ONLY ONE CONSOLATION

Three Republican Candidates for Assessors Elected.

MR. BAILEY'S NARROW MARGIN

He Was Pressed Very Close by Colonel Ripple—Mr. Boland Led His Ticket. Viaduct Prop. a Non Defeated by a Small Majority.

As stated in yesterday's Tribune the Democratic candidates for mayor, treasurer and controller were elected. The only consolation for the Republican candidates for assessors, and there is but little consolation in that, when it is considered the fact that the Democrats secured the victory on the three joint tickets. A gain of one vote made in the upper branch, which reduces the Republican majority to one, and in the lower branch the Democratic majority was increased from one to three.

The accompanying table shows the result by districts and in detail. Mr. Bailey's plurality was 15, Mr. Boland's 157, and Mr. Robinson's 871. A study of the figures shows over which candidates there was the greatest strife. For mayor, 15,233 votes were cast for the prohibition candidates.

Although the three Republican candidates for assessors were elected, the majorities of two of them were very small. Dawson, with 3,061 votes, led Bailey by the highest Democrat by over 1,900, but Fowler was elected by only 92 votes, and Fickus by the narrow margin of 71.

The completion and accuracy of the Tribune's election returns were commented upon favorably on all sides, yesterday. Both Republicans and Democrats joined in complimenting what was generally termed an extraordinary piece of work for a Scranton newspaper.

The Tribune's report was a little short of columns in length and besides presenting a particularly complete table of the vote on the city offices and viaduct continued a record of every vote cast in the city and Dunmore for every office even to the minority inspector in the most unimportant or most isolated districts. The Republican contained less than two columns of election news. The first edition did not contain a single line and the second edition contained only a few lines.

When the papers made their first appearance the streets yesterday morning they were bought up eagerly by those who had gotten out early and those who stayed out late. At Lockington street, where the Tribune is published, it was found that the papers were sold out in less than an hour.

Several of the most enthusiastic wanted to hire a band and have a parade but this idea was given up for something else. All kinds of suggestions were made for the streets and stealing all his brooms to setting fire to the restaurant were made but the enthusiasm waned out before anything rash was done.

That the public appreciated the Tribune's enterprise in presenting such complete election returns was demonstrated by the fact that the street sales were 2,500 larger than usual. Orders for copies of the paper were received at this office as late as 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Yesterday, from a business standpoint, was probably the dullist day since the holidays, although an exception was made in the case of the saloons, cigar stores and other places where men congregated and gave their many versions of how the election was lost and won. The retail and wholesale stores, banking institutions and other places of business were practically deserted by customers throughout the day.

Result in the Wards. The result in the wards of the city is substantially as outlined in yesterday's last edition of The Tribune. In the First ward, the Democrats, Ripple, Boland, and Robinson, were elected. In the Second ward—Common council, Patrick E. Gordon, D.; school controller, Patrick E. Gordon, D.; ward assessor, Thomas Shotten; constable, Bernard Davis.

Fifth ward—Select council, Richard H. Williams, R.; ward assessor, Thomas Williams; constable, Timothy Jones. Sixth ward—Common council, John E. Regan, D.; school controller, John M. Casey, D.; ward assessor, Daniel P. Mannix, D.; constable, Thomas J. Walsh.

Seventh ward—Select council, John E. Roche, D.; ward assessor, Patrick Roche; ward assessor, James Loftus. Eighth ward—Common council, John J. Flanagan, D.; school controller, Peter J. Worman, D.; ward assessor, John M. Rose; constable, Charles Q. Carman.

Ninth ward—Select council, C. E. Chittenden, R.; ward assessor, M. D. Hine; constable, George C. Wilson. Tenth ward—Common council, Edward W. Vanecko, R.; school controller, Jacob Schaffer, R.; ward assessor, John Christ, D.; constable, 154.

Thirteenth ward—Select council, George T. Ward, D.; ward assessor, George T. Bugden; constable, William S. Black. Fourteenth ward—Alderman, George F. Kellow, R.; common council, P. J.

THE QUAY ROOM.

From the Washington Post. Certain persons and newspapers have shown a disposition to treat Mr. Quay's personal aspirations with levity. We do not agree with them. As we see him, Mr. Quay is a man to be regarded seriously and respectfully in any capacity in which he may see fit to offer himself.

The executive chair has frequently been filled by men such as all the statesmen, anything that goes to make a statesman. It may in the future, we fear, be filled by many persons distinctly and conspicuously inferior to Mr. Quay.

There are various high qualities which no honest and intelligent observer of public events will deny to Mr. Quay. He is sensible, he is courageous, he is patriotic, he is not a hypocrite, he tells the truth, he keeps his promises, he acknowledges and lives up to his convictions. Mr. Quay is no demagogue, he is no humbug, he does not pretend to be what he is not, he is neither a fool nor a sneak. Those who have watched his course in the senate will bear his witness that he has never been found expounding any miscellaneous or silly cause; that he has declared himself frankly and boldly on every important question by which he was confronted; that he has invariably scorned to take refuge in evasion, equivocation, or silence. He makes no pretense of oratory, he has never tried to look like somebody else, he has not acted any one to believe that he is great, or suggested by word or act that the bulwarks of our personal liberties and our national morals depend upon him for their perpetuation. Mr. Quay is a man, unpretending and of people, not one set apart for special reverence or consecrated to some superhuman service, and he is quite free from the offense of thinking himself better and holier than his neighbors.

We know of no reason why Matthew Stanley Quay should not be mentioned, and respectfully mentioned, in connection with the present election. On the contrary, there are very many reasons why he should.

APPLAUDED TOO SOON.

From the Washington Post. An interesting illustration of the potency of the leadership, to put it mildly, which Mr. Reed exercised on the Republican side of the house yesterday was witnessed from the press gallery Thursday afternoon by an attentive audience. The speaker, Mr. Reed, was in the seat of honor, and the house was so packed that the speaker's voice was heard in every part of the gallery.

At this stage of the general lethargy it occurred to Mr. Reed that he needed the man from Maine with an eager, expectant air. Each time that Mr. Reed was moved to relax into a smile the faces of his admirers irradiated laughter.

A member of no particular consequence was expounding views on no consequence subject when the cry of "Passably Senator Stewart might have lent him an ear had that indefatigable pursuer of the soliding-Rothschilds-Wall-street speculator been at hand, but no one in the house was visibly carrying congressional courtesy to the point of listening to a paper, and a score of lesser Republicans slipped into the neighboring seats, their eyes focused on the man from Maine with an eager, expectant air.
