SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

The Citizens' Committee Called by the Pastors Met Wednesday-A Strong Committee Appointed to Start a Crusade for the Better Observance of the Sabbath.

In response to the call issued by the pastors of the vartous churches of the city asking citizens to co-operate with them in their endeavor to secure a bet-ter observance of the Sabbath day, St. Rose's hall was comfortably filled on Wednesday evening. Rev. Father Coffey caled the meeting to order and stated the object of the meeting. He said that the audience were aware that the ministers wished to call the attenthe ministers wished to call the atten-tion of the citizens to the subject of "Sunday Observance," and all of them had on Sunday last impressed their au-diences upon the desirability and the benefits derived therefrom. He paid a high compliment to the press for the publicity which it had given to the sub-ject and stated that whatever good cause the press championed would be successful. He expressed the wish that those present would lend their aid successful. He expressed the wish that those present would lend their aid as the pith of the movement seems to be to express the displeasure of those present at the lax manner in which the Lord's day is at present observed in the city. The business men, if they could not be persuaded to close all day, may be prevailed upon to do no business during the hours of divine service. He earnestly pleaded that by speech and by example the good people would assist in this good work. He then asked that a chairman be appointed. The following officers were elected: The Rev. Dr. G. A. Place, the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, was elected to the chair, and Rev. Charles Lee, of the First Presbyterian church, was chosen secretary. Rev. Dr. Place was chosen secretary. Rev. had fully placed before them the object of the meeting. He gave a report of the proceedings of the meetings of the pastors. Two preliminary meetings were held by the pastors, at which they decided to bring the matter before the public and did so in all the churches last Sunday. It was suggested that a canvass of the city should be made to see who are not observing the Sabbath and see if they could be persuaded to do so. The pastors also persuaded to do so. The pastors also decided to get a committee appointed to perform this duty. Rev. T. E. Jepson, of the Berean Eaptist church, fellowed in the same strain and desired to express his confidence that much produced to express his confidence that much good would result from this meeting. THEY RIDICULE IT.

MANY PEOPLE RIDICULE THE IDEA OF AN ABSOLUTE CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA AND STOM-ACH TROUBLES.

Ridicule. However, Is Not Argument, and Facts Are Stubborn Things.

Stomach troubles are so common and n many cases so obstinate to cure that people are apt to look with sus-picion on any remedy claiming to be a radical, permanent cure for dyspep-sia and indigestion. Many such pride themselves on their acuteness in never being humbugged, especially on medi-cine.

This fear of being humbugged may be carried too far; so far, in fact, that many persons suffer for years with weak digestion rather than risk a little time and money in faithfully testing the claims of a preparation to reliable and universally used as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Now Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are vastly different in one important re-spect from ordinary proprietary medi-cines for the reason that they are not a secret patent medicine, no secret is made of their ingredients, but analy-sis shows them to contain the natural digestive ferments, pure aseptic pep-sin, the digestive acids, Golden Seal, bismuth, hydrastis and nux. They are not cathartic, neither do they act powerfully on any organ, but they care indigestion on the common sense plan of digesting the food eaten promptly, thoroughly before it has time to fer-ment, sour and cause the mischlef. This is the only secret of their success. This is the only secret of their success. Cathartic pills never have and never can cure indigestion and stomach troubles because they act entirely upon the bowels, whereas the whole trouble is really in the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken after meals, digest the food. That is all there is to it. Food not digested or half digested is poison as it creates as half digested is poison as it creates gas, acidity, headaches, palpitation of the heart loss of flesh and appetite, and many other troubles which are often called by some other name.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. Address Stu-art Co. for book on stomach diseases art Co. for book on stoma or ask your druggist for it.

CLIFF DWELLERS' CUSTOMS.

When They Lived, Where, and Their Peculiar Fads - About Mound-Builders and Mound Theories - Un to-Date Cliff Dwellers - Handsome Apaches - How They Fight-Modern Ideas Taken.

From the Post-Express. Osteologist Charles Ward was scrap-ing a bone of a man's leg industriously although to the mind of the reporter who had just entered it was as white as possible, as it was, and needed no further cleaning. "How do," said Mr. Ward, in reply to the reporter's greeting, and then began to glue a small bone to the big bone.

"Oh yes, we've got some new things," he said. "We always have something new. This is really quite interesting too." He arose, laid the big bone and the little bone carefully down and took the reporter into the back room which is filled with all sorts of bones from complete respectable skeletons to skulls. is filled with all sorts of bones from complete respectable skeletons to skulls and pieces of backbones and other debris from the human frame. On a shelf were lying five grinning skulls of a dirty rawhide color with yellow teeth sticking out at right angles. They were shivery looking specimens but Mr. Ward looked at them affectionately and took one up with caressing tenderness.

