WEST SIDE EVENTS.

Meeting Thursday Night in the Interest of the Vinduct Project-A Large Crowd Is Expected.

Next Thursday night a public meet-ing will be held in St. David's hall in the interest of the West Side viaduct. A campaign committee will be appoint-ed and general preparation made for the eampaign. Every citizen of the West Side should attend this meeting. The viaduct is something that the West Side has needed since our increased population made travel dangerous on Lackawanna avenue. We have shouted for it, clamored, and made general noise much to the weariment of people in other sections, and now that the opportunity is offered to gratify West Side wishes, our people cannot allow the viaduct to slip past. Hard work in this campaign is a test of sincerity. At $ o'clock Thursday night St. David's hall should be packed. The West Side board of trade has an opportunity of erecting a monument to its own usefulness. Thus far the members have worked hard and have shown them-selves capable of engineering the viamatter through the valley of votes. But they need the assistance of every West Sider.

Mother of Dr. Williams Dead. Mrs. Mary M. Williams, well known to West Siders, died at 12.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at her home, 1224 Saturday afternoon at her home, 1224 Academy street. For 45 years the deceased had suffered from rheumatism and for the past twenty-five years she has been a helpless invalid. In going about the streets a perambulator was used and for a long time Mrs. Williams has been a familiar figure as the weekly trips to and from the Weish Congregational church were made. She Congregational church were made. She was a member of the church and was known as a faithful christian. Last Christmas a severe stroke of sickness attacked the invalid and she died from effects. Deceased was born in its effects. Deceased was born in Wales 66 years ago. She came here with her husband, who is now dead, shortly after their marriage. Those who survive are: Dr. M. J. Williams, John Williams, Catherine Williams and Martha Williams, The funeral will be beld Tuesday morning. Services will Tuesday morning. Services will conducted this evening at the house by Rev. D. where interment will be made. By special request of the deceased's family

John Maxey, aged about 30 years, of Jackson street, has been declared in-sane and is now confined at the Hill-side Home. Information by several who had noticed Maxey's peculiar an-tics caused an examination Saturday afternoon by Drs. Paine and Gunster, as representatives of the Scranton poor board. After a thorough examination the man was judged to be in a demented condition. He was taken to the Nome yesterday.

Hyde Park Band Concert.

A concert was held Saturday night in Mears' hall for the benefit of the newly organized Hyde Park band. Mrs. Nellle Moses Evans was the accompanist of the occasion. The programme in-cluded selections by the Ringgold band; John Jones; tenor solo, David

Editor of The Tribune.

Sir:—An article appeared in your paper Friday morning concerning a collision of a South Side car with a butcher wagon owned by the undersigned. The article, which was under the head of South Side news, stated that the horse was driven by my younger brother and that Motorman Gallagher and the new man who manned the car applied the brakes, but owing to the slippery condition of the rails were unable to stop the car in time to prevent the accident. This report was erroneous and false, as Motorman Gallagher was seated inside the car interested in one of the morning papers when the car collided with my wagon. The rails were not slippery by any means and bystanders who saw the accident will bear me out in this, I can secure six witnesses who will testify to the above statement, three of them were passengers on the car when the accident occurred.

This article was not written with a mailclous intent, but to let the readers of your excellent paper see the matter in its true light, as it was impossible for me to avoid the accident.

The Patal Card Produced at the Frothingham.

AN EXCELLENT MELODRAMA

Well Mounted and Acted by Competent People-Close of the Mackey Company's Engagement-Some of the Coming Attractions.

