M. P. Judge testified that he was judge of election at the caucus and that seventy-five Republicans had voted. On cross-examination he admitted that the Gibbons ticket had 200 majority of the 648 cast. M. F. Donahoe, another member of the board, swore that 135 Republicans voted. Michael Thornton. present constable and candidate for re-election, swore that John Giboons threatened to break the window if the board did not take in the votes Mr. Gibbons was called and he admitted that there were Republican votes cast, but not as many as alleged. His opinion was that one side got as many Republican votes as the other. John J. Gaffney, secretary of the Democratic county committee, was called to testify with regard to the rules of the party bearing on the holding of cau-He sald that each ward and district has rules of its own.

Lodge of Sorrow of the Robert Morris Lodge of Ivorites,

MANY BEAUTIFUL EULOGIES

Attorney W. R. Lewis Made the Introductory Address-Tributes by E. E. Robathan, Howell Harris and Attorney W. Gaylord Thomas.

Lodge memorial services, the first ever held on the West Side, were conducted last evening at the First Welsh Congregational church by Robert Morris lodge of lyorites. In revorence to the memory of the late W. George Powell and Elmer L. Williams, two members of the lodge who died during the year just passed. The church audiyear just passed. The church auditorium is spacious and well fitted for the observance. After the regular of life were dispelled by the bright proschurch service the congregation was dismissed, and the members of the ture. I knew him in those unnappy days lodge, dressed in dark clothing and when unkind fate had drawn the curiain wearing white badges with the words of darkness before his vision and made the beauties of nature and the faces of friends but memories of the bast.

Nearly every one of the 300 character I admired him; as an educator members was present. The body presented an impressive appearance durspect for him; as a sincere friend and coming the march from the lodge hall to panion I loved him.

Marshal D. J. Davis, secretary of the lodge, directed the march. Then in his life was devoted to the development of Marshal D. J. Davis, secretary of the regular order came the officers of the the heritage he received at his birth. He lodge, the members and the past offi-cers. Upon entering the church seats were taken in the northern tier. Attor-ney W. R. American literature made him a companpastor of the First Welsh Baptist church, offered stirring invocation, 'The Unseen City," an anthem, was sung by a party of leading West Side singers under the leadership of W. W. Evans. The introductory address of poet, that: Atteney Lewis was deeply impressive.

He spoke as follows: Vitorney Lewis' Address.

A little over two years ago a number of young Welshmen met in this city and organized what is now known as Robert Morris lodge, an organization that owes allegiance to and is under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of American True Ivorites. It commenced its career with ev-ery promise of success and its subsequent prosperity fulfilled that promise. No light and frivolous reasons led to its organiza-tion. It has a high and noble mission. Whether that mission be accomplished depends upon us. It seeks to propagate love, truth and unity and to elevate its members mentally and morally as well as socially. It aims to produce men of the world, but just, noble, upright and liberal men of the world, and not men who live Fetired lives. Bigotry, prejudice and resentment find lodgment in men who hold aloof from their fellows. The contention that men should not concern themselves with the affairs of others is a contention that belongs to centuries gone. Is now obsolete and would be maintained by no man of in-telligence. Man was created a social being loving the society of his kind and in a large measure dependent upon that so-ciety. Everything we see or hear has its influence upon us. Hence the importance and the absolute necessity of ennobling and purifying that with which we come in contact, if we desire to move onward and

Many sneer at fraternal societies, but they are here and here to stay. Regard-less of the sneer of the cynic they continue to succor the fallen, ald/those in adversity, cheer the meiancholy and relieve the impecunious. Golden principles govern their conduct. Fraternity is our watchword. Not a fraternity that raises a barrier against those not of us. We be-lieve in the fraternity that recognizes not the distinctions of race or creed, a fraternity that lays low artificial boundaries, annihilates national and sectional prejudices, a fraternity that embraces not only Vielshmen, but all men; a fraternity that extends its hands across wide rivers, and even over the grave. Then let us pray that come it may As come it will for a' that.

That man to man, the world o'er Shall brothers be for a' that.

The Lodge's Loss. During our two years of existence we, as a lodge, have had our hopes and anxieties, our pleasures and our sorrows. In response to the summons that will not take may for ansyer two of our most esteemed and beloved members have gone hence. In the bright flush of young and ssumed Control of the Westminster at vigorous manhood they were stricken down. God in his infinite wisdom saw fit to take away two of our most enthusiastic manhood. members, members whose lives gave promise of great usefulness in their re-spective channels. Their taking off was beyond our ken, yet we bowed in sorrow knows no season and the prince in his palace, the miner in the dark and gloomy caverns of the earth, the child in the sunshine, and the mariner the storm. It sought and found our brothers miss their genial smile, their kindly voices and their ready hands. Their chairs are now empty, yet they live in our memo-ries. We mourn for them. No one but tended. But one dead lamb is there: There is no firefide, howsoe'er defended, But has one vacant chair."

The first sharp pangs of grief have passed away and sorrow takes her hold to strengthen, to subdue, to chasten.
In accordance with the principles we profess we gather here tonight to publicly attest our appreciation of the charac-ters and lives of those who no longer re-spond to our roll call. With feelings of deep reverence we make our annual pil-grimage to the tombs of our beloved dead. We are not here to entertain, but to pay our tribute of respect to the memory of those of us who have gone on before and to weave chaplets to their worth. On this solemn occasion we ask you to bow with us in respect. On our pilgrim-age we ask you to accompany us with reverence and sorrow that you may return he better for your journey.

