A story of Calvin Brice, United States senator from Ohio and multi-milionaire, which has never before appeared in print was told to a Call correspondent by a resident of Seattle, who knew the senator in his younger days. It shows how sudden has been the rise in wealth of this man, who now possesses over $20,000,000, and whose children each bave $10,000 a year as pocket-money.

"When Brice got married he was a young and struggling lawyer, and didn't have much ready cash," said the senator's old-time friend. "However, he took what he had and with his bride went to New York city on a wedding tour. They took in the sights of Goth-am, but by the time Brice was ready to come home he found he had not enough money to buy railway tickets. Brice had to get home, so he went to a pawn-broker and 'soaked' his watch When they were on the cars his wife noticed that his watch was gone, and said:

"'Why, Calvin, where is your watch?'
'Holy smoke,' said he, 'I took that watch to a jeweler to get it fixed, and forgot all about it."

DICKENS AND THE MAJOR.

When Charles Dickens made his first visit to this country and obtained his total to this country and obtained his total terial for writing "Martin Chuzzlewit" and "American Notes," he traveled from Pittsburg to St. Louis in a steamboat and thus got the pictures of his "Eden" from Cairo, Ill., which was then a struggling frontier village. On his way back he stopped at Louiseville and was a guest at the Galt House, then owned and conducted by Major Iris Throckmorton, a gallant and courtly gentleman of high blood.

Thinking to give his distinguished guest an unexpected pleasure, he caused to be spread, in a private refectory, an exquisite little dinner, to which he had invited George D. Prentice, Tom Marshall, Dr. Theodore Bell, Chancellor Pirtle and a few other prominent men of that day and city Theodore Bell, Chancellor Pirtle and a few other prominent men of that day and city to meet Mr. Dickens.

After all the guests had been seated at the table, Major Throckmorton, in his blandest and most cordial way, Dickens, who had not learned the difference between the proprietor of a great hotel in America and an Inn-keeper in a provincial town of England, remarked to Major Throckmorton.

Throckmorton:
"There, that will do, landlord. You may retire now."
It was all that the remainder of the assembled company could do to prevent the irate Throckmorton from throwing the mistaken Mr. Dickens out of a third-story winday, and the banquet became a some what strained affair,—Chicago Herald.

THE JOKE WAS TURNED.

Thomas Q. Seabrooke, the comedian during the recent Boston engagement, while standing on crowded Tremont street, was accosted by a little old man, who had a merry twinkle in his eye and indicated by his speech that his birth-place was not far fromCork. His clothes were not of the best, and the practiced eye might have taken him for a superior kind of tramp. He was kneading some fine tobacco in his hand, and said: "Be so kind, sir, as to give me a copper or two to buy a pipe with which to smoke this tobacco. It's only a clay pipe I want, sir, and not a meerschaum," and the old fellow held out a palm con-taining the tobacco.

PECULIARITIES OF LIGHTNING.

Persons struck by lightning have had small holes drilled in the skull, but otherwise they were not marked. Victims have been horribly burned, and even dismembered. A stroke of lightning has cut off a man's ear, or shaved his hair and beard clean, and not hurt him in any other way. The markings are often curious. Blue is the common color, but they have been red, green and black, and occasionally the whole body turns black. Negroes who have been struck by lightning have had their skin bleached in spots to absolute whiteness. One negro struck by lightning sfound, after he had recovered consciousness, that he had one completely white arm, the rest of his body being as black as usual.