"Just look at this," said he as he handed the thing to the reporter. That skull contained the brain of a man long before Columbus was even dreamed of. The man was a cliff dweller, or as before Columbus was even dreamed of. The man was a cliff dweller, or as they are sometimes known, Pueblo Indians. Lived down in Arizona and around there, you know, where the canens of the rivers afford perpendicular walls and cliffs abound. These fellows liked to get a particularly inaccessible wall of rock and then hollow out a cave if they could not find one. After that they would take the debris of the rocks and build strange dwellings that looked like honey-combs stuck to the edge of the cliffs. These are yet to be seen in fine state of preservation in Arizona and New Mexico. are yet to be seen in fine state of preservation in Arizona and New Mexico. These cliff dwellings were particularly useful in case of sudden invasion, for then the cliff dwellers could climb up their rope ladders and draw them up after, sit in the edge of the walls and make sarcastic remarks concerning the invaders who raged uselessly 500 feet below. They could not hear the remarks but they knew that they were being made just the same."

Modern Cliff Dwellers. "There are no modern cliff dwellers, are there?" asked the reporter inno-

"Well, we don't have real cliff dwell-"Well, we don't have real cliff dwellers, but people live in flats and the average New York flat is a pretty good imitation of an ancient cliff dwelling modernized especially on the upper stories. Yes the cliff dwellers were indians," said Mr. Ward. "You can tell that by their skulls. They all had a habit of flattening their skulls behind. See this one?"

The skull looked as if it had been subjected to a great pressure behind where jected to a great pressure behind where the Causasian head rounds out, so that when the skull was held up with the side toward you it looked as if the back part had been sawed off. "What was that for?" asked the reporter. Same reason that women lace in their faists and stick things through their ears and do other things equally their faists and stick things through their ears and do other things equally sensible, style. Why, there is not a race on the face of the earth, civilized or not, which does not deform some part of the body. A physician was telling me the other day that in the whole course of his practice, and it has been a long course, he has seen but one perfect foot. So you see that the fad is universal and as old as the race."

"Did this flattening of the head interfere with the brain?"

"Probably not. You see that the dome of the skull is quite large, showing a well developed intellect. The flattening process was done when the cliff dweller was young and the skull and brain soft. The skull spread out at the side on account of the flattening behind, of course, but there was just about as much brain space. They were all more or less deaf, though."

He took up a Caucasian skull and showed the reporter the ear orifice which was about the size of a small silver half dime. Then he showed him the orifice in the cliff dweller's skull. It was a narrow silt. The compression of the skull imade that, and it made was a narrow slit. The compression of the skull made that, and it made them deaf, too. But, then, something must be sacrificed to style.

The Skull of a Mound-Builder. "Now, here's an interesting skull," he said, as he picked up a brown-grayish one which was full of holes and caved in at the top, with crumbled jaw benes. "This belonged to one of that strange race known as the mound builders, and may be a thousand years old. They were not as intellectual as the cliff dwellers, for their head had not as much space for the brain. They had a great deal of mathematical abilhad a great deal of mathematical abil-ity, though, and could make earth-works which are still the wonder of the nations. They were Indians, at least that seems to be the theory accepted newadays. They probably had char-acteristics different from the usual run of red men, but they still belonged to the same race. The reason that sci-entists think they are Indians is be-cause many works which are known entists think they are Indians is because many works which are known to be of Indian make bear characteristics identical with those of more ancient date attributed to the mound builders. I myself saw an Indian carthwork not far from here which looked exactly like a mound, but which was, nevertheless the work of New York Indians. "Now this," said he as he handed the reporter a well shaped skull, perfect in every detail and which looked very new by the side of the crumbling mound builder's, "this is the skull of an Apache squaw. She must have been unusually beautiful, for the skull is perfect. It looks like a Caucasian woman's skull and contained just exactly as much looks like a Caucasian woman's skull and contained just exactly as much brain and berhaps more than some of them. The Apaches are a very handsome race, and it a berson could have bronzed the face of a good looking Roman he would have made an Apache brave. Their women are as handsome, too. They are brave and their chiefs are no fools. Why in the late trouble with Geronimo many of the chiefs showed superior generalship to the United States commanders. You know an Indian's idea of bravery is far different from a white man's, and his ferent from a white man's, and his method of fighting is founded upon his idea of bravery. An Indian thinks that when the white soldiers get out and stand in front of a heavy fire they are fools to do it. The Indian is taught from his childhood to take advantage of every bit of shelter. And strange from his childhood to take advantage of every bit of shelter. And, strange to say, that idea is being followed in modern warfare. Soldlers nowadays do not form a heavy line of battle and stand out to receive the heavy fire of the enemy. They scatter in skirmish lines, lie down, get behind trees, and when they advance they do it by running stooped way over, lying down, then getting up again to gain another yard.