"The Fatal Card," a melo-darma by Haddon Chambers and B. C. Stepheson, was given its initial Scranton production at the Frothingham Saturday night before a large audience. Scranton can stand several more productions of the same kind before "The Fatal Card" palls on the public taste. The only bad thing about the melodrama is its name. It might just as appropriately be called "A Mystery of Two Continents," "His Double Life," "Retribution," etc., etc.
But leaving the name out of consid-

"Retribution," etc., etc.
But leaving the name out of consideration the melo-drama is one of the best ever seen in Scranton. It is a return to pure melo-drama, in which the fire engine and "tank of real water" have no place. There is an abundance of that excitement so dear to the lovof that excitement so dear to the lovers of melo-drama and any number of thrilling climaxes, but the playwrites contrived to do all this and yet not get too far beyond the bounds of probabil-

It is in this that they reveal their cleverness and nice discrimination. The drama opens at a little mining village near the foot of the Rockles. George Forrester has surrounded himself by a gang of desperadoes and to elevate the moral tone of the place the vigil-antes decided to elevate Forrester close to a telegraph pole. Gerald Aus-tin, a young Englishman who is rough-ing it in the West, sayes Forrester's life and the latter gives him half of a card, the Jack of clubs, as a memento and promises to make any sacrifice for the young man that in his power lies It is from this card the drama takes its

The next act is in England where Austin and Forrester, now known as Marrable, meet again but do not recognize each other. Austin falls in love with Marrable's daughter, Margaret, who knows nothing of her father's past or of the fact that he is then the leader of a gang of professional bond rob-bers. It is planned to rob Austin's father but while the deed is being done Marrable's pal, Captain Dixon, kills old man Austin with the son's cane. Young Austin is suspected, but Margaret's fears are aroused by the strange actions of her father and Dixon. She learns that they are to have a secret meeting and sends young Austin to attend it. He hears the details of his father's murder discussed, sees his bonds divided among the four confederates concerned in the job and then is discovered. He must be put to death to save the criminals. They draw lots and it devolves on Marrable to do the deed.

He sets an infernal machine to blow Austin at the request of the latter, who is bound, Marrable takes a wallet from the pocket of his victim to secure a memento he is instructed to give to his daughter Margaret. In the wallet he finds the piece of card given to Austin in the West and explanations follow, He decides to save Aus-tin but to do so must sacrifice himself. He is trying to get him out of the building when his daughter rushes in. To save her from the terrible im-pending death he takes the infernal machine and throws it through a win-dow. A terrible explosion follows and the side of the building is wrecked. Marrable falls dead and his daughter swoons in the arms of young Austin, On that effective climax the curtain

This week there will be three excellent attractions in the city theaters. At the Frothingham "A Social Highwayman" will be seen and Minnie Pal-mer in "The School Girl," and Barry in "The Rising Generation," are billed to appear at the Academy of Music.

Thursday night Minnie Palmer will make her re-appearance at the Academy of Music in her new play, "The School Girl," in which she made a decided hit in New York city.

Another entertainment which is said to be on the order of "Octoroons," "Creoles," "Big Sensation" and "Last Sensation" comes for the first three days of this week at Dayis' theater, opening this afternoon. It is repre-sented to be a clean, meritorious enter-tainment, free from the features that sometimes mar what would otherwise be very enjoyable shows of the kind. A series of high-class "living pictures" form a prominent feature of the per-formance. Another big business may anticipated if this organization, which is highly endorsed by the metro-politan press, is up to representations.

Nothing is so pleasant to theater-goers as to know beforehand that the play they are about to witness has had the stamp of success heralded from all the principal cities. E. M. and Joseph Holland, in "A Social Highwayman," supported by Richard Mansfield's New York Garrick Theater Stock company, have distinguished themselves by re-ceiving the highest praise for an ar-tistic and finished performance of one of the most interesting plays presented to the public this season. They will appear here at the Frothingham Thursday night of this week. Sale of seats opens at the box office at 9 a. m. to-

She is also possessed of a sweet con-tralto voice of remarkable range and quality. Her work in "The Rising Gen-eration" is deserving of great credit, as it is one of the taking features of the performance. "The Rising Generation" will be seen at the Academy of Music Friday night.

Commencing Monday, Jan. 27, Professor John Reynolds, of London, Eng., will open a week's engagement at the Frothingham. Professor Reynolds is the greatest living mesmerist, and his entertainments are full of fun, laughter and science combined
