The Most Elaborate Programme of the Year. Five Thousand Dollars in Prizes and Medals.

Whew! Hereofore Scranton held the proud distinction and unmistakable right of being the American center of great estafodoffal contests, and its estafodoffal of 1875, 1880 and 1885, and the attendant results, were memorable affairs. The achievements won and results accomplished on those occasions brought forth inspiring comments from the pens of some of the most efficient American writers of the age. The columns of the New York Tribune, Herald, World, Graphic and other influential metropolitan newspapers, teemed with lavish praise for the significant accomplishments of the Welsh people in the fields of literature and music. Until this epoch, however, the accomplishments of the Welsh people in choral singing were only known locally, and the interpretation of the works of the masters upon these occasions, and afterwards at New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and elsewhere by the Welsh people of Pennsylvania, was a revelation to the critics of some of the estafodoffal. To their honor be it said, they were quick to appreciate and unhesitatingly in their praise, today, our people stand foremost among the people of the earth as chorallists and interpreters of the divine themes woven so beautifully into music by such masters as Handel, Beethoven, Chopin, and others. The proficiency has been attained through the means of the estafodoffal. Scranton claims first honors, and her people were first to give the American people a true definition of what the estafodoffal meant and what it accomplished for the children of Gwalla. A Scrantonian, one of the critics of some of the estafodoffal of dear old Cambria, was the leading light and the life and soul of the national estafodoffal of Wales in 1886, and will be the leading light of the early and the master spirit and the only Harry Edwards of the national estafodoffal of America in 1896, which will be held at Denver, Colo., in the month of July never before in the history of the estafodoffal in this country, including even the World's fair estafodoffal, has there been such an estafodoffal. The estafodoffal presented as the one that has just been announced by the musical people of Denver. More than $5,000 in cash and medals in prizes, besides the valuable and historic bardic chair will be offered in prizes. The estafodoffal will be officered and patronized by the most illustrious and influential citizens of Colorado, prominent among them being Governor McIntire, ex-Governor John Evans, State Senators Jenkins and Hartwell, Judges Ledwith, Street and Mayor McCullary. Hon. H. M. Edwards, of Scranton, and Hon. Thomas L. James, of New York city, will be present as guests of honor and also as judges of the official capacity. Judge Edwards will have charge of the different meetings and will act as one of the chief literary adjudicators. The estafodoffal, heretofore, was the estafodoffal in this country, but from present indications it behoves her musical people to be more than ready to the great city of Denver will capture the honor. The programme for the three days includes musical, literary and dramatic contests and may be briefly stated as follows:

Notes from Wales. There is an o-togeanian at Carmarthen named George Dickens, who is second cousin to the eminent novelist, Charles Dickens. The old man is proud of the relationship, and has a large stock of interesting reminiscences of the family. The relationship between Welsh Non-conformists and the church of England is not always strained;—vide a vote of thanks passed by the monthly meeting of the "Corph" to the Vicar of Abergele for his services in helping them to get land from the Ecclesiastical Commission. If Sir William Harcourt is a Welsh Utilitarian, he is a very enthusiastic one. Recently he went round with the hat for the Welsh cause, and was warmly welcomed by himself into the Welsh musical movement and will doubtless be made a bard at the next national estafodoffal. A year of one of the parishes of Great Britain on Sunday school is conducted if they thought it was any satisfaction for him to be told, as he often was by some of the more negligent of the early communion that they were "present in the spirit" when, at the same time, their bodies were anoring in bed. War reminiscences are being dusted and aired. The Rev. Joseph John B. A. rector of St. Lythan's, has in his possession a number of letters which were written by him on board H. M. S. Defence on the Battle of Trafalgar. The reverend gentleman is also the possessor of an autographed letter of the late General Gordon, Mrs. Johns being related by marriage. A great deal remains to be cleared up in regard to the march of Henry VIII from Ireland through Cardiganhire. We are told that he slept at night at Lwyn Dafydd, and also at Wern Newydd, both mansions in the same neighborhood. Now, we do not believe that he slept anywhere else to the south of Aberystwith. It is this, and why, also, did he choose those two places, being so close together? One humorist states that there was a pretty girl, both at the Lwyn and the Wern, and that Richmond's descendants may still be found in South Cardiganhire among the family name of Parry, or Ap Harry. Mr. Edgar Tinel, the Belgian composer, whose oratorio, "St. Francis," was performed with success at the Cardiff festival, has accepted the title of president of a musical society at that city, and has promised to visit the area and conduct another of his works. He writes as follows: "I felt convinced in my own mind that Cardiff was a town of the future, and I have begun to study the English language very hard."

GLIMPSES OF WELSH MINING LIFE. Tomos Cwmtwrch on Welsh Names.

It was the Monday morning after the installation of Rev. David Cwmtwrch Davies as pastor of Ebenezer Independent chapel, Cwmcedd. As the Rev. David Cwmtwrch Davies is at college the lamp-station at the bottom of Cwmtwrch pit, their uneven talks suddenly took an animated turn. "How are we to cross?" said I. Then out came Davies with this line: "All ror her fr wal gerrig." "Will you challenge the stone wall?" But Mr. Davies, like the modest, sensible fellow he is, has kept his hymnic subordinate to his great work of preaching the gospel. Listen to what Islwyn says on the matter. Islwyn was a good preacher, a good Methodist, but he was a greater poet: "Er uchod yw y bardd, er pured yw y Cymroedd, a'r holl amodol ror, Fyngolia yw y swydd uchod hon. Fyngolia yw y dydd, fel defnydd y don. (Though high the bard of pure aim and thought, 'Tis holy be the mission o' the Muse, Sunk in the preacher bold the bard must be. A star in day, a raindrop in the sea.)

It was while at college that Mr. Davies found it necessary to adopt that middle name. I say necessary, for he cracked jokes about it when the names were called out, and the postman made some blunder in delivering the mail. He assumed his middle name in self-defense. The Americans are very out in this matter—nearly every man has two names, and the one he uses is the one he is known by. Jones moved from here, he signed himself in his second letter, John S. Jones. Some thought it foolish of Jones' wife, who was a sensible woman, to allow her husband to do so. Jones was not the kind of a man to lose himself among the 50,000 Jones' over there. And Mr. Davies is a good poet, and he has written some of the nobodies called David Davies' and nothing more. In ancient times, every man had a name, and his own name was not fit anyone else. Savages have such names today. There's the name of "Sitting Bull," the Indian chief we met at the battle of Little Bighorn. But we, civilized people, have names given us that mean nothing at all to us. Saints and scoundrels wear the same names. We have names that mean nothing against this new style. Have you seen the Welsh names in the story of Kilweh and Olwen? It is like a book of names. After the death of the Rev. David Cwmtwrch Davies, I saw a notice in the "Cymru Fydd" movement, "I godi'r hen wlad yn eiddo." "Where in the name of everything, did your new man get that middle name of his—Cwmtwrch? Did you ever hear of such a name? It is a name that no minister ever baptized him with." "Perhaps he was a hawker once, and he had a name like that," said I. (This was said by Shoni Rachel, who, since his marriage, had sought means of earning more wages than he earned as a hawker, and he had a name like that.) "The company of sober and wise workmen, and would now and then take a threat of the conversation. In the company of the hawker, I saw a notice in the "Cymru Fydd" movement, "I godi'r hen wlad yn eiddo." "Where in the name of everything, did your new man get that middle name of his—Cwmtwrch?
