CARNIVAL OF FUN AND PROLIC

o One Who Would Not Confess Himself a Fool and Wear a Fool's Cap Could Get in-Every Sense Gratified.

The fifth annual "Carneval-Sitzung. the ante-lenten jubilation of the Lie derkranz, took place last night in Music hall. The festivities took on the nature of a fool's carnival. No one was admitted who did not wear a gaudy fool's cap and bells, and no one, it was understood, could take umbrage at anything that was said of him, or any joke that was played on him. Four hundred persons, about equally divided between ladies and gentlemen. were in attendance. Delegations wer present from the New York Eichen kranz; the Concordia society of Wilkes-Barre; the Turn-Verein, of Wilkes Barre, the Saengerrunde, the Arion so clety, the Turn-Verein and the Grutli Verein, of this city. Each of the visit ing organizations had special places as signed to him at one or the other of eight long tables, which extended the whole length of the hall, their places being designated by large placards bearing the society's names. All the tables were filled and the gallery also contained a goodly number, and as the decorations were profuse and the head of each person present was surmount-ed by one of the gaily colored fool's caps with their tinkling bells, the sight presented was certainly of a carnival character.

On the stage was seated the president of the carnival and his attendants, members of the committee of arrange ments, many of them dressed in fantastic costumes. Two heralds, attired as court jesters, acted as masters of ceremonies, carrying out the behests of the president and engineering the practical jokes. Bauer's orchestra oc cupled the left side of the gallery and played the marches and accompanied the singing. Hummler President of the Carnival. The fun making commenced at 'clock with the entrance of the presi dent of the carnival, Frank Hummler and the "Kleine Rath," or committee in charge of the arrangements. The committee was made up to represent the salvation army, a German band, bootblacks, and the like. They were arrested by two policemen and sentenced to occupy places at the table on the stage. Then the various fun makers and those who were designed to be made butts of the fun makers, were sent for in turn. The two heralds company of Olyphant was chartered Tues- would go after the person whose name ould be called, and as he was escort ed through the hall to the stage the orchestra would play the "Fool's March" and the audience would rise and clap hands in time with the music

The president would then accuse some one or another of being guilty of the composition, and he would be escorted to the stage and complimented or rebuked, as it suited the whim of the president. Among those who were accused of being topical song writers were City Controller Fred Widmayer, F. L. Wormser, Albert Zenke, Frank Leitner and J. Bruner. The visiting delegations were each in espects to the carnival president. The spokesman extended a greeting, a y the president. Much fun was created by J. Bruner,
M. Weiss, Will Enrich and Henry Klasen. Mr. Bruner represented a female policeman; Mr. Weiss impersonated Ahlwardt, the Jew baiter; Mr. Emrich told of the troubles of a grocer from Nannygoat Hill, and Mr. Klaser started out to tell of his own troubles but the management cut him short by fropping on him a large extinguisher which had served during the evening as a canopy for the rostrum from which the speeches were made. While Mr. Weiss was taking the robe of Ahlwardt he was assailed from the floor and balconies with a fusilade of vegetables from three ardent Hebrews gotten up in outlandish costumes. One of the best hits of the evening was the pres-

Hartman's store, on the corner of Pittston avenue and Alder street, South phatically and the hearing adjourned Side, was a scene of confusion and exturn called to the stage and paid their citement at 3.45 yesterday afternoon, when Mark Cordner, a liquor-crazed man, 40 years old, broke in and brandthyme, and it was answered in kind ished a 38-calibre six-shooter at the clerks and customers. There were about six persons present at the time and the pell mell occasioned by their hurried escape from the danger of the lunatic's weapon brought Patrolman Victor Sartor and three citizens. Henry Klein, Henry Kemmerer and Otto Weisscup to the store.

The clerks and customers were be leagured behind counters and piles of merchandise. Cordner made no attempt to shoot, but struck the weapon against the wall and bent the trigger guard so that he could not shoot then, even if he tried. While the firearm was not disabled, he had not made any effort to exhibit his marksmanship.

Evidence at Inquest Does Not Change Status of McHugh Case.

Stories Told by Inmates Leave no Room for Doubt Concerning His Fearful Death-Proprietress Held in Bail to Appear at Court.