Morris Thomas sang "Pray For Us," an affective selection of sacred music. The singers' soulful voice struck a sympathetic chord in all present. E. E. Robathan, perhaps the closest friend of the late Professor Powell, gave an address culogistic of the revered deceased. Mr. Robathan's words were as follows:

Remarks by Mr. Robothan. The rapid growth of fraternal organiza-tions in this country during the past len years fully demonstrates the fact that the principles upon which they are estab lished meets with the approval and en-dorsement of a large number of our best claus of citizens. Any organization that has as its object the moral and mental development of its members, the cultiva-tion of those principles that raise rather than lower the standard of mankind, that has a tendency to give us a keener ap preciation of our value and worth as citi gens and that binds closer together those bonds of friendship that should exist be-tween man and man, is worthy of our most hearty commendation. Such an or-ganization is the American True Order of Ivorites, of which the Robert Morris lodge is the English representative in this sec-tion of the city. ANNUAL MEETING OF TRUSTEES warm places in the affections of the mem-bers of this organization, their congenial nature and many good traits of charac-ter endeared them to all with whom they came in contact and they were ever foremost in advancing the interest of the order. In speaking of George Powell as brother I feel as though I am entitled to all the prerogatives and license that the term inplies, for to me he was indeed a brother, and the few brief remarks that I shall make concerning him is but a sincer tribute to one whom I deemed far nore than friend.

His mind, like a well-filled granary, was stored with the products of the ablest writers the world has known, ion whose company was interesting at all times. Elimer Williams, though a few years younger than George Powell, had early given evidence of a promising career. He possessed business qualifications that are seldom found in a young man of his age. Had he lived he would have stood in the front rank of the commercial center in city. At school he was known as an exceptionally bright student; at home a devoted son, and to that circle of acquaintanees with whom he associated he was known as a kind-hearted, whole-souled and generous companion.

His death was a severe shock to those who knew him, for it was but a few days before he was cut down that he was on the streets in the full vigor of young manhood.

While it is hard for his father and mother to become reconciled to his loss, they may take consolation from the fact that, though dead, his noble deeds and pure

Howell Harris' Tribute.

Miss Lizzie Reynolds sang "Calvary," a religious piece. Miss Reynolds was selected from the many available soloists on the West Side, and her sympathetic voice was fitting to the solemn occasion. Howell Harris gave one of the best tributes of the evening. It was an eloquent effort and we regret that lack of space prevents the publication.

Miss Martha Davies recited "The Valley of silence." The piece is a solemn creation, picturing a pilgrimage through the Great Valley. Miss Davies' recitation was given with true fervor and was deservedly commended. Philip War-ren, the well known bass soloist, sang byterian church. It is very beautiful and fitting that we gather here in a service of this kind, and recount those deeds and virtues which made our departed brothers so dear to us all. The giver of all life, in His own good time, saw fit to end their earthly cares and in obedience to the Divine command the spirit returned to the God who gave it, and all that we can do is to recall their pleasant associations, so that the good and noble that were conspicuous in their lives may be an example and an incentive for us who may follow them." The glee club sang "Evening Mem-ories," and D. J. Davis, of Eynon street, delivered the benediction. The services were closed with the singing of a Welsh hymn. The committee in charge of the service was: David J. Davis, John Hughes. D. Phillips. W. W. Evans and S. A. Williams.

In his report President Hand suggests that councils be asked to appropriate $15,874 for the maintenance and improvement of the library during the coming fiscal year. Of this amount $12,524 is for the actual running expenses inclusive of insurance, $950 is for the laying of a sidewalk around the building, and $2,400 is designed to be used for the establishment and maintenance of delivery stations and reading rooms as adjuncts to the library.

Treasurer Belin's report showed that less than $1,000 remained in the treasury at the end of the year, which amoun will be barely sufficient to meet current expenses of the interium between that time and the beginning of the fiscal year April 1.

Statistics About the Library.

The report of the secretary and librarian, Mr. Carr. in addition to many other good points was highly interesting for the statistics which it contained. In round numbers 150,000 volumes were taken out of the library during 1895, which is an average of about 600 a day for the actual number of days upon which the library was opened. Some days as high as 1,000 volumes were taken out, which means that on such days there was a vast attendance at the building, as there is always a great number who visit the library to use the books of reference or reading room solely. At the end of the year the llbrary contained 25,300 volumes, and 7,220 cards are in active use. The use of the reading and reference rooms were taxed many times, especially during the winter season. The present is the busiest period of the year. On Saturday last an even 1,000 books were taken out by home readers, and a very large number visited the reading and reference departments. In regard to the delivery stations embraced in Judge Hand's recommendations, Librarian Carr explained to a Tribune reporter that it is proposed to esthablish quarters in the suburbs where books can be exchanged and papers and periodicals read, thus bringing the library to the very door of the people living in the extreme districts of the city and thereby saving them much time and inconvenience. A person desiring to exchange a book could leave it with the card and an order for a new book at the station and the next day the order would be filled just the same as if the person went to the library. A reason for collecting and delivering the books, the cost of the additional papers sistant librarian at the three stations would be the main items of expense in carrying out the idea. It is thought that the people of the respective localities wherein it is intended to establish stations will secure the necessary quar-
