind. The cuts that adorn it are tasty and well executed, while the make-up of the whole is the best possible recommendation to The Tribune print. The 'Annual' is replete with useful information relative to the city of Scranton, the counties of Lackawanna and Wyoming, and also contains many interesting facts concerning the Federal government. Practical information is also dispensed throughout this manual of 110 pages which will well repay careful perusal. It is a work that should be in every office, store and home, and those conversant with its contents will find it a storehouse of facts most profitable during the coming year."

Scranton Free Press.

"We have received the Scranton Tribune Almanac for 1896. In every way considered, typographically, artistically, educationally and especially in the way of a work of reference it is a gem. The Tribune's readers and residents of this section generally will find in this compendium a work which will answer thousands of the questions which daily beset us."

Wilkes-Barre Leader.

"The Scranton Tribune Almanac or Art Annual for 1896 is at hand and is a decidedly pretty publication. It is handsomely illustrated, contains a generous fund of matter usually found in such works, covering, in its local compilations, the counties of Lackawanna, Bradford, Susquehanna, Wayne and Luzerne. It is clean and neat and altogether creditable."

Pottsville Chronicle.

"The Scranton Tribune's Art Annual and Political Hand Book for 1896 is one of the finest publications of this character to reach the Chronicle. It is handsomely illustrated, elegantly printed, and contains information which is valuable to everyone. As a book of reference the Art Annual is most valuable, as it contains political and other information concerning the nation, state and Lackawanna county found in no other publication."

Scranton News.

"The Scranton Tribune gives out an art annual and political hand book for 1896. The illustrations, which are numerous, are in the highest style of the modern engravers' art, and the figure and names matter, which is understood to have been collected mainly by Colonel J. D. Laciur, attests the industry and skill of that gentleman in a line of work the difficulties of which are only properly appreciable by those who have undertaken it. The Tribune has right to be proud of the issue, for the subscribers fully recognize its value."

Wilkes-Barre Times.

"The Scranton Tribune Art Annual and Political Handbook for 1896 came to us in the mail this morning. It is a book of over a hundred pages and a model of typographical work. Its illustrations are in half-tone on fine paper and statistically it is complete as to state political matters."

Taylor Herald.

"The Tribune Almanac, issued for '96, is full of valuable information and is a compendium that answers many questions."

Philadelphia Press.

"One of the best of the almanacs issued in the state is The Scranton Tribune's annual. Its excellence consists not alone in its letter press, but in the illustrations in half-tone, which are reproductions of photographs of actual scenes or of famous works of art. This decorative feature is balanced by a compact digest of useful information, particularly rich in local events, that appeal not only to Lackawanna and Luzerne counties, but all north-eastern Pennsylvania. The Tribune's annual is all that an almanac should be and in addition is something more."

Wilkes-Barre News-Dealer.

"The Scranton Tribune almanac to hand is typographically and, in point of merit, one of the best that has come to our notice. While it has been compiled with reference to Lackawanna county, and in this it is very full and accurate, the general character of the contents makes it of much value and interest to every one."

Scranton World.

"The almanac and political handbook issued by the Scranton Tribune this year is much larger and more pretentious than any heretofore published by that paper. The annual consists of a number of fine half-tone illustrations and some valuable political history and data. The latter portion of the book was prepared by Colonel J. D. Laciur."

Carbondale Leader.

"The Scranton Tribune's annual, which came to hand this morning, is a fine compilation of facts and statistics that is worth far more than the quarter charged for the book. Among these are the local events of 1895, complete and detailed election returns, tax, coal and other statistics of local interest, population of every city, town and hamlet in the vicinity, city and borough governments and much other matter besides much general miscellany and many illustrations. No man who pretends or desires to be posted should be without this volume."

Reading Times.

"The Scranton Tribune has published what it calls its 'Art Annual for 1896.' Besides the usual almanac there is a political hand-book, embracing many things of interest and value."

Philadelphia Times.

"The Scranton Tribune sends out an annual for the year 1896 of the most valuable character. As a political handbook it is the first venture of the kind from The Tribune establishment, but like the progressive and thorough newspaper it represents it is very complete and comprises an array of information of especial use in northeastern Pennsylvania. The pages devoted to election statistics, the coal trade, and Lackawanna county organizations have been prepared with great care and will be a ready reference guide for the coming year."

Scranton Times.

"The Tribune Almanac for 1896, comes to us fresh from the press and is one of the brightest newspaper annuals which we have yet seen. It is a compendium of political, society and chronological information, local and general which no man who desires to be well posted can afford to miss. The work was compiled by Colonel J. D. Laciur, and the task could not have fallen into more competent hands. The Tribune Almanac promises to be a standard political annual."

Binghamton Leader.

"The Scranton Tribune's Annual for 1896 is not only a valuable handbook for ready reference, it is also a most creditable publication from a mechanical point of view, and one upon which The Tribune may pride itself. Aside from the usual calendrical information, there is a great deal of political and statistical matter of general interest, and much miscellaneous information that is good to possess. There are also several art productions in half tone. The Tribune's Annual is all right."

Rochester Post-Express.

"The Scranton Tribune's 'Political Handbook and Annual' is handsomely illustrated and is so replete with useful political information, carefully indexed, that it ought to be in every house in Scranton."

Lebanon Daily News.

"The Scranton Tribune has issued a neat and very handy almanac, which contains much valuable information put into form for quick reference. It is a creditable piece of work, in keeping with the progressive spirit of the paper which furnishes it."