Inquiring into the manner in which untimely end, the jury empaneled by 9.30 yesterday morning to hear the teshouse brought down to relate their stories, but the quartette refused to walk and the police refused to get a cab.

Dr. Longstreet and the Jury went to the central station and the inquest was then conducted in the officers' assembly room. Richard J. McHugh, the West Side saloonkeeper, who is a cousin of the deceased, was present, and he was prepared to have the matter thoroughly sifted with a view to finding out whether the allegation was true or groundless dead yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock that one of the women threw a lamp at the young man, and whether or not there was foul play connected with the happening.

Mr. McHugh assumed this theory or two or three grounds; first, that no word was given to the firemen that the young man was in the building, and second, that the room where he was found was perfectly unscathed from the fire and even the bed clothes on which he laid were not singed This laid evidence of suspicious circumstances. He was actuated by a desire solely to learn if the truth was given when the delamp over himself.

Satisfied There Was no Foul Play. Last night Mr. McHugh was pretty positively decided that the event occurred in the way it has already been stated, and he will not make any further effort to follow up the foul play SUPERIOR COURT ADJOURNS. theory. Gertie West, the proprietress of the house, was the first witness called by the coroner. She said she knew nothing about the matter at all; she went held yesterday. Judge Rice was the to the theater and was out after the show taking a lunch with a He gave an order to the court crier to extinguished when she reached the Florence Cassidy, or Flanaghan, was the next witness. This is the one who held the week beginning the first Monwas in the parlor last with the deceased. He came to the door a short while before 11 o'clock Tuesday night and when she refused him admittance, he threatened to kick in the door. She refused to let him in and he forced an house. Her eyes were red with weep-

entrance in spite of her. He was under the influence of liquor to a great extent, she said, and when he was in the parlor she left to go to the kitchen. Hearing a crash and knowing it to be the lamp, she rushed to his assistance and dashed water on him: afterward she tried to tear off his burning clothing. The Cassidy woman is middle-aged and very dissipated

She Was in Her Room Reading. May Jones, another of the inmates, was the third witness. She was reading a novel in her room when the fire originated. When she tried to get out McHugh, she said, stood in the door of the room where the fire was; his clothing was ablaze and he tried to hinder her from making her escape down the stairway

Lou Williams was the fourth of the women. She and the preceding witness are young. Miss Williams informed the jury that she was in her room dressing to shake the dust of the town from her heels and was bound for Wilkes Barre. When she was getting out Mc-Hugh was in the passage way and his clothes were a mass of flames. He was running toward the kitchen when she last saw him.

Lieutenant John Davis was the last witness and he said that after the fire was extinguished, the Cassidy woman told him that McHugh was in the building and was probably burned to death or smothered by that time. The lieutenant investigated and found that her conjectures were correct.

Cassidy Woman Recalled.

At the request of Mr. McHugh the Cassidy woman was recalled by the coroner and the question was put to her whether or not she threw the lamp at the deceased. She denied it emuntil 2 o'clock this afternoon at the ourt house. Mr. McHugh may then being forward any evidence he may have to offer in substantiation of the foul play theory, but as stated in the beginning of the story, he will not press the matter any further.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made, awaiting the arrival of ceased, from Baltimore, where she is attending a young ladies' seminary. Burial will likely take place tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Imediately after testifying at the inquest the four women were ushered into police court. Alderman Millar gave them a hearing. Gertie West admitted she was the proprietress and she was held in the sum of $500 bail for her appearance at court. The other women were held in the sum of $200 apiece as witnesses against her. Louis Eppstein qualified as their bondsman and they were released. Alderman Millar served notice on successful play in which the Holland brothers will appear at the Frothingham tonight, has everywhere scored an instantaneous success, which has been declared by more than one ordinarily captious critic to rank with the finest dramatic productions of the season "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Trilby." For, while "A Social Highwayman" is an extraordinarily close adaptation from the novelette of the same name. published by the Lippincotts, it is said nevertheless, to be bunt upon entirely original lines and possessed of extraordinary strength, which is produced by the simple, direct and terse evolution of its plot, throbbling with melodramatic, emotional interest, draped by the decorous folds of the quiet manners and polite conversation of good society.
